BOOK FIRST, CHAPTER FIRST

INTRODUCTION

I HAVE heard it said that almost any one who would go to work with a determination to succeed could trace the history of his ancestry for at least five generations with tolerable accuracy. In some cases this may be true, but its certainty is not true in all cases. There may be no difficulty in most instances in going back to our grandfathers, for they were dead before our time, their children or other relatives who were cotemporary with them can tell us something of his personal appearance, his manners, habits and peculiarities. But when we try to learn something of his ancestors, whose history is unwritten, then the difficulty thickens and we are content if we are able to get the merest glimpses of their career or even an unimportant incident in their life.

Even this is often difficult to accomplish, as all who lived in their day have passed away. In old countries the difficulty is not near so great as it is in a new country like this, where families have become so widely separated that in time they became entirely unknown to each other, and were as widely separated in feeling and they were by distance. It is a lamentable fact that in our family brothers do not know where each other are—all human experience and observation shows that long separation or communication leads to estrangement and forgetfulness, and finally to total indifference.

Young people rarely feel much interest in tracing their family history. It is only when the evening shadows begin to appear that they feel like trying to trace the long line of ancestry which has preceded them; how, when and where they lived, and what they did and when they died. It is unfortunate that this is the case, as sources of information which are available at one period of our lives are not so at another, and thus valuable data is forever lost. In tracing our history we have not indulged the hope that we could trace our ancestry back to the "Mayflower." We are content to know that the first of the Kagys to America came to enjoy the same religious liberty that the Pilgrim Fathers sought and found, and which was denied them in the land of their birth, and that he and those of his religious faith were more tolerant to those who differed with them than they—of them it can be truthfully said, "They left unstained what there they found, freedom to worship God." A large number of our people have adhered to the faith of their fathers, and we find representatives in the 6th generation. Some of our people have attained to great age, few, however, to great wealth. The great majority are well-to-do. Some, if poor, are very respectable; none as far as I have learned have been the pensioners of public charity, while others attained to eminence in the literary world and have acquired fame; others have blazoned their name in their country's annals and their deeds have engaged the historian's pen. The loftiness of character and benevolence of others has been told in story and song by abler pens than mine. In such a work as this one must depend largely upon others for the needed data. These have often been found conflicting and the only thing to do was to use the one deemed the most likely to be correct. I wish here to acknowledge my great indebtedness for valuable assistance to Mrs. Anna M. Wayland, of Mt. Jackson, Va., without whose aid the history of descendants of Henry Kagey would be far less complete. Next, to Joseph S. Barb, of Oakfield, Trumbull Co., Ohio, who deserves special mention; also to Benjamin F. Kagay, of Effingham, Ill., to whom I am much indebted for most of the history of Jacob Kagy, the 3d son of Rudolph, the 3d emigrant.

Dr. Martin Kagy, of Somerset, Ohio, also contributed valuable data, and Jos. G. Keagy, of Hanover, York Co., Pa., of his branch of the family; also Rev. Peter Keagy, of Woodbury, deserves special mention. The thanks of the entire fraternity are due to L. M. Kagy, of Salem, Ill., the efficient secretary of the Kagy Biographical Society, for his untiring zeal in the cause and his generous assistance. There are others whom we would wish to mention, but space forbids. To all who have lent their aid thanks are due and are cheerfully given. "Chronology is the soul of history," and much time and effort has been expended to obtain dates of occurrences noticed and recorded in this work. This has not always been possible and in some instances impossible by reason of the destruction of family records by fire and flood and losses in other ways. Great difficulty has been experienced in tracing the history of the daughters of "ye ancient sires." The change of name and location by removal to distant States, the indifference and sometimes the complete estrangement has resulted in the loss of whole family records, and hence, much to our regret, the history of daughters is less complete than that of the sons.

All effort to bestow fulsome praise has been studiously avoided and only given where it was known to be justly merited. It is impossible for a single individual to know the worth and merit of so vast a relationship and if he could, it would exceed the limit of this work to chronicle it. Information of a more general interest that was sought, and on which much labor was spent, does not appear, because unattainable. That which we have given is believed to be authentic. I am informed that the Kagys have a printed history in Switzerland. This is the first attempt to write a family history in this country. I most sincerely wish the task had fallen into abler hands than mine—fate seemed to decree that I should do it. Perhaps a hundred years hence a "Bosswell" may arise among us and rewrite our history in better form.

"Deal gently with us, ye who read !

Our largest hope is unfulfilled ;

The promise still outruns the deed ;

The Tower, but not the Spire, we build.

Our whitest pearl we never find ;

Our ripest fruit we never reach ;

The flowering moments of the mind

Lose half their petals in our speech."

—O. W. Holmes.

PREFACE

THERE are several methods employed in presenting a family history, and after an examination of them, the one herein employed is thought to be the best and as most likely not to lead to confusion.

Beginning with the first emigrant, the eldest of the family will be given first, when it is known, then the next eldest and so on to the end of the list. This will be followed by a record of the births, marriages and deaths of the children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren down to the present day in order of births, completing the entire list of his or her descendants. Then the next eldest will follow in like manner and will be designated as the 2d son or daughter as the case may be. In several instances, however, the records came to me in irregular order, and appear in this way for want of time to rewrite it. As will be seen in these pages, where exact dates are not known the word about is used preceding the date given.

“The fathers sleep, but men remain
As true, and wise, and brave as they,
Why count the loss without the gain?
The best is that we have to-day.”

“The day will come when men shall know
That goodness only can be great;
That no man can be mean and low
Whose nobleness is his estate.”

IN DEDICATION

Where the hills of Pennsylvania
Cluster round the valleys fair,
And the vales of Old Virginia
In the sylvan glories share,
There are those of kindred spirit,
Kinsmen by a bond of blood,
And forever bound in friendship—
Everlasting brotherhood.

Southward with the rolling rivers,
Westward o'er the smiling plain
Where the golden spear-paint quivers
Through the ranks of waving grain,
They have followed love or duty,—
Duty to the loved and dear,
Till in freedom's land of beauty
They are dwelling far and near.

Truth and right, to each a treasure,
Guard the heart and guide the hand;
For they own with pride and pleasure
Alpine-crowned Switzerland
As the birth-place of their fathers;
And they heed its teachings well,—
Death to tyrants, love for brothers,—
Living themes of deathless Tell.

Not on fields aflame and gory,
In the battle's wild array,
Have they sought from fame a story
Blazoned on her banners gay;
But within the halls of learning,
Graven with the scholar's pen,
You may read a record burning
With the acts of noble men.

And among the sad and lowly,
Cherished dear in many a heart,
Live the words and deeds so holy
That have proved the healer's art.

So to these we bring a tribute,
And we dedicate the same
As an honor roll of ages
To the dear old Kagy name.

By JOHN WALTER WAYLAND, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anna M.
Kagey Wayland, Bridgewater, Va.

SECOND PREFACE

SOME twenty-three years ago the writer of this biography started out to learn, if possible, something of his earthly origin and here I wish to say that little did I think I had undertaken so vast a task as this has proven to be.

In place of finding a few relatives I have discovered a vast relationship, widely scattered over all the States and Territories of this great country and have traced them back through seven generations into that historic country, where the first and oldest Republic exists to-day—"Switzerland." Not only the descendants of one emigration, but the descendants of five* emigrations have been tracked and followed, the trail of which has sometimes been lost for years to be found again and followed into the dim and mouldy past, only to repeat again and again a like experience, and final success. I most sincerely wish my self-imposed task had fallen to the lot of some one who possessed the ability to prepare this biography in such shape as the large and highly respectable relationship, which it attempts to record, so richly merits. A work of this kind requires far more time than its author could possibly give it, though ever so willing, and after years of weary research and correspondence that taxed the author's time to the uttermost and all has been learned that possibly ever can be, yet there is doubtless much that would be interesting that is forever lost. It was the author's desire to present a record of the date of birth and marriage and death, occupation or calling of every one who bore the name. This it has been impossible to do in every instance. For these and all other omissions and imperfections I must beg the kind indulgence of a host of friends and kinsfolk, who are impatiently asking "When will this history be published?"

Before giving the story of the origin of the Kägi name the next question of interest is, whereabouts in that historic land do we first find the progenitors of the Kägi name. From several letters written by Jacob Kägi Kägi, Ur. Kägi and Thos. Kägi Kägi, of Ruppen near Wyla Canton Zurich, we learn that in that place and vicinity within a radius of three miles there are thirty-five or more families of the Kägi name and it is an accepted fact among the Kägis there that the name had its origin in Canton Zurich, where they are most numerous to-day, although they are to be found in every Canton (county) in Switzerland. Some are engaged in farming and in the various industrial trades; quite a number are engaged in knitting various articles of wearing apparel, using American-made knitting machines, most of the products of which are sent to America. All the honored professions or callings are represented, such as merchants, school teachers, ministers, etc., and are almost universally well informed and of decided literary tastes and decision of character and also of a humorous and lively disposition, fond of society and desire to entertain their friends. In general they are above medium stature, strong of limb and constitution, some of them have attained to nearly the century mark in age. In religious faith the greater portion belong to the Reformed Church, but in Switzerland as in America every Protestant society has the name in its list of members. Led by interest or impelled by necessity they have gone out from the ancestral home into every civilized land and country on the globe. The writer of this history has been informed that in feudal times a Kägi built a castle in Scotland, which if true, would indicate a greater antiquity for the name than has been supposed.

On the following page we present a picture of Zurich, the metropolis of Switzerland, taken from the Lake Zurich, a photo of which has been obtained after much effort and expense. Zurich is a beautiful city of 150,000 population and lies on the lake of the same name and at the point where the River Limmat starts its course. The city extends from the heights of Zurichberg to the base of the steep ridge called the Uto. Its importance is partly owing to its situation at the foot of the Alps and 1,345 feet above sea level. It is also on the ancient commercial highway leading from the heart of Lombardy across the mountains of Rhaetia and along the various lakes and rivers into Germany. The walks and drives through the suburbs are fine, the woods and paths are well kept and the variety of scenery beautiful. One of the principal hotels, Baur-au-lac, or "Bower by the Lake," is located facing the lake with a magnificent garden of walks, trees and shrubbery in front extending to the lake. At night, when the houses and gardens shine with hundreds of lights, and the city part of the lakefront glows with the same, the scene is like that of fairyland. There are many interesting points along the lake, including Au and Ufenau, which Conrad Meyer has so poetically woven in his beautiful song of "Hutton's Last Days." The attractions of Zurich are noble churches with ancient history attached. The town library of 130,000 volumes, the Antiquarian Museum, the town hall, the Swiss National Museum, schools, universities and other public buildings. The history* of Switzerland as a nation properly begins in 1231, but not until 1291 was the "League of Perpetual Allegiance" formed and that grand confederation, the Swiss Republic, which has existed for over 600 years the wonder of an admiring world; now, as then, the model for future republics, it would be absurd to suppose that the new Republic of 1291, represented as truly a democratic form of government as it does to-day; a long period of time elapsed during which a high-spirited people were engaged in perfecting and maintaining it against powerful enemies, often by force of arms, as at the battle of Morgauten, in 1315; Laupen in 1339; Sempach in 1386, where 1,500 Swiss defeated 6,000 Austrians, and at Naefels, where 600 Swiss defeated 6,000 Austrians, the latter losing 1,700 men, and the former 54. A seven years' peace followed in 1389. This peace was prolonged for twenty years, and afterward, in 1412, for fifty years. Thus they became a nation long before this country was known to exist. For many reasons the history of Switzerland is peculiarly interesting to English-speaking people. This "playground of Europe" is every year visited by large numbers of British and Americans. Then to the Anglo-Saxon race, the grand spectacle of a handful of freemen nobly struggling for and maintaining their freedom, often amidst enormous difficulties, and against appalling odds, cannot but be heart-stirring. To the citizen of the great American Republic a study of the constitution of the little European Republic should bring both interest and profit—a constitution resembling in many points that of his own country. And few readers, of whatever nationality, can, we think, peruse their history without a feeling of admiration for a gallant people who have fought against oppression as the Swiss have fought, who have loved freedom as they have loved it, and who have performed the well-nigh incredible feats of arms the Switzers have performed. A study of the Constitutional History of the Swiss Confederation can hardly be overestimated.

Very few histories in the English language go back beyond the year 1291 A. D., the date of the "Swiss League," and of course of Switzerland as a nation cannot boast of an earlier origin. But some account of the previous history of the men who founded the "League," cannot fail to be interesting. For a country which has been occupied at different periods by Lakemen, Helvetians and Romans, where Alamanni, Burgundians, and Franks have played their parts, where Charlemagne lived and ruled, and Charles the Bold fought; where the great families of the Zaerings, the Kyburgs, and Savoy struggled; and whence the mighty house of Habsburg sprang (and domineered)—all this before 1291. A country with such a story to tell of its earlier times, can not fail to interest some of us at least. The historian has endeavored to show men differing in race, in language, in creed, and in mode of life, combined to resist the common enemy and to build up the compact little State we now see playing its part on the European stage. Says the historian in his history of the "Swiss Confederation:" Swiss history teaches us, all the way through, that "Swiss liberty was won by a close union of many small States, and will be best preserved by the same means, and not by obliterating all local peculiarities, nowhere so striking, nowhere so historically important as in Switzerland. Our wonder and admiration increases at the vast influence of the Little Republic, when we remember that the total area of its twenty-two Cantons is less than 16,000 square miles and a population of only 3,000,000. No other nation in the world of equal area and population has ever wielded so much influence for good as has this little Republic. Of men of intellect, of talent, of artistic, scientific or literary skill Switzerland has produced many, and sheltered many more. The numerous academical, literary, scientific and musical institutions, tell the story of her advancement. Amongst the numberless names of her men of science, now or lately living, may be mentioned Aggassiz, Desor, De-la Rive, Heer, Studer and Dr. Ferdinand Keller, the discoverer of the Lake dwellings. In literature a host of names present themselves, among them Monnier, Meyer and Gottfried Keller, who has been called the German Shakespeare. Amongst the painters are Calaine, Diday, Girardet, Vantier and Bocklin, and of sculptors Vela and Lautz. Gustave Weber, Joachim Raff and Baumgartner are world-wide known musical composers.

In recent years archeologists all over the world have been greatly interested in the discovery of the Swiss lake settlements. Every schoolboy has heard of the wonderful discoveries made on the shores of the beautiful Swiss lakes during the last few years. A brief account of what was found and how it was found on the lake shores will not be out of place here.

In the winter of 1853, the waters of Lake Zurich sank so low that a wide stretch of mud was laid bare along the shores. The people of Meilen, a large village some twelve miles from Zurich, took advantage of this unusual state of things, to effect certain improvements, and during the operations the workmen's tools struck against some obstacles which proved to be great wooded props or piles. These piles, the tops of which were but a few inches below the surface of the mud, were found to be planted in rows and squares, and the number of them seemed to be enormous. Further investigation discovered large numbers of bones, antlers, weapons, implements of various kinds and what not. Dr. Ferdinand Keller, the antiquarian, was sent from Zurich to examine the spot, and he pronounced it to be a lake settlement, probably of some ancient Celtic tribe. Many marks of a prehistoric occupation had previously been found, but hitherto no traces of dwellings. Dr. Keller called these early settlers "Pile-builders," from their peculiar mode of building their houses. During the course of the last thirty years, over two hundred of these aquatic villages have been discovered on the shores of the lakes of Constance, Geneva, Zurich, Neuchatel, Bienne, Morat and other smaller lakes, and on certain rivers and swampy spots which had once been lakes or quasi-lakes.

These lake dwellings are mostly placed on piles driven some ten feet into the bed of the lake, and as many as thirty or forty thousand of these piles have been found in a single settlement. The houses themselves were made of hurdle work, and thatched with straw or rushes. Layers of wattles and clay alternating formed the floors, and the walls seem to have been rendered more weather-proof by a covering of clay or else of bullrushes or straw. A railing of wickerwork ran round each hut, partly, no doubt, to keep the wash of the lake and partly as a protection to the children. Light bridges or gangways, easily moved, connected the huts with each other and with the shore. Each house contained two rooms, at least, and some of the dwellings measured as much as twenty-seven feet by twenty-two feet. Hearthstones blackened by fire often remain to show where the kitchens had been. Mats of bast, straw and reeds abound in the settlements, and show that the Lake-men had their notions of cosiness and comfort. Large crescent-shaped talismans, carved on one side, were hung over the entrances to the huts (just as we to-day find over the doors in many houses a real or paper-made horseshoe), showing pretty clearly that then as now the Moon goddess was worshipped.

The prehistoric collections in the public museums at Zurich, Berne, Bienne, Neuchatel and Geneva, not to speak of private collections, are very extensive and very fine, containing tools, handsome weapons, knives of most exquisite shape and carving, woman's ornaments, some of them of the most elegant kind. A "Lady of the Lake" in full dress would seem to have made an imposing show. An undergarment of fine linen was girded at the waist by a broad belt of inlaid or embossed bronze work. Over the shoulders was thrown a woolen cloak fastened with bronze clasps or pins, whilst neck, arms and ankles were decked with a great many trinkets—necklaces, anklets, bracelets rings, spangles, and so forth.

The whole was set off by a diadem of long pins with large heads beautifully chiseled and inlaid with beads of metal or glass, these pins being stuck through a sort of leathern fillet which bound up the hair. So beautiful are some of these trinkets, that imitations of them in gold are in request by the ladies of to-day.

One of the most extensive lake colonies in Switzerland is situated in and spread over the vast marshes of Robenhausen (Zurich), which once formed part of Lake Pfaffikon. The visitor who is not deterred by the inconvenience of a descent into the damp and muddy pit, where excavations are still being carried on, finds himself facing three successive settlements, one above another, and all belonging to the remote Stone Age. Between the successive settlements are layers of turf, some three feet thick, the growth of many centuries. The turf itself is covered by a stratum of sticky matter four inches thick. In this are numbers of relics embedded, both destructible and indestructible objects being perfectly well preserved, the former kept from decay through having been charred by fire. There has been discovered and analyzed remains of more than a hundred different kinds of plants. Grains, and even whole ears of wheat and barley, seeds of strawberries and raspberries, dried apples, textile fabrics, implements, hatchets of nephrite—this mineral and the oriental cereals show clearly enough that the Lakemen traded with the East, though no doubt through the the Mediterranean peoples. The scholar's mind is at once carried back to the account given by Herodotus of Thrakian Lake dwellers. The people of this tribe, he tells us, built their houses over the water, so as to gain facilities for fishing. They used to let down baskets through trap doors in the floors of their huts and these baskets rapidly filled with all kinds of fish that had gathered around, tempted by the dropping of food from the rooms overhead.

With regard to the date when the immigration of the Lakemen began the Savants are hopelessly at variance. Nor do they agree any better as to the dates of the Stone and Bronze epochs, into which the history of the lake settlements divides itself. But as in some of the marshy stations these two epochs reach on to the age of iron, it is assumed by many authorities that the Lake dwellers lived on to historical times. This is particularly shown in the alluvial soil and marshes between the lakes of Neuchatel and Bienne, where settlements belonging to the Stone, Bronze and Iron ages are found ranged one above another in chronological order. In the topmost stratum or colony the Lakemen's wares are found mingling with iron and bronze objects of Helvetian and Roman make, a fact sufficient to show that the Lake dwellers associated with historical peoples. It would be useless as well as tedious, to set forth at length all the theories prevailing as to the origin and age of the Lake dwellings. Some authorities place the commencement of the Stone period at six thousand, and others at three thousand years before the Christian Era. As to the age of Bronze, the year 1100-1000 B. C. is about as near as can be arrived at. Eminent antiquarians say that the time of Homer, the Greek Age of Bronze, was contemporary with the Bronze epoch of the Lakemen. The Lake period would seem to have drawn to a close about 600-700 B. C., when the Age of Bronze was superseded by that of Iron.

The most reliable authorities on the subject inform us that about the time last above named the Lakemen left their watery settlements, and began to fix their habitations on terra firma. Various tombs found on land would bear witness to this change. When these people had once come on shore to live they would be gradually absorbed into neighboring and succeeding races and most likely into the Helvetian peoples. Thus they have their part, however small it may be, in the history of the Swiss people, and nation. The Pile builders, or Lakemen, are not now thought to be of Celtic origin, but to some previous race whose history is as completely lost to us as is that of the Mound builders of the Mississippi Valley in our own country, many of which are to be found in Ohio.

The history of the country often includes the history of many peoples, for history is but the record of a stage on which nations and peoples figure, playing their parts and making their exits, others stepping into their places. And so the Swiss soil has been trodden by many possessors—Celts, Rhatians, Alamanni, Burgundians, Franks.

These have all made their mark upon, and contributed to the history of the Swiss Nation. Dim are the glimpses we catch of the early condition of the Helvetians, but the mist that enshrouds this ancient people clears, though slowly, at the end of the second century before Christ, when they came into close contact with the Romans, who conquered them and who chronicled their deeds. The Helvetians themselves, though not ignorant of the art of writing, were far too much occupied in warfare to be annalists. The form of religion at this time most common to all the tribes was Druidical worship. Invested with powers, civil and spiritual, the priesthood held absolute sway over the superstitious tribe, and professing all the sciences of the age—medicine, astrology, soothsaying, necromancy—they had taken into their hands the education of the young. The common people were mere blind devotees, and rendered unquestioning obedience to the decrees of the Druids. Human sacrifice was one of the most cruel and revolting pictures of the Druidical religion.

It would be impossible in this paper to set forth a tithe of what changes took place in the condition of these people from the time of their conquest by Caesar up to the time of the Reformation. Wars, with all their desolating consequences, feuds within and foes without, make up the greater part of her history.

The accounts of the introduction of Christianity into Switzerland are mostly legendary, yet it is generally believed that it was not the work of missionaries. It is more likely that the new faith came to the land as part and parcel of the Roman culture, brought by the Roman soldiers quartered among them. At first the Roman authorities looked upon Christians as State rebels and fierce persecutions followed. The oldest Christian legend of this country tells of such a conflict between the State officials and the Christians, and no doubt contains some admixture of truth, as many of these stories do. A legion levied at Thebes, in Egypt, was sent to Cologne to take the place of troops required to quell a rising in Britain. Coming to the Valais, they were required by the Emperor, Maximian, to sacrifice to the heathen gods (A. D. 290), but being mostly Christians they refused, and were massacred with their chief, Mauritius. Tradition says that Charlemagne, in later days, erected a minster on their burial spot. Thus, as ever, the blood of martyrs became the seed of the church.

The fifth century was remarkable for what may be called the dislocation of the peoples of Europe, the immigrations of the Germans into the Roman Empire, and mightiest movement of all, the irruption of the Huns under their terrible King Attila, the "Scourge of God." These masses of barbarians burst into Europe, stayed for a while in Hungary, but soon rolled towards the West, dislodging all the peoples with whom they came in contact. Marching to the Rhine, they drove the Burgundians from their settlements, and entered Gaul to found a new kingdom. But the doom of the Huns was at hand. Actius, the Roman general and the last defender of the Empire, defeated them, A. D. 451, in a gigantic battle in the Champagne country. It is said the river ran red with the blood of 300,000 men slain. But the Roman Empire was tottering, the time had come for her to leave the stage of history. The great German Nation was forming, the petty tribes and clans gradually formed alliances with each other for greater security, and, dropping their ancient names, took collective ones more familiar to our ears—Saxons, Franks, Burgundians, Bavarians and Alamanni. Of these, the Alamanni and Burgundians, are those from whom the Swiss are descended, and thus Switzerland, like England, has to look back to Germany as its ancestral home.

The name Alamanni is said to be derived from Alah, a temple grove, and implies a combination of various tribes. "The People of the divine grove." Not even so vast a horde of Asiatics as overrun their land could obliterate the Alamanni, who grafted as a true German people, retained their old language, institutions and mode of living.

The Alamanni did not at once develop into a civilized and cultivated people, but retained their fondness for war and hunting, and characteristics of their ancient life.

Their grand and majestic woods had stamped themselves on the intrepid, dauntless spirits; for the mighty aspects of nature—forest, mountain, sea—play their part in moulding the character of a nation.

It would be interesting to follow up the history of this people to the close of the life of Charlemagne. His court was a great intellectual center, whence enlightenment spread to every part of his domains.

Charlemagne was great as a general, as a statesman, as a politician. His humanity and other virtues secured for him the noble title of "Father of Europe." A brilliant figure in a benighted age, which shed its light on after times. Time and space forbid us enumerating the changes which took place after the great Emperor died. Bloody conflicts followed that split the empire in three pieces. After a time the people began again the struggle for national independence and separate rule, and thence came the restoration of the kingdom of Burgundy and the duchy of Alamanni, or Swabia, under the rule of a renowned nobleman, Rudolf, at whose death in 912 his crown passed to his son, Rudolf the Second. The memory of this good king is almost eclipsed by the glory of his wife, the famous "Spinning Queen," and her wisdom and ministry among the poor. After the death of Rudolph the Second the dynasty split into two branches; the heads being, respectively, Albrecht the Wise and Rudolph the Silent. Albrecht, it is said, died whilst engaged in one of the crusades in the attempt to wrest the Holy Land from the infidels. His estates passed to his only surviving son, Rudolph of Habsburg. This man within the space of thirty years made his family one of the mightiest in the empire, and brings us up to the time of the formation of the confederation of the three cantons, Unterwalden, Schwyz and Uri, which eventually grew to eight, then thirteen, and to-day numbers twenty-two cantons—known in history as the Swiss Republic.

It is not necessary to recite here the part that Switzerland took in the Reformation in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. Foremost in learning and wisdom among the many great names that adorn the pages of history stands that of Ulrich Swingli; an enthusiastic scholar, a gifted preacher, a zealous patriot and a remarkably able politician, he devoted his life to the work of rescuing his people and country from their moral decline. He fell gloriously at the battle of Kappel, and sealed with his life his devotion to the cause of truth. But Zwingli is not the only name that stands out in bold relief as champions in the cause of truth and right in that eventful period. A host of names loom up before me. We see in Switzerland a nation which once played a conspicuous part in European military affairs, but which has now become a land of peace, whose neutrality the Powers vouchsafed at the Vienna congress. In the exceptional position she holds she deems it part of her mission of peace to promote the general welfare of the world so far as lies in her power. Most important international institutions owe their origin, or at least their successful establishment to Switzerland. She started the Geneva Convention, which has for its object the mitigation of the horrors of war; and every European nation was represented in it. The right to offer an asylum in time of war she considers one of her most precious privileges. The Revolution of 1848 brought to Swiss territory fugitives from all parts of Europe; as many as ten thousand fled from the grand duchy of Baden into Switzerland. Many distinguished men who would have met death, or lingered in prisons, found there a safe retreat.

From the earliest times its peoples have been particularly interesting—from its pre-historic lakemen with their unique series of settlements, down through successive nationalities of Helvetians and Romans, Alamanni and Burgundians, to the modern French, Germans and Italians. Switzerland has bred or has been closely connected with some of the proudest ruling families in European history—Habsburgs, and Zearings, Carolingians and Burgundians, Hohenstaufens and Savoy.

Some of the most glorious victories recorded in history have been gained by the little Swiss Nation in defense of their beloved fatherland; the fame of Morgarten, Sempach, Grandson and Morat is not likely to die out while European civilization lasts. Constitutionally the history of Switzerland is of surpassing interest. Step by step we have seen a handful of gallant people free themselves from oppression by emperor or duke, by prince or lord, by prelate or cloister. Inch by inch the people at large have gained their political rights from foreign overlords or from native aristocracies.

We have seen how a tiny confederation of three petty States has grown into a league of eight, and then of thirteen independent districts, and how this has developed into the federal State of twenty-two cantons of our own day. Lastly, some of the institutions of the country, notably the Initiative and the Referendum, are well nigh unique of their kind, and certainly are of the greatest interest to the student of political history and development; whilst Switzerland's noble efforts for the amelioration and benefit of mankind at large cannot but command our admiration. I am proud that I am descended from the Swiss people, on both the paternal and maternal side, and if this crude and imperfect sketch of the Swiss people will incite in you a similar pride the object of its author will have been attained.

It may not be a great virtue, and certainly is not a fault, in any possessing a desire to know something of their earthly origin. We are among those who believe that any who care not about their origin, care little as to anything higher.

Names of persons have their origin in many ways, and the name of Kägy is no exception.

It is not known how long ago in the dim vista of the past since the name originated, but certain it is that it is of Swiss origin, and its original orthography is Kägi. It has recently been learned from one Jacob Kägi, of Ruppen, in Canton Zurich, Switzerland, that the name originated in this wise: "Many, many years ago a Mr. Kaller fell in love with and married a Miss Gibler. Their union was blessed with a son. From some cause or other, after a time they disagreed and finally separated, and the lady became so bitter toward her husband that she would not allow her child to bear his father's name. The matter was finally decided in the courts, and the decision was, that the child should bear a name composed of two letters from the father's name, Ka(ller), and the two first letters from the mother's, Gi(bler); so the name Kagi, as it is yet written in Switzerland, was started." One thing is certain, whether the above legend be true or not, the name has been in existence for three hundred years, and has met with many changes in its orthography, to wit: Käga, Kägy, Kägay, Kägey, Keagy, Keagey, Kegie, and sometimes Cagey. It is but natural to ask, Why did the ancestor of the Kägi's leave the land of his birth, the graves of his sires, "Their hearths and homes, where soft affection dwells?" Was it the love of fame, the desire of conquest, or greed for gain? that induced them to leave their homes and all that the heart holds most dear, and brave the perils of an ocean voyage; at that distant day no sinecure, you may be assured. No! a higher and nobler object was his aim.

The unsettled state of affairs in Europe during the last decade of the seventeenth century was an eventful period. The religious complexion of the country was frequently determined or influenced by the character of the rulers—as they changed it was changed. To these changes it was impossible for the Swiss and Germans to conform. Frederick II., elector Palatine, embraced the Lutheran faith; Frederick III. became a Catholic; Lodovic V. restored the Lutheran Church; his son and successor was a Calvinist. These in their turn protected some, others they did not. The last Prince, son of Lodovic, was succeeded by a Catholic family, during whose reign it was the lot of the Protestants to be unkindly oppressed. Besides these unpropitious changes and being subjects of alarm and persecution, the Germans occupied the unenviable position of living between two powerful belligerent rivals. War seemed to be the pasttime of these then ruling Princes of those countries. In the year 1622 Count Tilly, the Imperial General, took Heidelberg and put five hundred of the inhabitants to the sword. In 1634, Louis XIV. entered the same city and destroyed many of the inhabitants.

In 1688 Heidelberg was taken the second time by the French, who laid the inhabitants under oppressive contributions; after which, at the approach of the imperial army, they blew up the citadel and reduced the town to ashes. It soon rose again upon its cinders, and again it was taken by a French army, who laid it a second time into ashes in 1693. The inhabitants, men, women and children, about 1,500, stripped of all, were forced to flee in consternation to the fields by night. Once more on the retreat of the French army were the inhabitants prevailed upon to rebuild the city, unconscious, however, of the treachery of a perfidious elector, who had sacredly promised them liberty of conscience, "Heaven's choicest boon," and exemption from taxes for thirty years. After some time the elector, whose creed it appears embraced the essential ingredients, "Promises made to heretics should not be redeemed," harrassed his duped subjects, with relentless persecution. The French army having crossed the Rhine, the distressed Palatines, persecuted by their heartless Prince, plundered by a foreign enemy, fled to escape from death, and about six thousand of them for protection to England in consequence of encouragement received by proclamation from Queen Anne.

Prior to the issuing of Queen Anne's proclamation and consequent upon the Revocation of the celebrated Edict of Nantes issued by Henry the Fourth in 1598, and which secured liberty of conscience to Protestants, and was revoked October 23, 1685, by Louis XIV., a man whose name was execrated over a large part of Europe, there arose one of the most terrible persecutions ever seen in France. History records the fact that upwards of five hundred thousand Huguenots made their escape into Switzerland, Germany, Holland, England and America.

The hydra-headed monster, religious bigotry, is never satisfied, and religious intolerance has not been confined to any particular country or time.

About this time the Mennonites were heartlessly persecuted by the Calvinists in Switzerland, and were driven into various countries; some to Strasburg, others to Holland, and some to America, where they were safe from their priestly persecutors. Those who emigrated to Pennsylvania had fled from the cantons of Zurich, Bern, Shaffhausen, Switzerland, to Alsace, above Strasburg, where they remained some time, thence they came to the then Province of Pennsylvania.

The offense of which they were guilty and which brought down upon them so much suffering and persecution was their non-conformity to the prevailing religion. They also did, as they now do, openly discard the doctrine of self-defense and violent resistance. They have been and are still opposed to war; they believe it comports illy with the Christian profession to fight with carnal weapons.

They have always been peaceable and domestic in their habits. The descendants of the Puritans boast that their ancestors fled from the face of their persecutors, willing to encounter "perils in the wilderness and perils by the heathen" rather than be deprived by the ruthless persecutor of the free exercise of their religion.

The descendants of the Swiss Mennonites who, amid hardships and trials, made the first settlements among the tawny sons of the forest in the southeastern part of Lancaster county, can lay claim to more. Their ancestors did not seek for themselves and theirs only, the unmolested exercise of faith and the practice of worship; but they in turn did not persecute others who differed from them in religious opinion. They plead for universal toleration, and their practice confirmed it.

"They left unstained what there they found Freedom to worship God!"

It was about the year 1706 or 7, when a number of the persecuted Swiss Mennonites went to England, and made a particular agreement with the Honorable Proprietor, William

Penn, at London, for lands to be taken up in his new colony. A Swiss company was organized to emigrate to America and settle in the wilderness, but who the projector of it was we have not been able to learn. The pioneers were Hans Meylin, his sons Martin and John, Hans Herr, John Rudolph Bundely, Martin Kendig, Jacob Miller, Martin Oberholtz, Hans Funk, Michael Oberholtz, Wendel Bowman, and others, who came to Conestoga in 1709; selected a tract of ten thousand acres of land on the north side of Pequa creek, and shortly afterward procured a warrant for the same. It is dated October 10, 1710; the land was surveyed and the warrant recorded on the 23d of the same month. This came to be known as the "Swiss Settlement." The price to be paid for the above 10,000 acres was five hundred pounds sterling money. Having erected temporary shelters to answer their wants, some set about it and put up dwellings of more durability. Martin Kendig built one of hewed walnut logs on his tract, which withstood the storms and rain, the gnawing tooth of time, for one hundred and ten years, and would have stood generations longer, but was removed and a more elegant one took its place. Martin Kendig appears to have been one of the most active and energetic men in the Swiss colony. After they had become fairly seated they thought of their old homes, their country and friends. "They remembered them that were in bonds as bound with them and which suffered adversity," and ere the earth began to yield a return in "kindly fruits" to their labors, consultations were held and measures devised to send some one back to the "Vaterland," to bring the residue of some of their families; also their kindred and brothers in a land of trouble and oppression to their new home; into a land where peace reigned and the comforts of life could not fail. A council of the whole society was called, at which their venerable pastor, Hans Herr, presided, and after fraternal interchange of sentiment, much reflection and consultation, lots were cast in conformity to the customs of the Mennonites, to decide who should return to Europe for the families left behind and others. The lot fell upon Hans Herr, who had left five sons in the old country. This decision was agreeable to his own mind, but to his friends and charge it was unacceptable; to be separated, "Von ihrem prediger," from their preacher, could be borne with reluctance and heaviness of heart only. They were all too ardently attached to him to cheerfully acquiesce in this determination; reluctantly they consented to his departure, after much anxiety manifested on account of this unexpected call of their pastor from them. Their sorrows were alleviated by a proposal made on the part of Martin Kendig, that if approved he would take Hans Herr's place. This was cordially assented to by all. Without unnecessary delay, Martin, the devoted friend of the colony, made ready, went to Philadelphia, and there embarked for Europe; after a prosperous voyage of five or six weeks he reached the home of his friends, where he was received with apostolic greetings and salutations of joy.

Having spent some time in preliminary arrangements, he and a company of Swiss and some Germans, bade a lasting adieu to their old homes and dissolved the tender ties of friendship with those whom they left. With his company, consisting of the residue of some of those in America and others, he returned to the new home, where they were all cordially embraced by their fathers and friends.

With this accession, the settlement was considerably augmented, and numbered about thirty families. Though they lived in the midst of the Mingo or Conestoga, Pequa and Shawanese Indians, they were nevertheless safely seated and had nothing to fear from the Indians, with whom they mingled in fishing and hunting, and who were exceedingly hospitable and civil to the whites; the latter often shared with the Indians the shelter of their cabins in inclement weather. For seventy-five years these humble Christians and their children lived in unbroken friendship with these sons of the forest, proving conclusively that in the bosom of these children of nature there exists the same principles of humanity, love and kindness, that is found in the more enlightened races of men; and had after generations pursued the same kind policy toward the Indians as did these pious followers of that noble Christian reformer, Menno Simon, the bloody chapters that blacken the history of our country would never need to have been written.

Settlements having now been fairly made amidst the Indians, the hardships that first presented themselves in the beginning of the settlement began to vanish, or were surmounted. Their success, the glowing accounts given by them of the scenery of the country about them, the fertility of the soil, the abundance of the game in the forest around them, the quantity and delicacy of the fish which the creeks and rivers yielded, but above all the kind and amicable relationship they cultivated and maintained with their Indian neighbors, all conspired to make them the objects of attention and one of the points whither emigration tended in an increasing stream.

In the year 1715, the settlement was increased by the arrival of the following persons from the old country who had heard Martin Kendig's glowing description of the new home. Among these were Hans Mayer, Hans Kägy, Christian Hershey, Hans Pupather, Michael Shank, Peter Leman, Melchoir Brenneman, Henry Funk, Ulrich Howry, Michael Miller, Jacob Boehm, Theodorus Eby and others.* The descendants of the above-named persons are scattered all over the States, and are among the most respectable and wealthy citizens of Lancaster and adjoining counties in Pennsylvania. In after years some of the above-named persons and their descendants became allied to the Kägy's by blood and marriage, as will be shown later on.

In tracing back to discover who our fathers were, the author deems it of no less moment to know who our mothers were, because to our mothers is largely due all the virtues that adorn human character. It is confidently believed that Hans Kägy, whose full name was John Rudolph Kägy, was the first one of the name in America, and also that he was unmarried at the time of his arrival here; and that in a year or two after his arrival he married a daughter (Rebecca) of James Patterson.

In order to make this record plain it will be necessary to say something of the fellow-passenger over the sea with Hans Kägy, viz: Jacob Boehm. My authority for the following statement is to be found in the "Reminiscences of Rev. Henry

* See Rupp's History of Lancaster Co., Pa.

Boehm," a grandson of Jacob Boehm, above named. He says: "My forefathers were from Switzerland. There is romance in their history as well as the land of their birth. Jacob Boehm, my great-great-grandfather, was a Presbyterian. His son Jacob learned a trade. It was a custom in Switzerland for all who completed their apprenticeship to travel three years through the country as itinerant journeymen. The design was to make them finished workmen, and no man could enter into business for himself, no matter how well qualified, until he pursued this course.

In his wanderings Jacob fell in with a people called Pietists. In many respects they resembled the Puritans. He was converted among them. The change in him was so great when he returned home, his language so strange, that his friends could not understand him. His exposure of formal religion, his boldness in reproving sin, raised a storm of persecution. The ministry withstood him and denounced him as a heretic. His answers were so pertinent that his father gave him a severe reprimand, inquiring: 'Boy, do you answer a minister that way?'

The Church exercised civil as well ~~as~~ ecclesiastical authority, and young Boehm was convicted of heresy and sent to prison. An elder brother was appointed to conduct him to prison. He did not watch his brother very closely and as they were near the line that separated Switzerland from France, the prisoner crossed over and was forever free from his domestic and priestly persecutors. He journeyed along the banks of the Rhine till he entered the dukedom of Pfaltz. This was the Palatinate bordering on Belgium. There young Jacob became acquainted with a people called Mennonites. They took their name from Menno Simon, who was cotemporary with Luther. They were a simple-hearted people, and he united with them and became a lay elder.

He had several children, of whom Jacob, the third, was my grandfather. He was born in 1693 and emigrated to this country in 1715. Many of the Mennonites emigrated from Switzerland and Germany.

My grandfather was induced to come to America from the glowing description given of this country by Martin Kendig, one of the seven families that first settled in what is now Lancaster Co., Pa. Jacob Boehm, landed in Philadelphia, from thence went to Germantown, then to Lancaster, and finally settled in Pequea, Conestoga township. Soon afterward he married a Miss Kendig. My grandfather was a lay elder in the Mennonite Society.

Soon after his arrival he bought a farm and built him a house. He was also a blacksmith, the first one in all that region. His wife was very industrious, and when necessary she would leave her work and blow and strike for him. He died in 1780, aged eighty-seven. My grandmother was an excellent woman, particularly fond of me because I was the youngest grandchild. They had a number of sons and daughters. My father, Martin Boehm, was the youngest. He was born November 30, 1725, and was married in 1753 to Eve Steiner,* who was born on Christmas day, 1734. Her ancestors were from Switzerland and settled near my grandfathers. My father inherited my grandfather's beautiful farm, and in 1759 built a house, in which his children were all born and where he died. He was a short, stout man, with a vigorous constitution, an intellectual countenance and a fine flowing beard, which gave him a patriarchal appearance. He had strong common sense and understood well the science of family government.

The order and discipline of the family attracted the attention of the Apostolic Asbury, and he made mention of it in preaching my father's funeral sermon on April 5, 1812.

Martin Boehm was first a Mennonite preacher, for he embraced the religion of his fathers. He was made so by lot in 1756, for such was the custom of this singular people. For some time he preached without a knowledge of sins forgiven, but in 1761 he found redemption in the blood of the Lamb,

*Steiner is now spelled Stoner. One of Hanse Kägy's sons (Henry) married Barbara Steiner, and it is believed a sister of Eve, Martin Boehm's wife, as there was no other family of that name in the neighborhood at that time. Henry Kägy emigrated to Virginia in 1768, in what is now Page Co., and the following year to Shenandoah Co.

and then he became a flame of fire and preached with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. His success was wonderful and the seals to his ministry were numerous. Then the Mennonites expelled him for being too evangelical. He then joined the United Brethren, and afterward became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. My mother was a noble woman, and to my parents I am, under God, indebted for what I am on earth and all I hope to be in heaven." (Reminiscences of Rev. Henry Boehm.)

I wish now to call particular attention to the following questions and answers, as in them I claim to have proof, and the only proof, that the wife of Johannes Kägje, called Manor John, was Nancy Kendig, a sister of Martin Boehm's mother, and the daughter of Martin Kendig, the head of one of the seven families who first settled in Lancaster Co., Pa.

"When Martin Boehm had reached beyond the Patriarchal age, and was nearing the close of a long and glorious life, his son, Henry, who was then traveling companion of the pioneer Bishop of Methodism, the great and good Asbury, asked his father the following questions:

Question. 'Father, when were you put into the ministry?'

Ans. 'My ministerial labors began about the year 1756. Three years afterward, by nomination to the lot, I received full pastoral orders.'

Question. 'What was your religious experience during that time?'

Ans. 'I was sincere and strict in the religious duties of prayer in my family, in the congregation and in the closet. I lived and preached according to the light I had. I was a servant and not a son. Nor did I know any one, at that time, who would claim the birthright by adoption but Nancy Keagy, my mother's sister. She was a woman of great piety and singular devotion to God.'"

We do not think we hazard anything in stating and we feel confident that Nancy Keagy here named is no other than the wife of Johannes Kägje, the second of the name in Pennsylvania, if not in America.

In 1783 Abraham, the grandson of "Hanse" Kägy,* married the granddaughter of Jacob Boehm, and the daughter (Barbara) of Martin Boehm.

It appears somewhat singular that so important a fact should be discovered in the manner here stated. The reader is referred to "Reminiscences of Rev. Henry Boehm," page 378, by the Rev. J. B. Wakely, D. D.

In the succeeding pages it has been stated that there has been five emigrations of Kägys to this country, all of whom have been traced back unmistakably to Switzerland, thus proving conclusively that that is the country whence the name originated. It may be proper here to state the time when these several emigrations occurred. It appears from reliable records that Hanse Kägy at an early day became the possessor of large tracts of land, part of which was in Conestoga township, Lancaster Co., Pa. A tract of 400 acres and a similar tract of 400 acres in the vicinity of the now city of York, York Co., Pa., at that time part of Lancaster Co. The first-named tract of land lay in the very garden spot of Lancaster Co., of world-wide fame for fertility and productiveness.

It was the writer's good fortune a few years ago to visit the neighborhood where my ancestor, Hanse Kägy first settled and built his humble cabin on the banks of the far-famed Conestoga creek. Words fail to describe the beauty of the scenery that lay before me or the thoughts that filled my mind and heart. Before me, in matchless beauty, lay the Pequea Valley with its highly cultivated fields of corn, wheat, etc., a perfect garden of the Lord; the air was balmy and made fragrant with the odor of roses and sweet-smelling clover; the hum of the bees, the joyous songs of birds, all con-

*In I. D. Rupp's history of Lancaster Co., Pa., page 117, it is recorded that "Hans Kägy," Jacob Boehm and others came over from the old country and settled in Lan. Co., Pa. In the "Reminiscences of Rev. Henry Boehm, he says on page 10. "My grandfather, Jacob Boehm, was born in 1693, and emigrated to this country in 1715;" now as Rupp says in his history that Hans Kägy, Jacob Boehm and others came at one and the same time, we feel warranted in saying that the first Kägy (of whom we have any account) came to America in 1715.

spired to fill the mind and heart with emotions inexpressible, that still linger after the lapse of years like some sweet benediction—some holy prayer. I could not help but contrast the scene before me with what it was when Hanse Kägy first settled there in the midst of a virgin forest and among the untutored sons of the woods, with whom he and his sons lived in unbroken friendship, often sharing with them the rude shelter of his cabin, and receiving from them a generous share of the hunt or chase in return. In fancy I could see the stout-hearted Sweitzer wielding the axe and felling the giant oak and hickory, burning away the brush and thistle or planting the golden corn, and at the close of day, when the evening shades had gathered around his humble hut, then like Burn's Cotterer, the husband and father led his household in songs of praise and prayer, with gratitude to God for the peace and joy that now is his, and thus daily he brought up his little flock of sons and daughters in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Our ancestor seems to have been singularly fortunate in the selection of a help-mate. She was no doubt a woman of great force of character. His wife, Rebecca Patterson Kägy, was the 3d daughter of James and Susannah Patterson, both noteworthy persons in the early history of Pennsylvania. James Patterson was extensively engaged in the Indian trade on the Potomac and had what is now called a ranch at the entrance to Conojohela Valley on the Susquehanna, in York Co. now; then it was in the bounds of Chester Co., and was in the disputed territory which was claimed by the authorities of both Pennsylvania and Maryland. The dispute waxed hot and led to bloodshed and is known in the history of the States as "Cresap's War." James Patterson, the father of Rebecca (Keagy), was an energetic partisan of the claims of the Penns, John, Thomas and Richard, in this boundary dispute, as was Captain Thomas Cresap of the claims of Lord Baltimore. Patterson's ranch was in the disputed territory and when Cresap came in 1730 to reclaim the land for Maryland it was Patterson's ranch he claimed for his own, building a block-house there, and his partisans dispersing Patterson's horses, killing some of them. This was the beginning of "Cresap's

War." Cresap claimed Patterson's plantation under a Maryland grant and demanded that Patterson show a warrant or patent for the land, threatening an appeal to the King in his own behalf and that of Maryland. Patterson's defiant answer was "Penn is our king." The contest lasted from 1732 to 1736, when Cresap was seized and the Maryland intruders were overcome. The established boundary line between the States was made July 4, 1760, by Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon,* and is known as Mason and Dixon's line, which gave not only the disputed territory above mentioned, but more to Pennsylvania. James Patterson died in 1735 and his widow, Susannah, the next year, married Thomas Ewing, and became the mother of General James and Captain John Ewing, of Revolutionary memory. Thomas Ewing died in 1743 and his widow, Susannah Patterson Ewing, married John Connelly, an Irish surgeon in the British service. The issue of this last marriage was Lieutenant Colonel John Connelly, who was commandant at Fort Pitt, now Pittsburg, Pa., at the beginning of the Revolution and who proved to be one of the most virulent loyalists in the colonies during that eventful period. No doubt each one of Susannah Patterson Ewing Connelly's sons followed their ideas of duty as it appeared to them, while we approve or condemn as interest or fancy dictate. James Patterson, conjointly with his wife, Susannah, acquired a plantation a short distance from what is now Washington Borough, in Lancaster Co., Pa., as early as 1718. On February 15, 1748, Johannes Keagy bought 300 acres of land from Susannah (Patterson Ewing) Connelly. This land was part of the estate of Thomas Ewing, devised to his son, General James Ewing—the other half of this tract Johannes Keagy had previously purchased. In the same year Johannes Keagy purchased from Mrs. Connelly and her three daughters, by her first husband, James Patterson, the land that belonged to him. "The tract of 500 acres owned by Thomas Ewing was bought of John, Thomas and Richard Penn, Esqs., sons of William Penn, Proprietors and Governors-in-Chief of the Province of Pennsylvania. The deed, bearing date March 21, 1739, in the 22d year of the reign of Lord George, the 2d by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland King."

James Patterson and Susannah, his wife, had two sons, James and Thomas, and three daughters, Susannah, Sarah and Rebecca—who married John Rudolph Keagy about 1716-17, and who came to America in 1715, as before stated, and who was called "Hanse" to distinguish him from Johannes Keagy, who came into the same vicinity in 1739.

1. James Patterson, Jr., m. and had a son William, both of whom took an active part in the French and Indian War, the latter conducted by the justly celebrated Indian chief, Pontiac. James was interested in the Conococheague settlement with Benjamin Chambers, but he soon relinquished his plantation here, and removed to Standing Stone, in Huntingdon Co., Pa.

2. Thomas Patterson, d. young.

3. Susannah Patterson, the eldest daughter, m. James Lowry, one of the celebrated Lowry family of pioneer history of Penna. See Harris's Biographical history of Lancaster Co., Pa.; also I. D. Rupp's history of the same county.

4. Sarah Patterson, the second daughter, m. Col. Benjamin Chambers, the founder of Chambersburg in 1764, and the first white man to make a settlement in Franklin Co., Pa. He was a native of the County Antrim, Ireland, and of Scotch descent, and with his brothers, James, Robert and Joseph, between the years 1726 and 1730, emigrated to the Province of Pennsylvania, and first settled at the mouth of Fishing Creek on the Susquehanna, where they built a mill. In 1730 Benjamin and Joseph, fascinated by the story of a hunter as to the beauty of the "Kittochtinny" valley, they boldly pushed out into the wilderness until they reached the "Falling Spring." Benjamin remained and built himself a log house which he covered with cedar shingles held fast by nails; afterward he erected a sawmill and later a flouring mill, so that Chamber's Fort* became a place of note and its builder a distinguished man of his times. George Chambers, Esq., a great-great-grandson of Benjamin, the first settler, is the nearest neighbor of the Editor of this History. James Chambers was an only son of Sarah Patterson Chambers, and became a distinguished general in the War of the Revolution.

5. Rebecca Patterson, m. John Rudolph Keagy, who settled in Conestogoe township, Lancaster Co., Pa., in 1715, as heretofore stated.

The Second Emigration occurred in 1739, Dec. 11th, when the ship "Lydia," James Allen commander, from London, with 75 passengers, Palatines; among these was Johannes Kägie.

The Third Emigration occurred Oct. 27, 1764, when the ship "Hero," Ralph Forster, Captain, from Rotterdam, last from Cowes, with 500 passengers, among whom was one Rudolph Kägy. My authority for the above records is to be found in I. D. Rupp's 30,000 names of immigrants to Pennsylvania from 1727 to 1776.

The Fourth Emigration occurred in about the year 1818—or perhaps a little earlier—when one Simon Kegey and a brother, and a son of Simon's named John B., left Switzerland for America; the father and mother both died at sea, and the boy, John B., was taken by the captain of the vessel to his home in Pennsylvania; the uncle remained in New York.

The Fifth Emigration was in 1854-59, when Anna C. Kägi, of Ruppen, Switzerland, now Mrs. Henry Fluegge, living at Effingham, Ill., and her parents, Hans Jacob and Anna Maria Kägi and their son, Albert, came.

In writing this genealogical record it has been the aim of its author to give the descendants in both male and female line. It has, however, been impossible to do this in the female line beyond a generation or two, and oftentimes not that far; this is indeed a matter to be regretted.

Having given in a previous chapter the time and circumstances that induced the first one who bore the name Kägi to come to these western shores, and who, in the following pages, will be called "Hanse Kägy" (to distinguish him from the Johannes Kägie, who came to this country in 1739, and who resided and owned lands in the same township—Conestogoe.) Thus far, no accurate record of the date of his birth or death has been found; but in Book A, page 156, in the Recorder of Wills office, at Lancaster, Pa., will be found on file a copy of his will, of which the following is an exact copy, both in orthography and form of letters, as near as it was possible to reproduce them, to wit:

Dep Reg^r.

From the above will we learn that Hans Kägy had four sons and three daughters, of whom Jacob was the eldest son and was b. Sept. 13, 1719; Henry, Nov. 11, 1728; the dates of birth of the others it not known; Abraham b. about 1723 and Rudolph, b. about 1725; Susannah, Barbara and Anna.

Jacob Keagy was m. to Feronica Stehman about 1770 and had three sons and one daughter. The old family Bible thus records his death: "Fell asleep in Jesus on the 28th of December, in the year of Lord Jesus Christ 1788, aged 69 yrs., 3 m. and 15 d." His children were John, Jacob, b. April 21, 1760; Abraham, b. ———, and Anna.

John Keagy, the eldest son of Jacob, was b. 1746, or thereabout. He was m. to Sarah Sneider, who was b. in Canada. To them were born six children, one son, Jacob, and five daughters, Mariah, Sarah, Ann, Elizabeth, b. Aug. 2, 1781, in York Co., Pa., and Eve. In the spring of 1783 John Keagy moved from York Co., Pa., to Bedford Co., Pa., near where Myersdale City, now in Somerset Co. John Keagy was a Dunkard preacher and held the first Liebensmohl communion meeting west of the Allegheny mountains. This was in the year 1783. At this time there was only eight to ten families living in that region.

John Keagy sought out these families and appointed a day and place of meeting, and a church was organized; the society prospered and multiplied, and the settlement took the name of "Bruderthal," that is "Brother's Valley." Years afterward, when this section was laid out in townships, one of them was named Brothers Valley township. The society thus began in 1783, has increased and divided, and subdivided, and to-day numbers nearly thirty distinct organizations of brethren or Dunkards.

In 1810 John Keagy moved from Somerset Co., Pa., to Montgomery Co., Ohio, with his son-in-law, John Olinger, where he soon afterward died, beloved and respected by all who knew him for his kindness and exalted Christian character. His wife d. about 1835, in Montgomery Co., Ohio.

Jacob Keagy, the only son of John, was b. about the year 1770. He m. Susan Markley ——— and they had a son whom they called John, who was b. about 1795. Jacob Keagy is said to have been a genius, a natural-born mechanic

*John Keagy was a member of the Masonic fraternity; he owned mills and a store in Saulsbury, Somerset Co., Pa. It appears from all the facts, that a brother Mason had stolen some goods from a neighboring store and unknown to Mr. Keagy had secreted them in his mill or store, where they were subsequently found and identified by their owner. Mr. Keagy discovered who the thief was, and he being a Mason also, Mr. Keagy forebore divulging his name: in shielding his brother Mason he unwittingly assumed his guilt, which his rival in business turned to his own advantage and greatly to the detriment of Mr. Keagy's good name; and being extremely sensitive in all matters of honor, the mortification and shame produced by the unjust accusation, broke down his health and he died at 30 years of age leaving an estate worth nearly $75,000.

Ever since that, he lived on his farm a mile or more south of Marion Mills, where he cut down the timber for a building site. About one year ago (1883) his health began to fail and that insidious disease, consumption, brought him down to the grave, on Thursday, May 3, 1883, at the age of 63 years; he bade farewell to his companion and children, some of whom had come from the northern part of the State to visit him, and then calmly and serene passed from life to join the innumerable throng that gather on the pearly shores of immortality, having first selected as the texts for his funeral I. Cor. i. 10, and Hebrew x. 23 and 29. The consistent life and peaceful death of Patrick Keagy are a precious monument, which makes glad the hearts of his relatives, friends in the church and neighbors, of a life well spent in doing good.

The following obituary notice of his death was taken from the "Messenger":

DEATH OF ELDER E. K. BUECHLY.

Bro. E. K. Buechly, of South Waterloo, Iowa, has gone to his long home. He died April 20, being at that time 80 y., 4 m. and 11 d. old. Thus he fell asleep in a ripe old age. After his death the following, written by himself, was found among his papers. It gives a few incidents concerning his ancestors that may be of interest:

"I was born Dec. 9, 1812, in Ellick township, Somerset Co., Pa., about four miles from the town of Salisbury, and about the same distance from what is now termed Meyersdale.

"My father removed from the above-named place April 14, 1814, to near Meyer's Mills. A great part of the place whereon I was raised is now occupied by the town of Meyersdale. My father, Abraham Buechly, was born in Bedford, now Somerset Co., about four miles from where I was raised. He was b. Jan. 30, 1780; my mother b. Aug. 2, 1781, in York Co., Pa. Her father's name was John Keagy. He removed to Bedford, now Somerset Co., Pa., in the spring of 1784, and in that fall he was elected to the ministry. He was the first minister among the Brethren west of the Alleghany Mountains. The valley he lived in was named Brother's Valley, and one township still retains this lovely name.

"My grandfather, Michael Buechele (as he spelled his name), removed from Bucks Co., Pa., to Bedford (now Somerset) about 1775, to the place where my father was born, in Ellick Township. He was a member of the Mennonite (Amish) church until after J. Keagy moved in, when he also joined the Brethren and was soon after put to the ministry."

Eve Keagy, the youngest and fifth daughter of John Keagy, was b. in Bedford then, now Somerset Co., Pa., to which place John Keagy moved, from York Co., Pa., in the spring of 1783, to a place about three miles north of what is now called Salisbury and about four miles southwest of what is now Myersdale City. Eve Keagy was b. May 2, 1783, and d. May 14, 1858; she was m. to John Olinger, b. Sept. 3, 1776; d. Feb. 25, 1870; aged 93 y., 5 m. and 22 d.

John and Eve Olinger had four sons, viz: (1) John, (2) Samuel, (3) Jacob and (4) Joseph, and five daughters, viz: (1) Catharine, (2) Mary, (3) Sarah, (4) Susan and (5) Hester.

In 1810 John Olinger went to Montgomery Co., Ohio. They went to Wheeling, Va., in wagons and there bought a flat-bottom boat and put their teams and goods on it and floated it down the Ohio to Cincinnati, and from there to Montgomery Co., by wagons; they endured many hardships on the journey.

The descendants of John Olinger are many and are widely scattered, and are of the highest respectability and intelligence. John Olinger was blind the last few years of his life.

In April, 1872, he left the paternal home, and went to Ellis and Russell counties, Kansas, where he, after the first year there, pre-empted a claim of 160 acres of land; this he farmed for two years; the grasshoppers came and destroyed everything green, and discouraged farming. In the spring of 1875 he left Kansas and went by wagon to Clear Creek Co., Col., where he remained nine years, working in and about the silver mining camps, in hauling ores and in freighting goods from Georgetown, on the East Side, to Decatur and Chewanwan, on the west side of the main range of the Rocky Mountains, a distance of nineteen miles, for which he was paid $2.00 per 100 pounds; this road is said to be one of the highest wagon roads in the world. In the spring of 1884 he left Colorado and went to the Black Hills, South Dakota, and there had a "Homestead" and a "Tree Culture" of 320 acres. He remained here eight years, and in 1892 he went to Whitman Co., Wash., where he now resides (1898). In the early part of the year 1898 he visited his early home after an absence of twenty-six years, and spent several months visiting relatives in Pennsylvania and Maryland. Many changes had taken place since he had left home—his father and many of his kindred had died, the children had grown to be men and women, and those in middle life to old age. Mr. Keagy carries with him to his far-off home the heartiest wishes of a host of friends.

pany with three others from Colorado, he started for Lapaz, Bolivia, South America, via New York and Panama, for the purpose of mining for silver. On their arrival at Panama they found the yellow fever raging, and learned through the United States Minister in Bolivia, by telegram, that all the party of thirteen that had preceded them to that place had died with the yellow fever. After waiting at Panama eleven days for a return ship to New York they returned home, one of their number dying at sea, and was buried in old ocean, thus only three of the seventeen lived to return. In 1884 he and a partner discovered a silver mine at Lawson, Colorado, which they sold for $5,000 cash. He is now (1898) engaged in running mining machinery at Aultman, Col.

Abraham Keagy (Machine Abe, as he was called,) was a remarkable man in many respects. His advantages were exceedingly limited, and opportunities few to acquire an ordinary education, at that early day limited to reading, writing and cyphering. Nature done much for him—he was a natural mechanic and possessed inventive talent of the highest order. He could construct anything he wished either in wood or metal, and was an expert in any of the mechanical arts. He invented and patented a spark arrester for railroad locomotives, which bears date April 29, 1842, and is said to be the first device for the purpose ever used and very similar to those in use at this day. It is said that unscrupulous parties stole his ideas and reaped the benefit of his genius. He made the patterns and moulds and cast the first cook stoves made and used in this State. These were a godsend to the housewives of more than a half century ago, but would not compare in beauty and finish with the tiled and nickleplated stoves of to-day that are found in the humblest homes. He built and owned a woolen mill, making the carding and spinning machinery himself with the rude tools of that early day. He built one of the first grist and merchant mills in his county.* It was hardly completed before it was stored with grain by neighboring farmers, when from some unknown cause it was destroyed by fire, inflicting great loss upon its owner. Encouraged by his neighbors and friends, he rebuilt the mill, which still stands and attests his indomitable energy and skill. But it is not alone as a mechanic or genius in which he excelled. He was a broad-gauged man, and was ever ready and willing to aid the deserving and help the needy. His advice was often sought and the conclusions of his ripe judgment followed with marked advantage. He was just, honest and upright in all his dealings with his fellow men and few men maintained through a long life more than he the respect and confidence reposed in him. His genius, skill and industry won its certain reward and he possessed a goodly heritage. His genius and skill entitles him to a place beside Arkwright, Howe or Ericson. So well balanced a mind as his would be successful in any calling or profession in which he might choose to engage. His highest ambition seems to have been to do his duty as a man in every relation in which he was placed and to do his Master's will. At four-score years, after a long and useful life, he went to share the holy rest of a life well spent, honored, respected and loved by all who knew him, leaving behind him the richest legacy that any one can leave to his posterity, an exemplary life and honored name.

(2) CHRISTIAN KEAGY, married Mary Resh, of Lancaster Co., Pa., about the year 1776. She died June 27, 1823, and was buried near Woodbury, Bedford Co., Pa. In the year

*Catharine Keagy was a supposed daughter of Rudolph Keagy, who was related to Michael Shenk's mother, Ann (Keagy) Shenk. She had a sister Sarah, who married a Christian Hess, and a first cousin to John Hess, Catharine's husband.

It is not definitely known at this date (1899) what relationship this (Rudolph) Keagy sustained to Ann (Keagy) Shenk's father, whose name was Abraham. An impenetrable mystery surrounds the origin and disappearance of the father of Catharine and Sarah (Keagy) Hess. Their mother's name was Catharine Bowman, who lived and died near Safe Harbor. A record will be given of this family in succeeding pages. None of the descendants of Catharine or Sarah (Keagy) Hess are positive as to the Christian name of this Keagy. Quite likely it was Rudolph, a brother of Abraham, above named.

1787, Christian Keagy removed from Lancaster to Franklin Co., Pa., to a farm now or recently owned by Jno. Stoner, on the east side of the historic "Antietam Creek," about one mile from Waynesboro, on the Baltimore and Pittsburg pike. They had nine children: (1) Henry, b. Aug. 23, 1778; (2) Anna (Nancy), b. Oct. 6, 1781, d. Jan. 2, 1782; (3) Susanna, b. March 10, 1783; (4) Anna (Nancy), b. March 29, 1786, d. June 27, 1833; (5) Maria (Mary), b. Jan. 23, 1789; (6) Abraham, b. Nov. 9, 1797; (7) Christian, b. April 8, 1794; (8) John, b. Sept. 10, 1796; (9) Elizabeth, b. Jan. 8, 1801.

The four first named children were born in Lancaster Co., Pa., the others in Franklin Co., Pa., near the town of Waynesboro. Christian Keagy, Sr., died Aug. 31, 1805, and is buried in the grave yard near where he lived.

Henry, the eldest son, married the widow of his brother, Abraham; she was the youngest daughter of Jacob Keagy, the second son of Jacob, the oldest son of "Hanse" Keagy. It is a rare occurrence that a lady marrying twice retains her maiden name; Mary Keagy was a twin sister and the two sisters were so alike in looks and in manner and disposition that their mother could not often tell them apart, which sometimes caused her much amusement, and often times some perplexity. Mary Keagy enjoyed another distinction. There were two brothers of hers named John; and two sisters named Elizabeth; of course one of the brothers and one of the sisters died in infancy, as the record shows. It seems to have been the custom at that day in many families, when recording a birth of son or daughter to give the sign, thus:—Henry Keagy was born in the sign of the Virgin; Anna in the sign of Taurus the Bull; Susanna in the sign of Gemini the Twins; Anna, in the sign of the Ram; Mary in the sign of Capricornus the Goat; Abraham in the sign of Taurus the Bull; Christian in the sign of Leo the Lion; John in the sign of Capricornus the Goat, and Elizabeth in the sign of Libra the Balance. Our forefathers had great faith in "Signs," and especially in regard to sowing and planting; and in many other things pertaining to human conduct and welfare. The belief still prevails, but in a far less degree, and serves to show the advance of thought.

The children of Henry and Mary Keagy have already been given in the records of Jacob's descendants, and are repeated here simply for convenience and a proper understanding. Susan, Ephraim, Rudolph, Mary Ann, and Sarah Jane.

Susanna Keagy, the second daughter of Christian Keagy, married about the year 1802 to Geo. Michael Boyer, who was born in Germany, Jan. 11, 1778. Mrs. (Keagy) Boyer was a member of the German Baptist church, in which faith she lived a long and most exemplary Christian life. Her religious life was of that practical kind that incites in our minds and hearts the loftiest admiration. She was a woman who was universally beloved, because her life was marked by so many admirable traits that go to make up the character of a noble woman. The opportunities for an education in her day and neighborhood were exceedingly limited, but nevertheless, she possessed a sound and discriminating judgment. She was ever solicitous for the physical and the moral well-being of her children, and strove to bring them up in habits of industry and usefulness in the world. Nor was her labor in vain. She could say, as the Roman matron said, pointing to her children: "These are my jewels." The noble virtues of the mother have, we know, descended to her children and grandchildren. The influence of such a woman as Susanna Boyer is like dropping a pebble into a still lake, it circles out and still out until it reaches the farther shore. So her example and good influence will be felt along the shores of time, and the good done will only be known in Eternity. The children of Susanna and Geo. Boyer are as follows:

Henry, b. Oct. 17, 1803; Joseph, b. Feb. 1, 1806; John, b. Sep. 25, 1807; Mary Ann, b. Aug. 15, 1809; Susanna, b. Sep. 28, 1811; Barbara, b. May, 5, 1813; Nancy, b. April 4, 1815; Elizabeth, b. Jan. 17, 1817; George, b. Aug. 24, 1820; Hannah, b. Aug. 15, 1822; Catharine, b. March 28, 1828.

Susanna died June 2d or 3d, 1897.

ANNA (NANCY) KEAGY, the third daughter of Christian Keagy, married Abraham Keagy, the eldest son of Jacob Keagy, who was the second son of Jacob Keagy, the eldest son of "Hanse." He was called "Machine Abe" to distinguish him from Christian Keagy's son "Abe," who was his brother-in-law as well as his cousin, and who was called "Tanner Abe," because he followed tanning as a calling. Anna (Nancy) Keagy was married about the year 1809. Their children are:

Jacob, b. May 23, 1810; John, b. Nov. 8, 1811; Abraham, b. ———, 1813; Christian, b. ———, 1815; Susan, b. ———; Mary, b. ———; Anna (Nancy), b. March 13, 1823; Elizabeth, b. June 15, 1828.

The descendants of these sons and daughters have already been given in the Genealogical Record of Jacob Keagy, the eldest son of Hans.

Abraham Keagy was a man of more than ordinary ability and energy and possessed mechanical talent of the highest order. See the record of Jacob Keagy's descendants for a sketch of this worthy man's life.

Abraham Keagy died in Morrison Cove, Bedford Co., Pa., Aug. 23, 1867. His wife Anna (Nancy) died June 27, 1833.

MARIA (MARY) KEAGY, the fourth daughter of Christian Keagy, married Jacob Royer, and moved to Williamsburg, Blair Co., Pa., where she died on the 11th of Oct., 1852. Jacob Royer was born Dec. 25, 1780, and died March 12, 1861. They were married April 12, 1814. Their children are:

An infant son b. April 5, 1815; Samuel K., b. April 3, 1816; Mary K., b. April 9, 1822; d. July 11, 1830.

ABRAHAM KEAGY, the second son of Christian Keagy, married Mary Keagy, the sister of "Machine Abe," and the youngest twin daughter of Jacob, the second son of Jacob, the eldest son of "Hanse" Keagy. This marriage was made in 1819.

They had four children: Philip, b. April 4, 1822, now living at Epworth, Iowa. He was born near Woodbury, Bedford Co., Pa. Barbara died at 8 years of age. Christian, b. in 1824; d. Jan. 17, 1862, in Polo, Ill.; m. Elizabeth Powell, June, 22, 1847.

Abraham Keagy d. Dec. 2, 1828, and his widow m. his eldest brother, Henry, about the year 1831, and had five children: Susan, Ephraim, Rudolph, Mary Ann, and Sarah Jane. Henry Keagy d. May 21, 1856, and his widow d. Aug. 30, 1859. This cross relationship is somewhat confusing, for the reason that the Henry Keagy's record is first in order of births. He was not married until after his brother Abraham's death. The descendants of Henry and Abraham are fully given in the Genealogical record of Jacob Keagy, the eldest son of "Hanse" Keagy, to which the reader is referred.

Abraham Keagy was called "Tanner Abe," to distinguish him from Jacob Keagy's eldest son, Abraham, who was called "Machine Abe," and who was his brother-in-law, as well as his cousin.

Philip Keagy, eldest son of Abraham, the second son of Christian Keagy, the eldest son of Abraham, the beloved son of "Hanse" Keagy,—the first in America—was b. April 4, 1822, near Woodbury, Bedford Co., Pa., on a farm. His father dying Dec. 2, 1828, his mother left the farm the following spring and rented a house owned by her brother and kept boarders. In 1830 he went to live with his Aunt Mary and Uncle Jacob Royer, who was a tanner by trade, and also a farmer. His father being a tanner also, had been in the employ of Jacob Royer, his brother-in-law, for several years. Several years of his youth was spent at work on the farm and at the tannery. At the latter place his surroundings were uncongenial and not at all conducive to correct morals, on account of the rude, uncultivated and dissipated character of some of the employees about him. His aunt was fond of flowers and frequently, in season, had him cultivate these for her, and to this he attributes his love for flowers to this day. His mother in the meantime had chosen as the guardian of her children, Christian Hoffman, a farmer, and who agreed to take him, and he worked on the farm for nearly three years, and was sent to school three months each winter. When he arrived at the age of 15 years he apprenticed himself to F. S. Washeim, a German cabinet maker, located at Woodbury, Bedford Co., Pa., and served three and one-half years for his clothing and board. He continued in the employ of his master some time, and attended school three months the last winter, and "graduated," as that was the last time he ever attended school.

He worked in a fanning mill shop in the early part of 1842, and later in the same year found a situation in Loysburg, four miles south of Woodbury, in E. Mentzer's cabinet shops. In 1843 he built himself a house and shop, and on Jan. 30, 1844, he was united in wedlock to Miss Margaret Jane Moore. Here four of their eldest children were born. In the spring of 1851 he visited Iowa, with the hope of making that State his future home. In the meantime he was appointed post-master at Woodbury, Pa., and held the office for two years; then resigned, and moved to Iowa about the middle of Oct., 1855, locating in Epworth, where he has lived ever since. Soon after his arrival at Epworth he built himself a house, and continued in the carpenter business for years. In the spring of 1863 he was induced to go into the merchandising business in Epworth, and bought out the stock of E. G. French, with whom his eldest son, Wesley, was then employed as clerk. This proved a success, from the fact that the Civil War raised the price of goods, and his stock was sold at greatly advanced prices. He, however, built some houses after engaging in storekeeping and always preferred the "jack plane" to the yard stick. His sons, C. Wesley and Wm. H., each clerked in their father's store for years, and until each in turn found a wider field for their expanded energies and business qualifications. Then the youngest living son, Henry Reed, assumed their place and in a few years became a partner in the firm, under the name of P. Keagy & Son, and still continues (1898), having won a large patronage by their fair dealing, probity and integrity in their business.

In 1842 he united with the church, and two years afterward was appointed class leader by the Rev. J. S. Lee, and retained that position until he moved to Iowa, and soon after his arrival there the Rev. H. W. Reed made him the leader of a new class, which he served from that time up to 1897, when he asked to be relieved. Philip Keagy is regarded, and entitled to be called, a pillar of the M. E. church. His hand and purse, his voice and prayers have all been lavishly and freely used and given to promote her interests, and the cause of religion. His charity is unbounded, and he is the first to respond to the cry of distress; his sympathies embrace the whole of human kind, without regard to creed or nationality. Possessing naturally a kind heart and generous nature, he has added to these the culture and graces of the true Christian gentleman. The church is his bride.

“The kingdom of his Lord, the house of his abode,
The church our blessed Redeemer saved
With his own precious blood;
Beyond his highest joy, he prized her heavenly ways,
Her sweet communion, solemn vows,
Her hymns of love and praise.”

On the 15th of April, 1892, the loving mother and fond wife sickened and died. Six years before, the youngest son, Edson F., died away from home. Both these sad events fell with crushing weight upon the devoted husband and father, but his faith is of that steadfast kind, that he can say with Paul, “None of these things move me,” and with Job, “If he slay me, yet will I trust in him.” The strong social disposition and affectionate nature of Philip Keagy will not allow him to long brood over sorrows or disasters, come from whence they will, but rather seeks to assuage them by sharing with another the wealth of affection that finds its truest, best expression in married life. On the 7th of June, 1894, he was married to Mrs. Agnes M. Albbrook, who was born in Germany and came to this country with her parents when she was 8 years of age. They settled in Philadelphia, Pa., where they remained four years. Then removed to Clarion Co., Pa., where at the age of 20, she was married to Mr. Frank Albbrook. In 1858 they moved to a farm 6 miles south of Manchester, Delaware Co., Iowa, where they resided at the time of his death in 1862. Mrs. Albbrook the next year moved to Epworth, Iowa, her son being the principal of Epworth College, and a leader in everything relating to advanced educational work.

Margaret Jane Keagy was a most exemplary woman, one in whom many of the virtues and graces were found in an eminent degree. The devoted house mother, an helpmeet indeed in every sense of the word, one who walked the thorny, winding road of life hand in hand with her husband, for nearly half a century of time, respected, honored and loved by all who knew her in life, and revere her in death. Philip Keagy, though past the patriarchial age, is yet hale and hearty and takes a lively interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of the community, the church and the world.

The children of Philip Keagy and Margaret Jane Moore are:

Their children are: Margaret May, b. at Epworth, Ia., April 5, 1895, d. June 27, 1895; Philip Donald Keagy, b. at Epworth, Ia., May 28, 1897.

Henry Reed Keagy is an active member of the M. E. church in Epworth, and an officer in Epworth College. He is now engaged in the general merchandising business, having succeeded his father. Mr. Keagy is well known in his county, and as a business man enjoys the confidence and esteem of all who know him, and stands as high in the church as he does in the business world. His religion is of that staunch and practical kind that abides with him, and accompanies him in his daily work and in all the walks and relations of life.

6th. Edson F., b. June 6, 1863; d. Aug. 17, 1886, of malignant diphtheria, at Iowa Falls. He was a telegraph operator and railroad agent. Too close attention to his business impaired his health, to recover which he had gone to the sanitarium at the above named place, when he was suddenly seized with the disease that caused his death. Before the coming of this fatal sickness he was happily converted and wrote his parents a most touching letter, glowing with the hopes of his new-found faith. He wrote: "I have experienced religion, and I am feeling very happy, and I know you will rejoice with me." His brothers, Wesley, Reed, William and wife, and brother-in-law, Charles Husted, were with him during his last hours, hours that were filled with triumph and resignation to the Divine will. Shortly after the arrival of his brothers Wesley and Reed at his bedside, a prayer service was held, in which the voices of the three brothers were mingled. His last words were: "Good bye, God bless you all." On account of the nature of the disease, his body could not be taken home. Memorial service was held at his home Aug. 18th. His parents, both pillars in the Methodist church, have the Christian sympathy of a large circle of friends. The above notice was taken from the North Western Christian Advocate.

3. Christian Keagy, son of Mary and Abraham Keagy, b. in Woodbury, Bedford Co., Pa., in the year 1824, was m. to Elizabeth Powell in the year 1847, June 22. She was born in Maryland, Sept. 13, 1825.

Christian Keagy died in Polo, Ill., Jan. 17, 1862, aged 38 years. In 1852 he joined the M. E. church in Bedford Co., Pa. In Oct., 1854, he moved to Polo, Ill., and united with the M. E. church in that place. His death was most triumphant; his last words were: "All is bright, I have a hope beyond."

CHRISTIAN KEAGY, JR., the 3rd son of Christian Keagy, died Oct. 7, 1826, and so far as we can learn, was unmarried. He died near Waynesboro, Pa., where he was born, and is buried in a near-by graveyard. His age was 32 y. and 6 m.

JOHN KEAGY, the fourth son of Christian Keagy, was born near Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa., on the 10th of Sept., 1796; and died in Chambersburg, Pa., April 2, 1864, and is buried in Cedar Grove cemetery, Chambersburg, Pa., by the side of his two daughters, Anna L., and Margurette Jane, who preceded him to the tomb.

On April 20, 1818, he was united in holy wedlock to Miss Jane Greer, of Emmitsburg, Md., who was born May 19, 1800.

TILDEN FOUNDATIONS

John Keagy was 9 years old at his father's death, and by his guardians was apprenticed soon afterward to learn the carding and weaving trade, which business he followed for many years in Adams and Franklin Cos., Pa. In the year 1824 he purchased the old grist mill situated two and one-half miles east of Waynesboro, on the historic Antietam creek, and changed it into a woolen mill. It is said to have been the most thorough and complete of its kind in the country at that time. The original name of this property was "Homestead." It was taken up in the year 1768 by John Horner, who disposed of it to Philip Reed, on March 27, 1790, and from Mr. Reed to John Baker, Nov. 28, 1795. He sold it to John Walter, March 4, 1811, who sold it to Jonathan Keefer, and on the 1st day of April, 1824, he sold it to John Keagy, as before stated, who conducted it as a woolen mill for some 9 or 10 years. John Keagy was a noble minded man; his mind was of that lofty kind that embraced the whole race, and regarded them as brothers, and his pity was shown to every sufferer within his ken, by the gifts of his hands. He was generous to a fault, and he has been known to give his last dollar to mitigate suffering. It is difficult to define a character so noble, so good. He had an artistic taste, and followed portrait painting for years, and in many old homes are to be found upon the walls specimens of his skill in that art. In later years he engaged in photography in Chambersburg, Pa., and was employed at that at the time of his death, which occurred suddenly on a Sunday morning as he was preparing to go to church.

Mr. Keagy was a devoted Christian gentleman, a member of the M. E. church for many years. He and his beloved wife reared their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. To the church, he and his family always gave liberally, and turned "not away from the beggar at the door." He was poor in this world's goods, but rich in all the noble qualities that make a good husband, father or friend. His wife was educated at Emmittsburg, Md., as a nun, when she first saw her future husband. 'Twas the old story—love at first sight, and the young nun quit the school room to assume the graver duties of wife and mother, which she ever filled with loving kindness and affection, and superior intelligence and ability. The writer hereof has the most pleasant recollections of both of these dear, good people, and will ever cherish their memory in sweet remembrance. They had eight children, viz: Samuel, b. March 20, 1820; James, b. Sep. 18, 1821; Susanna, b. Oct. 29, 1824; Christian Greer, b. Nov. 4, 1826; Mary Elizabeth, b. Oct. 13, 1828; Margaret Jane, b. Jan. 30, 1831; Anna Louisa, b. June 8, 1833; Eliza Barbary, b. March 13, 1836.

Samuel, m. Elizabeth Shryock, b. Oct. 23, 1814; and m. —, 1844.

Samuel d. in Cambria Co., Pa., on July 5, 1858. For years he followed peddling, selling various articles of household goods, and was widely known in half a dozen counties in Pa. and Va. His widow lives in Chambersburg, Pa., and is the honored agent of the Society for the Relief of the Poor. Who does not know "Lizzie Keagy?" There is not a woman in the county so well known, or more highly respected or esteemed than she is. Every home or hovel, where want and suffering is to be seen, can testify to her generous ministrations, both in food and raiment for the body, consolation for the sorrowing, and, when needed, reproof for the ungodly. Daily, all the year long, her venerable form is seen upon our streets and alleys; with basket or bundle, on her errand of mercy, to relieve the sick or suffering poor; often through unbroken paths of snow, ice and mud, through winter's wind and chilly blast, or summer's scorching heat, intent only upon her errand; and content to know her "Master's will," who said: "The poor ye have always with you." No issue.

James, m. Martha Clemmie Conrad, of Harrisonburg, Va., a daughter of George and Susan Conrad, of that place, in the year 1855, April 18. They had two children: (1) Anna Virginia, b. at Lynchburg, Va., 1856; (2) Vernon Conrad, b. in Harrisonburg, Va., —, 1857.

3rd child of John Keagy, Susanna Keagy, d. March 27, 1827.

4th child of John Keagy, Christian Greer Keagy, d. Nov. 28, 1827.

5th child of John Keagy, Mary Elizabeth Keagy, single; and resided with her sister, Eliza Barbary Knapps, at Cambridge, Ill. From early youth she was deeply religious. In about 1863, while rising from a stooping position in the attic of her father's house she accidentally struck her head against a nail in the rafters, which tore the scalp, and subsequently affected her mind to such a degree that she became insane; and from a delicate girl she became quite corpulent and strong. She died at the home of her sister, at Cambridge, Ill., in 1886.

Margaretta Jane Keagy, the 6th child of John Keagy, died at Chambersburg, Pa., Nov. 17, 1848, in her young and beautiful womanhood. In the last hours of her life she had her friends to gather around her bedside "and told them that she was going to that land, where those who love here shall meet to love again."

Annie Louisa Keagy, the 7th child of John Keagy, d. in Chambersburg, Pa., Aug. 9, 1855, in the prime of youth.

Eliza Barbara Keagy, the 8th child of John Keagy, m. Salmon W. Knapps, of Andover, Henry Co., Ill., Oct. 23, 1873. Mr. Knapps d. in 1886.

Mrs. John Keagy died at the home of her son, James, in Cambridge, Ill., Aug. 13, 1880.

ELIZABETH KEAGY, the 9th and youngest child of Christian Keagy, m. Jacob Bausler, May 13, 1819. He was b. Dec. 18, 1795, and d. Aug. 27, 1836. Elizabeth (Keagy) Bausler d. on the 18th of May, 1840. They lived near Williamsburg, Pa. (Blair Co.), where they both died. Their children are:

David Bausler, b. Jan. 19, 1825.

Elizabeth Bausler, b. July 24, 1827.

Susannah Bausler, b. May 18, 1830.

Sarah Bausler, b. Dec. 6, 1835.

This ends the record of Christian Keagy.

HENRY KEAGY, the 2d son of Abraham, was born in Lancaster Co., Pa., about 1753 or 4. All the definite information we have thus far learned of him is exceeding meagre. He is supposed to have died unmarried. He evidently was living at the time his father made his will, which is dated Oct. 30, 1784, probated Nov. 12, 1784, in which he orders all his property, real and personal, to be sold and divided equally between his eleven children, and that was the number in his family, living then.

The witnesses to the will are:

Martin Boyer, Richard Keagy, John Hart.

James Jacks, Register.

The Richard Keagy here mentioned was the uncle of Henry, the name Richard being an alias. His real name was Rudolph. When a boy at my father's home I have heard him say that his uncle Henry was fond of hunting and was a skilled marksman with the rifle, and that he made his own rifle. It was so heavy that no one but himself cared to carry it. During the Revolutionary war his gun was demanded for use in the Continental army, but because of its great weight it was rejected. Upon a certain occasion a bald eagle made its appearance in his neighborhood and the hunters were anxious to get a shot at it, but the wary bird would not allow any one to approach within rifle shot of him. On a certain occasion Henry Keagy saw the eagle perched upon a top branch of a high dead tree several hundred yards distant, and he decided to try and shoot him at that great distance. He loaded the rifle with an extra charge of powder, took a steady aim at a rest, and pulled the trigger. The bird was seen to fall, and on approaching, it was seen to be wounded, and showed a readiness for fight. Mr. Keagy placed the stock of his gun, the butt toward it and the eagle sank his talons into it so deep that he could not get them out of the poplar wood. He had to cut them off.

From all the information that has come to my knowledge about him, I am led to think that he remained unmarried. Some years ago when at Hanover, York Co., Pa., I visited the Keagy graveyard near there and which is situated on land, now, as it has been for over 125 years, in possession of the Keagys. In this graveyard there is a plain stone with these simple words on it: (H. Ky, 1799). As this stone is among and surrounded with the graves of Keagys, it is fair to suppose that he was some kin to them, and quite likely Henry Keagy, the second son of Abraham, the "beloved son" of "Hanse." It were also well to bear in mind that his uncle, Jacob Keagy, and his three sons were then living in that immediate place, and Henry may have been residing there at the time of his death. He inherited an equal share of his father's estate. His name appears upon the register and recorder's index in Lancaster city, between 1793 and 5, in the transfer of property, and it is possible he died in 1799.

ABRAHAM KEAGY, the third son of Abraham, was born in Lancaster Co., Pa., July 4, 1757, and married Barbara Boehm, the only daughter of Martin Boehm, who was one of the founders of the United Brethren church. She was born Dec. 12, 1762. The Keagys and Boehms were not only allied by marriage, but by the strongest ties of friendship, and the same precious faith. Abraham Keagy and Barbara Boehm were married at Strasburg, Lancaster Co., Pa., May 23, 1781.

Abraham Keagy was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia, Pa., and practiced medicine in the counties of Lancaster and Clearfield, in Pennsylvania, and at Newcastle, Delaware. At the latter place he owned flour mills, and also on the Brandywine creek. In 1815 he moved from there to Clearfield Co., Pa. At that time this part of the State was a wilderness.

He settled on Clearfield Creek, one mile below Glen Hope; cleared out a farm, built a dam on Clearfield creek, and erected two sawmills. Their nearest grist-mill was 40 miles distant. Mr. Keagy was a local preacher in the Methodist Episcopal church.

He was present when Frances Asbury preached the funeral sermon of Martin Boehm, in Boehm's chapel, 6 miles south of Lancaster city, in 1813. He was asked by the bishop to address the people. He arose to speak, but was so overcome with emotion that he sat down and wept, in which the entire audience joined. The scene was one never to be forgotten. Mr. Keagy was an estimable man, and his house was one of the bishop's homes. As a preacher, Bishop Asbury was great on funeral occasions. On this occasion, he far transcended himself. His whole person seemed to glow with seraphic fire, as he portrayed the virtues of his friend, whom he declared being dead "yet speaketh," "An Israelite indeed, in whom there was no guile."

Abraham Keagy was engaged in the milling business at the time of the war with Great Britain in 1812-5, on the Delaware river at Newcastle, and it is believed that the danger from the close proximity of a foreign enemy had everything to do with his removal from there, to a place of greater security, into the mountains of Pennsylvania. All of his sons and daughters were born in Pennsylvania, with the exception of the youngest, and all but this one in Lancaster Co.

Abraham Keagy was killed by being thrown from a sulky while traveling in Huntingdon Co., Pa., Sept. 23, 1820, and was buried near Williamsburg, Blair Co., Pa., aged 63 y., 2 m. and 19 d.

Barbara Keagy (nee Boehm), died March 9, 1828, aged 66 y., 2 m. and 27 d. She died on the old homestead one mile below Glen Hope, and is buried in what is known as "Keagy's Graveyard," near the same place. She is said to have been a woman of superior mental and moral worth and the purest Christian character.

(6) JOHN MILLER KEAGY, M. D., was born in Strasburg, Lancaster Co., Pa., Aug. 31, 1792, and died in the city of Philadelphia, on the 13th of January, 1837, and is buried in "Laurel Hill cemetery," Philadelphia, Pa. Owing to the delicate constitution of the subject of these remarks he was designed in early life for some one of the learned professions. He was accordingly placed under the care of the professor of languages in the University of Pennsylvania, with whom, on account of his devotion to study, and his attainments, he was a favorite pupil, and with whom he completed his classical studies. In 1819 he published a series of articles in the "Baltimore Chronicle," which he reprinted at Harrisburg, Pa., in 1824. In 1827 he published his "Pestalozzian Primer" at Harrisburg, Pa., a book made up largely of the more modern object lessons, but under the name of "Thinking Lessons and Lessons in Generalization." In 1827 Dr. Keagy opened a classical academy in Harrisburg, Pa., where new studies and modes of instruction were introduced, such as the natural sciences taught orally in an excellent conversational style, for there were no proper books at that period. Besides being a classical scholar, the Doctor knew Hebrew, German and French. He was well informed in the principles of mechanics, and insisted that steam boilers should have more fire surface.

Had he been brought up as a machinist he would have invented "tubular boilers," he having constructed a copper model composed partly of tubes. After some years of instructing at Harrisburg, Pa., he went to Philadelphia to take charge of the "Friends' High School" and while there he was elected classical professor at Dickinson College at Carlisle, Pa. Shortly after completing his education at the University of Pennsylvania he was appointed professor of English literature in "Asbury College," Baltimore, Md. One of his pupils, when teaching at Harrisburg, Pa., was the late Prof. S. S. Haldeman, of Chickies, Lancaster Co., Pa., whose fame in a scientific and literary respect is worldwide.

Dr. Keagy was deeply and practically religious, a Methodist, but entirely free from the demonstrative and noisy characteristics of this denomination at that day. He had charitable feelings toward all other denominations, and frequently attended the Catholic Church, with those of his pupils of that faith, where he conformed to the acts of the congregation, and taught his pupils that politeness required such conformity when visiting the churches of various denominations.

The various important relations which Dr. Keagy sustained in the literary world, his former connection with the Asbury College in Baltimore, as one of the professors of that institution and for several years the efficient superintendent of the "House of Refuge," Philadelphia, his election to the professorship of natural sciences in Dickinson College (which, on account of failing health, he was compelled to decline) and other situations, which he so advantageously occupied, are sufficiently illustrative of that intellectual worth which his scholastic attainments so justly merited.

But it is not so much a literary as it is a religious testimony which the writer wishes to bear to the character of Dr. Keagy. His lofty attainments may excite our admiration, but his moral worth commands our reverence, and calls for our imitation. Human knowledge is not generally sanctifying; it is too often polluting—and there is a knowledge of Christ, too, which does not destroy either the guilt or power of sin, and which leaves us in doubt and uncertainty as to the favor of the reconciled God, but in the case of Dr. Keagy the “knowledge which puffeth up” was overruled by that which is divine, and which endureth unto everlasting life. At the age of fifteen he became a partaker of the “Grace of God which bringeth salvation,” and attached himself to the Methodist Episcopal Church, of which he continued a worthy and devoted member until the day of his death.

Cleaving to the Savior, on whom he had believed with full purpose of heart, he continued to adorn his profession and to study in the school of Christ, those lessons of grace, which his whole life declared he had learned in faith, love and obedience.

He was always ready to do good, and seldom, except when it became too obvious to mistake, inclined to believe evil of any one. He was gentlemanly in his habits and manners, and never allowed prejudice, passion or envy to disturb the serenity of his well-balanced mind. In private and domestic life especially did he exhibit the virtues and graces of the Christian temper. He was an affectionate and kind husband, father and friend. He died as he lived, in peace with all mankind, and as we have a strong assurance in favor of God, through the merits of his Son Jesus Christ, upon whom he rested all his hopes of salvation.

A few days before his death, a friend being alone with him, in conversation asked him whether he still considered the Scriptures of the Old and the New Testaments as the word of God, and could rely upon its promises now, as he used to do. His ready answer was, “I do, I do. The Bible is the book of books, the book of God. The more I read it the more I feel its influence and am delighted with the sublimity of its style.

In its address to degenerate man it is the least artificial, the most simple, and understands the secret springs of the human heart infinitely better than any book that has ever been written. In the perusal of profane authors, I have often been struck with their strained efforts at sublimity. When they are contrasted with the writings of the Scriptures, the grandeur, majesty and authority with which they speak, leaving the finest of the profane authors at an immense distance, I am constrained to say that the Bible is of divine origin; that its writers could never have received those maxims and precepts by mere speculation and abstract thinking; else some, at least, of the Greeks and Romans would have written in the same strain as did Moses, David, Isaiah and other of the Jewish poets and writers.

In the best specimens of ancient writings that have descended to us we find nothing compared to the sentiments, language and morals of the Scriptures. If they did not everywhere reprove man for his transgressions and place them before his face as if in a mirror, so as to check his madness and alarm his conscience, by warning him of his iniquity, and threatening him of a coming judgment, they would be prized above all price as the most remarkable relic of antiquity, as the most grand and sublime of all compositions, by every class of mankind."

"In the triumphs of such a faith, leading to a review of the evidences of our holy religion, and of the immortality which those evidences touch, Dr. Keagy entered into rest, leaving an estimable widow and several children, with many friends, to mourn their loss."

In the example of Dr. Keagy there was much to imitate, and little to shun. "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace."

1. Thomas J. Keagy, never m.; he was an invalid for years, and spent most of his time in the reading room in the public libraries in Baltimore City. He d. about two years ago (1886) in Baltimore City, at the home of his sister, Mrs. Rebecca McPheeters.

2. Ellen Keagy, d. ———, in her young and beautiful womanhood, very suddenly of heart disease, at the home of Dr. J. B. Ard, in Lewistown, Pa.

Ard d. in Baltimore City June 21, 1880; is buried by the side of her first husband in Laurel Hill cemetery, Philadelphia, Pa., aged about 74 or 75 y.

3. Rebecca Keagy, b. about 1836, was m. to Mr. J. G. McPheeters, of St. Louis, Mo., in the winter of 1854. The fruits of this union are two daughters:

1. Ella McPheeters, b. ———; is unm., and is now (1888) in Europe with her sister, Mrs. Florence Padelford.

2. Florence McPheeters, b. ———; m. Edward M. Padelford, of Georgia, a gentleman of large wealth. They have one child. Mrs. Padelford and her sister, Ella McPheeters, are now (1888) in Europe, where they spend most of their time. At this time (1888, March 9th,) they are at Pau, France.

Mrs. Rebecca McPheeters (nee Keagy) inherited from her father a love for languages and classics and was a woman of more than ordinary intelligence and acquirements. She devoted much of her time to the culture and training of her children, and with the assistance of competent masters, they were educated by herself—neither of them ever was in a school room save at home, hence they grew up accomplished girls, and like Job's daughters, it was said of them, "There were none more beautiful in all the land." Her husband, Mr. J. G.

McPheeters, was a brother of the Rev. Samuel B. McPheeters, pastor of the Pine Street Presbyterian Church, in St. Louis in 1851 to 1861, both being sons of the Rev. Dr. William McPheeters, of Raleigh, N. C. The McPheeters family are of the highest respectability, and of the most cultured and refined to be found in this country.

Mrs. Rebecca (Keagy) McPheeters died quite suddenly at Newport, R. I., Aug. 27, 1886, where she had gone to spend the summer months.

They were married at her father's home near Glen Hope, Clearfield Co., Pa., and settled near Carlisle, Pa.; lived there a number of years and then moved to Baltimore, Md., where she died. They had three sons and four daughters.

(8) Adam Litzenborg Keagy was a graduate of a medical college at Baltimore, Md. Shortly after his graduation the cholera broke out as an epidemic in New Orleans. There was a call for physicians and Dr. Keagy offered his services and gave his time and services gratuitous until the scourge had disappeared in that city to make its appearance at Jackson, Miss., followed by an epidemic of yellow fever in 1832. Prompted by the noblest philanthropy, and fearing nothing, not even death or disease in the discharge of a solemn duty, he labored day and night, unremittingly exercising his skill to baffle the dread disease, and alleviating suffering, his only reward the consciousness of duty done. As soon as the scourge subsided in one place, only to appear in another, we find him hastening to that, where he labored unceasingly, and at last he himself falls a victim to the dread disease, going down to death in the prime and glory of young manhood, beloved and lamented by all who knew him. Gladly would his friends have brought his body back to his native State for burial among his kindred, but that could not be on account of the nature of the disease that terminated his life. In an unknown grave on the banks of the majestic Mississippi he sleeps the dreamless sleep of the dead, leaving behind him a memory fragrant with all the virtues that adorn human nature. One cannot help but wonder what the noonday splendor would be of such a man, whose early morning was so noble, so self-sacrificing, so good. Dr. Keagy was highly educated and possessed poetic talent of a high order, and had he lived would no doubt have acquired medical and literary fame.

Isaac Keagy, after the death of his mother, was taken by his mother's sister, his Aunt Mary Jane Douglass, who cared for him in childhood and youth, and also educated him, and when he grew up to manhood and married, she made her home with him during his life time. Cases are extremely rare where a foster mother will manifest the care and solicitude that this mother did. An unusual affection existed between them that only death could sunder. Isaac Keagy became a printer and for years was the foreman of the "Penna. Telegraph," published at Harrisburg, Pa., then owned by McKinley & Lesure, who were also the State printers at that time. He also had a job office of his own, where he did a great deal of fancy, fine work, for which he had earned an enviable reputation. He was refined in his manners, courteous, sociable and obliging, and was held in high esteem by all who knew him. He was a fine singer, and took part in an entertainment in Harrisburg under the world renowned Jenny Lind.

In the year 1848, Sept. 28, he m. Sarah Jane Daugherty, of Harrisburg, Pa., a lady of refined manner and excellent endowments of mind and heart. After two years and four months of happy wedded life, he d. Jan. 6, 1851, leaving one child, Emma, seven months old, who when she was in her sixteenth year, m. Mr. Wilson Ringle, a locomotive engineer, who has been in the employment of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. for 44 years, which fully establishes his reputation as an engineer, and his character as a trusty, reliable man. Mr. Ringle's home is at Derry Station, P. R. R., in Westmoreland Co., Pa. The issue of this marriage, made Aug. 12, 1867, is as follows:

Calvin Paul Ringle, b. July 1, 1869; d. Aug. 12, 1892.

William Wilson Ringle, b. May 27, 1872.

Edward McConnell Ringle, b. July 19, 1874.

In —, 1855, Mrs. Keagy m. her second husband, William Boyden, who was b. in England, in sound of the "Bow-Bells," Nov. 18, 1812. He was the only son of an only son. In his eleventh year he was sent to a collegiate school where he remained until his nineteenth year. His mother d. when he was 12 years old. After leaving school he and a school mate resolved to come to America, of which they had heard and read so much. This step his father opposed, but in a short time he found a way and the opportunity to go, and in due time landed in New York City, and had a good time as long as his money lasted. He then apprenticed himself to learn pattern making and millwrighting. He finally located in Reading, Pa., and started a machine shop. He was first m. to a Miss Rose Devlin, by whom he had five children. The two youngest ones and the wife and mother d. in 1837. About this time a great flood swept all his property away. He then went to Harrisburg, Pa., and began life anew, where he met, in after years, the widow of Isaac Keagy, to whom he was m. in 1855, by the Rev. Charles Hay. The issue of this union was three children, viz: George Albert, b. July 18, 1856, in the city of Altoona, Pa.; Margaretta Alice, b. April 18, 1859; Benjamin Franklin, b. Jan. 19, 1867.

George Albert Boyden, b. July 18, 1856, at Altoona, Pa.; m., Oct. 2, 1886, to Harriet Virginia Galloway, who was b. in Baltimore City, Md., Oct. 2, 1857, and has four children, viz: Beatrice Virginia, b. April 25, 1887; George Albert, b. Dec. 15, 1889; Donald Galloway, b. Aug. 19, 1892; a son b. April 26, 1895, not named at this date (1898).

Mr. George A. Boyden's early life was spent in attending the public schools in Altoona, Pa. Afterwards attended St. Francis College at Loretto, Pa. While still in his teens he served an apprenticeship at pattern making, and in the foundry and machine shops, in Altoona, and fitted himself for a mechanical engineer and architect, which professions he studied.

He became interested in patents, and studied the Patent Laws, and practiced before the U. S. Patent Office for several years. His health failing in this business from too close confinement, he quit it and turned his attention to the invention of air brakes for railroad cars, and is the inventor of the well-known and highly meritorious brake which bears his name, and the rival of the Westinghouse air brake. Mr. Boyden is the president of the Boyden Power Brake Co., Baltimore, Md., and is actively engaged in the manufacture of the same, and has thus far successfully rendered void all the efforts of the Westinghouse Air Brake Co. to show that his device is an infringement upon theirs. The issue involves millions of dollars. Recently the last and highest court has sustained Mr. Boyden's claims.

Margaretta Alice Boyden, m., May 9, 1888, to Robert Gibson, b. March 16, 1863. Had one child, d in infancy.

Benjamin Franklin Boyden is a mechanical engineer and draughtsman, now in the employ of the Boyden Brake Co., at Baltimore City, Md.: is unm. at this date (1898). He was b. at Altoona, Pa., Jan. 19, 1867.

Mary Keagy, the eldest child of Rudolph Keagy and Sarah (Switzer) Keagy, m. John L. Metcalfe Sept. 13, 1853, who was b. in England Jan. 8, 1831, and came with his father's family to America in his early boyhood, and settled in the "Corner," southwest of Mercersburg, Pa., about 7 miles. When he arrived at the proper age he apprenticed himself to Messrs. Shepler, Berger & Wistar, millwrights, which business he followed for a score of years, part of which were in partnership with Henry Shepler, one of the above-named firm. In 1855 he purchased the old Fahrney property near Quincy, Pa., and manufactured agricultural implements and other machinery. He was the inventor of the "Metcalfe Threshing Machine," manufactured by him, and afterward by the Frick Co., of Waynesboro, Pa., with whom he became identified at that time, filling the position of superintendent in the woodworking department. He withdrew from the Frick Co., and returned to his old place at Quincy, and in a few years built up a prosperous business, which embraced engine building. This gave birth to the formation of a company called "The Metcalfe Manufacturing Co.," and which was located at Shippensburg, Pa. This proved a failure because of the peculiar stagnation of business which then began, and which lasted up till 1897. He then rebuilt the shops at Quincy, Pa., and with his son, John T. Metcalfe, engaged in the manufacture of engines and other machinery, in which he was engaged at the time of his death, which occurred Aug. 26, 1894. His education was very limited, such as the country schools in the rural districts then afforded, but he was a man of good sound judgment, a good mechanic, a model husband, a kind father, and a steadfast friend. The issue of this marriage was three sons: John T. Metcalfe, b. June 20, 1854; Wm. H., b. Nov. 8, 1856; d. in infancy; Aaron L., b. March 30, 1862.

Mrs. Mary Ann (Keagy) Metcalfe d. Dec. 8, 1898.

John T. Metcalfe, m. Nancy E. Fahrney, of Quincy township, Franklin Co., Pa., July 31, 1875, who was b. May 21, 1855, and had 2 children: Laura Belle, b. March 31, 1879, and Ira Garfield, b. April 22, 1882.

Laura Bell Metcalfe, d. Feb. 3, 1899. On Jan. 20th, while engaged in ironing, her clothing took fire from some coals that fell unobserved from the stove, receiving such injury as proved fatal. She was a dutiful, obedient daughter, and highly esteemed by all who knew her.

Nancy A. (Fahrney) Metcalfe, d. Nov. 8, 1888, and John T. Metcalfe, m. Judith R. Berger, b. June 12, 1859, and m. Feb. 13, 1890, and have one child, Mary L., b. Dec. 1, 1892.

Mr. Metcalfe is the owner of the works, consisting of a machine shop and foundry, formerly owned and operated by his father at Quiney, Pa., and is of a fine mechanical turn of mind, good financial ability, wide awake and up-to-date in all the improvements of the age. Mrs. Judith Metcalfe is a worthy member of the Tunker church, takes great interest in the Temperance cause and all matters relating to it, and that have in view the welfare of mankind. Her husband is also a member of the same society.

Aaron L. Metcalfe m. Miss Lottie Hoffman, of Waynesboro, Pa., b. Sept. 29, 1868, and was m. May 15, 1884, and have nine children.

Addie Belle, b. Feb. 7, 1885.

John Ernest, b. March 18, 1886.

Frederick Leo, b. Aug. 17, 1887; d. ———.

Ruby Viola, b. Jan. 28, 1889.

Allen Franklin, b. Feb. 16, 1891.

Margie Beatrice, b. Nov. 6, 1892.

Milton Hoffman, b. Sept. 17, 1894.

George Keagy, b. Sept. 12, 1895.

Judith Maehala, b. Sept. 14, 1896.

Aaron L. Metcalfe served as an apprentice in the Frick company works at Waynesboro, Pa., and was in the employ of that company for several years, erecting ice-making machinery. He is now (1898) conducting a shop of his own, selling and repairing bicycles and other light machinery. He, too, inherited the mechanical talent of his father, and keeps up with the procession in every advancement made in improved appliances. Mrs. Metcalfe is a woman of surprising energy, great industry, and exhibits rare good judgment in the government of her household. Both are members of the Tunker church.

Rudolph Keagy, the eldest son of Rudolph Keagy and Sarah (Sweitzer) Keagy, d. at 13 y. of age, at Hagerstown, Md., June 2, 1848. He was a precocious child. He acquired knowledge remarkably quick, and seemed never to forget anything. He was a mathematical genius, and had the faculty of solving any problem in arithmetic after once reading the rules. He possessed fine mechanical ideas for one of his age. His physical courage knew no fear, and was equalled by his moral courage. He would not allow larger boys to impose upon smaller ones. His sense of right was clear, and his judgment correct, far above one of his years. He was a prodigy of physical strength, and I once saw him throw a much larger boy than himself clear over his head in a wrestling bout. On another occasion he and a smaller boy were bathing in the Antietam creek, east of Hagerstown, Md., when a young man came in to bathe, and seizing the little boy ducked him under the water and wellnigh drowned him. The brutality of the act aroused the anger of Rudolph, and disregardless of the difference in their years and size, he pounced upon the fellow and with herculean strength he compelled him to let the little boy go, and then in turn threw the fellow down and half drowned him before he let him go. The fellow fearing to renew the combat, left the water and went his way. On another occasion a poor colored boy was made the target of abuse by four white boys all larger than himself. He at once took the side of the weaker one, and defied any one to molest him. He could not tolerate any species of cruelty to dumb animals. He was the kindest of brothers. When he died I was away from home filling his place on a farm as errand boy for an old lady and gentleman. They came for me on horseback, and I rode home behind the messenger. I was so grieved that I cried out in loud and frantic anguish, so that all who lived along the roadway were alarmed at my intense and inconsolable grief. It seemed to me as if utter darkness had over-spread everything, and all I cared for was forever lost. No brother was ever loved more fondly than he.

Franklin Keagy served an apprenticeship two years and as journeyman three years at millwrighting, in Pennsylvania and Maryland, and assisted in equipping the steam sash, door and blind works of Messrs. Shepler & Clark, at Chambersburg, Pa., established in 1857, working in the shop as a journeyman until the burning of the town in 1864. The extraordinary demand for manufactured lumber, created by the destruction of the town, taxed the establishment to its fullest capacity, and the proprietors appointed him as superintendent of the works, which position he filled to the entire satisfaction of the owners, continuing in that capacity until the year 1875, when he resigned to engage in the profession of an architect and builder, having served his first employer twenty-two years. In his profession as an architect he has shown marked ability in taste and construction, always preferring utility to mere display, and despising sham and dishonest construction. From early boyhood he was fond of books, and in them found his best companions. His reading was not confined to any particular line or class of literature, but embraced history, biography, poetry, and scientific works. He was fond of mathematics, and took great interest in trigonometry, geometry and mensuration. He has always had a great desire to know what has been and what is going on, on this big earth, and more particularly, what has happened in this his native land. Yet he has always felt that "No pent up continent contracts our powers.

The whole boundless universe is ours."

He thinks that he can truthfully say that there are few men who are better informed in the history of their country, or the world at large. Politically, he took great interest in elections long before he had a vote. His first realization of what slavery was occurred in this way: His father was a miller by trade, and in 1846 and 7 lived on the Antietam creek at Bechtel's Mills, Md. Across the creek and close to the mills there lived a colored man, his wife and a son and daughter. The father and mother were free, but the children were slaves owned by one Gabriel Hanna. The boy was about 12 years of age. One day as this boy and himself were out in the field playing, his master came and took him from his home, to go into service for his master. He shall never forget the look of agony on that poor black boy's face. It was fully equalled by the terror with which it struck him, and the eternal hatred of slavery that it incited in his mind and heart. He never ceased in his efforts for its overthrow, until 18 years later when the institution expired, a victim of the folly and rashness of its friends. "God works in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform." Little did he think that day that he would live to see it abolished.

About the year 1876 he first thought of and began to inquire "who his fathers were." He had heard his father often speak of his brothers and uncles in Lancaster Co., Pa., but beyond that he knew nothing. Had he known in the beginning the difficulties he would encounter he would have shrunk from the undertaking, but having once put his hand to the plow he dare not turn backward, nor has his toils and labor been without some measure of reward. The joy and gladness that have shone in the eyes of those of his kinsmen, who through his efforts have learned "who their fathers were," has soothed many a weary hour. He has heard the oft-repeated "God bless you" from the trembling lips of hoary age, as they listened to the names of sires and grandsires; "names they loved to hear, and which were carved for many a year on the tomb." After he had been at this work a decade or so he learned that others of the same name were making the same inquiry and had organized a "Biographical Society" which had the same object in view in the western States. The annual meetings of this society are best known as reunions of "the Keagy Relationship" and which have done much to promote the knowledge we have of one another, and to strengthen the bonds of brotherhood among the scattered tribes.

In 1860, May 15th, he was married to Ann Eliza Funk, of

MARY ELIZA (KEAGY) PATTERSON.

KATHARINE KEAGY.

Henry Keagy was a soldier in the Civil War. He enlisted in the darkest period of the mighty conflict. He enlisted Feb. 3, 1864, in Co. L, 21st Penn'a Cavalry, under Col. Knowles, Gen. Gregg's brigade, Gen. Warren's corps. He was in nine engagements—Stony Creek, Poplar Grove, Church, Yellow House, Weldon Railroad and at Petersburg. In one of the engagements he had a horse shot under him while retreating, and but for the timely aid of a comrade he would have been captured by the enemy. He was once wounded in the leg slightly by the fragment of a shell. In early life he was a good boy and was a member of the Lutheran Church in early boyhood, in which faith he continued till his death. He was an earnest, sincere, humble Christian man. During his service in the army in the war for the preservation of the Union, he never for a moment forgot that he was a soldier of the cross. At his home he held family worship morning and evening and this he did regularly during his service in the army. It mattered not where he was, where the hour arrived, in camp or field, or on picket duty, he would perform his devotions, and such was the respect and esteem for him, so convinced were his comrades of his sincerity, shown by his every act that they would cease their talk or laughter when he began his prayers, which were always audible. Said a comrade of his to the writer: "He prayed for his family, for his friends, his country, his comrades and their loved ones, and also for the enemy, and invoked the God of battles to bring peace, love and charity and happiness to all mankind."

His faith in God was of that kind that trusted all to Him, and which no calamity could shake, no terror over-awe.

"His was a faith that would not shrink,

Though pressed by every foe;

That would not tremble on the brink

Of any earthly woe."

During his residence at Elk Ridge Landing, Md., a great flood destroyed the village and all his household goods were swept away, he and his family barely escaping with their lives. But none of these things disturbed his faith or the even temper of his mind. Wherever duty called he was found.

The consequences he left to God. He arose from a sick bed only a few days before President Lincoln's call for volunteers in 1864. He told his wife his country had called him and "he would go and help preserve the nation, the best government under the sun." He was so tender-hearted, so sympathetic his friends had many fears that he would quail in the trying ordeal of battle. How groundless these fears—more than a score of his comrades who were by his side in the deadly charge or hurried retreat say: "There was none more dutiful; no cooler, braver man ever drew a sabre or shouldered a carbine than Henry Keagy. You may well be proud of your brother, he is a Christian soldier." In June, 1889, he moved from Chambersburg, Pa., to Canton, Ohio, where he died May 25, 1893, and was brought back to his old home and buried by the side of his two children in Cedar Grove cemetery, Chambersburg, Pa. His widow still (1899) resides in Canton.

He was poor in this world's goods, but rich in all the practical virtues that make up a grand manhood. In all of his boyhood or later manhood I never heard him utter a word that could not have been said in the presence of any child or the most refined lady. His speech was pure because his heart was pure.

Samuel H. Keagy, eldest son of Henry, m. Aug. 22, 1889, to Iantha Ellen Stenger, of London, Pa., b. June 29, 1868. To them were born three daughters and one son: Sarah Margaretta, b. Franklin Wm. Keagy, m. Harriet T. Bevier, of Huron Co., Ohio, Dec. 19, 1895; b. —, and have one child, Buelah Mabelle, b. April 19, 1897. Franklin Wm. and at Findlay, Ohio, and educated himself for the office of the ministry in the Methodist E. church, in which he is to-day an earnest and worthy worker.

Keagy lived at Canton, O.; was in the employment of the Dueber Watch Mfg. Co., at Canton, and was regarded as a skilled workman. He d. April 4, 1899.

Rudolph Hays and Martin Luther Keagy are at this time single and reside with their mother at Canton, Ohio. Occupation photographer.

George W. Keagy, the 4th son of Rudolph Keagy and Sarah (Sweitzer) Keagy, m. Louisa Snowberger, of Quincy township, Franklin Co., Pa., b. May 25, 1846, and was m. Dec. 29, 1863. George W. Keagy is by trade a millwright, having served an apprenticeship under his brother-in-law, the late John L. Metcalfe. Of late years he has been in the employ of the "Geiser Company," at Waynesboro, Pa., but his home is at the "Nunnery," near Quincy, Pa. In Oct., 1862, he was drafted, and reported on the 16th of the same month for duty, and was assigned to Co. G, of the 158th regiment, Col. David B. McKibben, commander, and in Gen. Spinola's brigade, under Gen. Foster. He served nine months, the full term of the draft; part of the time in Newbern, N. C., and the rest of the time at Little Washington, N. C. He was mustered into service on Nov. 4, 1862, and mustered out in Aug., 1863. He had charge of a gun in the fortifications around Little Washington and is said to have made the best shot at a target, two miles distant from the fort. Geo. W. Keagy is a member of

3. Anna May Keagy, d. July 12, 1893, in her young and beautiful womanhood. She was one of those few self-sacrificing persons who never get weary in well-doing. Her industry was untiring, and with it she possessed rare good judgment for one of her years. When her cousin, John T. Metcalfe's young wife died she took charge of his house and his two motherless children, and brought them up with such care that they loved her as a mother, and when he married again the children were loth to give her up. Her sweetness of disposition, her gentleness and kindness, and disposition to oblige, made her the loved one in any circle of old or young. The world can ill afford to spare one so well fitted by nature to discharge the duties of human life. But this world was too cold, too rude for so gentle a soul as hers. Her memory is embalmed in the hearts of her friends, and those who knew her best bedew her grave with tears.

The Kendig family being one of the seven families that first settled in what is now Lancaster Co., Pa. They therefore cast lots, to see who should go, and the lot fell on "Hanse" Herr, who was their minister. They felt sad, not wishing to part with him, and not willing for him to go. (11) ELIZABETH KEAGY, a daughter of Abraham Keagy, "the beloved son" of "Hanse," was b. ———; m. Adam Litzenborg. It appears they both died early without issue.

JOHN KEAGEY, the 5th son of Abraham Keagey, "the beloved son of "Hanse" or John Keagy, was born Jan. 20, 1770, and died in Canada, Oct. 24, 1860. He was married the first time to Elizabeth Smith, who was born Jan. 2, 1773, and died Jan. 19, 1823. He married the second time Magdalene Neff, a widow, Oct. 9, 1828. She was born July 30, 1781, and died March 15, 1874.* The first wife was the aunt of A. Herr Smith, Esq., of Lancaster City, Pa.

The following sketch was contributed by Richard Jones to the Christian Guardian, published at Toronto, Canada, dated Nov. 21, 1860:

“In Memoriam: In West Flamboro, on the Dundas Circuit, John Keagey, aged 90 years, 9 months and 4 days. He was born on the 20th day of January, 1770, and died October 24, 1860. His native place was Lancaster Co., Pa. He emigrated to Canada in the year 1800; his overland journey was through a trackless wilderness, occupying weeks and attended with great labor and peril. He bought a large tract of land in the neighborhood of Dundas and Hamilton, then almost unknown, now populous and flourishing cities. He was a farmer by occupation and greatly esteemed for his intelligence and high moral worth. One of his sons was a prominent member of the Canadian Parliament. Early in life the deceased attached himself to the Methodist Church, and continued to the last a firm and consistent member. For more than fifty years the itinerant preachers made his house their home, and under his hospitable roof ever found a warm and generous welcome. The deceased was connected by blood and marriage with many of the most prominent families in Lancaster Co., Pa., and was an uncle of the late A. Herr Smith, of Lancaster City, Pa.

“Mr. John Keagey was not one of those given to change, for after he had selected his home on a farm in West Flamboro, he never left it to reside in any other place, until summoned to take possession of a mansion in the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Thus for sixty years he lived with the same people, going in and out before them and their children, and children’s children, who grew up around him. In comparatively early life he gave himself to the Lord, and then to his people. From the time he decided to be pious to the day of his death his walk and conversation were such as might be expected of one who was determined to love and serve God with a sincere heart. The proofs which he gave of his sincerity were of the most convincing and practical character. He highly prized the ordinances of religion, giving his family and neighbors clear practical illustrations of the value he placed upon them by his regular attendance upon them, so long as his health and strength would allow him to do so. Class meetings and the 'Holy Supper' were so highly valued by him that when his great age and many infirmities prevented him from going to the house of the Lord, he had the class-meetings in his own house, and often the members of his class united there with him and his family in celebrating the 'Holy Supper.' Such seasons were times of special refreshing from the presence of the Lord to all who were permitted to communicate with him while he was able to attend to the duties of his station in life. As a man of business he was industrious and economical, and at the same time liberal. He found godliness to be profitable in all things. For the Lord blessed the labor of his hands, giving him enough of this world's goods for the support of his own family in great respectability and something to spare for the poor, the widows, and the fatherless, none of whom, when in distress, ever left his door without relief.

* Mrs. Neff had a daughter to her former husband named Martha or Matta, about 7 years of age when her mother became John Keagey’s (Sr.) second wife. Matta married the Rev. Peter German, of Cainsville, Canada, whose son, Rev. J. F. German, M. A., D. D., resides at Toronto, Canada.

For more than fifty years his home was a home for our itinerant ministers; doubtless many of the older ministers of our church, who are yet living, and who were among the pioneers of the great work which God has accomplished and is still carrying on in Western Canada will remember with gratitude the cheerful hospitality of Father Keagey, and his courtesy and kindness to the preachers' families. He was disposed to have the ministers and their families as comfortable as his own family, and always generously contributed to their support. All the institutions of the church were cared for by him, and when our missionary society was organized he was one of the first to contribute to its funds on this circuit, and he continued to take an interest in its successes up to the day of his death.

Several of his last years were years of great suffering, but during his protracted sufferings he neither murmured nor complained. His mind was eminently peaceful and happy. At length the weary and worn wheels of life stood still, and almost without a struggle or a groan he sweetly fell asleep in Jesus, going down to the grave in a good old age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season. 'Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright, for the end of that man is peace.' "

John Keagey's (Sr.) children are as follows:

1. Jacob Keagey, b. April 8, 1792, in Lancaster Co., Pa.
2. John Keagey, b. Nov. 22, 1794, in Lancaster Co., Pa.
3. Magdalene Keagey, b. Nov. 26, 1796, in Lancaster Co., Pa.
4. Catharine Keagey, b. Jan. 11, 1801, in Canada.
5. Nancy (Ann), b. June 16, 1805, in Canada.
6. Elizabeth Keagey, b. June 24, 1808, in Canada.
7. Abraham Keagey, b. March 23, 1812; d. at 23 y., in 1835; not married.
8. Mary B. Keagey, b. Jan. 14, 1815.

1. Jacob Keagey had two hundred acres of land given him by his father, located about twenty miles west of Dundas, on which he had been working; he returned to his father's house; remained a few days, then started off as the family thought for his farm, which he never reached again. Some one who knew him saw him going toward Niagara, and that is all that has ever been learned about him. It is thought that he was killed and his body secreted, as he was a man of excellent habits, and of the best moral character, and of such domestic nature as to bind him in tender bonds to family and friends. No trace of him has ever been discovered, thereby confirming the worst fears of his friends regarding his hapless fate. This last visit to his home was in May, 1816.

Jacob and John Keagey were both in the military service and participated in two engagements in the war of 1812; fought on Canadian soil, and were on the English side.

3. John Binkley Keagey was educated at Victoria College, which institution he entered as a divinity student and graduated; soon after that he entered the ministry in the M. E. Church, and traveled one year on the Bradford Circuit north of Toronto, Canada, and then moved to his old home on the mountain above Dundas. His father dying intestate and his mother and eldest brother being dead, he settled up his father's estate in a very satisfactory manner, receiving from the heirs a handsome family Bible, containing resolutions of love and esteem as expressive of their appreciation of his ability, integrity and unselfishness in executing his trust.

In 1873 he sold the old home and moved to Dundas, where he was engaged to teach in the Methodist College just started there for young men. He remained there one year teaching and lecturing and preaching, until his health gave way; he then decided upon a complete change and went with his family to New York to spend the summer there, and during his stay there he concluded to try the sea shore, and went to Ocean Grove, N. J. There he regained strength, and preached whenever opportunity offered; he seemed to be inspired by the scenery around him, and often was heard to say: "What a lovely place to go to heaven from; it is as near like it as it can be." About the end of August he took typhoid fever, and in spite of all the best medical skill he sank to rest, in holy triumph; his physicians declaring he did not die, but that he was "translated."

The London Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada, held in St. Paul's church, in the city of St. Catharines, Ontario, in 1876, has the following notice on their minutes:

"John Binkley Keagey, B. A., was born on the old homestead near Dundas, in the year 1839, of parents very highly esteemed in that region of country; his conversion occurred at 14 years of age. Shortly afterwards he was sent to Victoria College where he remained a faithful student till his graduation. In 1862 he entered upon the work of the Christian ministry in which he remained about 5 years. In a supernumerary relation, he continued to labor untiringly for Christ, a portion of nearly every Sabbath being spent in preaching the 'Word of Life.' When the Dundas Wesleyan Institute was opened, he accepted a place as teacher, which he filled with acceptance and ability, till impaired health obliged him to resign. Through most of the winter of 1874-5 he was a great sufferer, but in his affliction, he was patient and peaceful, testifying to the power of grace to save and to sustain. As soon as possible he was again at his loved employment of striving to save souls. In the summer of 1875 he went to Ocean Grove, N. J., for the purpose of seeking health amid the circumstances of great spiritual privilege. There, while he spent his strength in labors more abundant, he was seized with typhoid fever and despite the utmost endeavors of the most skillful physicians, he speedily yielded to the inevitable disease. During his last sickness his mind was often obscured, but in his rational moments his trust in Christ was firm and his experience perfectly satisfactory. He died on the first day of September, 1875, in the 37th year of his age. Brother Keagey was a man of great worth. One of the most marked features of his character was his devotion to duty; whatever he undertook to do he did most heartily. His love of truth and sincerity was very strong. He had clear, honest convictions, and was not afraid manfully to express them; his love for the Church and the cause of God, had all the fixedness of principle and all the fervor of passion. Whether preaching the gospel, working on his farm, or engaged in teaching, he tried to do it for 'God's glory.' He was always ready at the call of duty to preach the gospel, visit the sick and dying, or bury the dead. During the last year of his life he undertook to do more than he was able, for his whole soul seemed to be inflamed with a desire for the salvation of the unsaved and for the welfare of the Church. At Ocean Grove he said: 'What a place to go to heaven from! It breathes of Christ. The power of faith lifts my spirits up.' When told by Dr. Stokes, the pastor, that unceasing prayer was going up for his recovery, he said: 'My work is done; I am going home; your prayers are being answered, or will be. God is holding up my wife. He will keep her and my little children.' 'If God should call you, what then?' some one asked. He replied: 'I have no will but God's will; that was settled when I was 14 years old; I have given myself, wife and children to him, and he has accepted them; I am all his.' Thus passed away one of our most amiable and faithful brethren, who during the last year of his life grew rapidly in mental and spiritual stature; and if his sun went down at mid-day, the splendor of the sitting was more glorious than the effulgence of the noon-tide."

End of Abraham Keagy's descendants, the beloved son of "Hause."

BOOK FIRST. CHAPTER THIRD.

RUDOLPH KÄGY, the third son of John Rudolph Kägy (Hanse Kägy) was born about the year 1723-5.

The only authentic record of this son of Hanse Kägy that we can find up to this time (1899) is: First, he is named in his father's will, bearing date May 8, 1748. By the conditions of this will he (Rudolph) and his eldest brother, Jacob, inherited a tract of six hundred acres of land on the west side of the Susquehanna River, joining Yorktown, now the city of York, York Co., Pa. This tract of land was afterwards sold by Jacob and Rudolph Kägy to James Wright, John Wright, William Willes, John Hughston and James Ewing and Patience, his wife, and Susannah, the wife of John Hughston, daughters of John Wright, deceased. This deed was dated June 8, 1774, and is signed: Jacob Kägy and Richard Kägy. The name Richard being an alias.

The next time, his name appears as a witness to his Brother Abraham's will, which bears date Oct. 30, 1784, and which is also written Richard Kägy. About this time there was a number of persons left Lancaster Co., Pa., and went into southwestern Pennsylvania. It is not only possible, but it is highly probable that Rudolph (alias Richard Kägy) was among the number.* I. D. Rupp, in his history of the western counties of Pennsylvania, gives the name of Cagey as one of the early settlers in and around Point Marion, Fayette Co., Pa. The descendants of this early settler spell their name Cagey, but that form of orthography will not be a surprise to any one who is conversant with the many forms now in vogue, and the differences to be seen in the way it is spelled by members of the same family. There is a good reason found as to how the name of this branch of the Keagys came to spell the name with a C, instead of a K, at the beginning of the name,

*Late and well authenticated data convinces us that he was not Rudolph, but that he was the son of Rudolph.

in this fact: The first settler in that region, was killed in building himself a log house. His descendants tell this story about the occurrence. The father and two sons were engaged in building them a house, and had it built up with logs roughly hewed, as was the custom in those days, to the square, some eight or nine feet high, and while engaged in placing one of the topmost logs it fell upon the father and injured him so badly that he died. The boys were quite young, mere lads, and had never been inside of a school room, because there was none at that early day, hence it must be apparent that in all probability they had never seen their name written or in writing; up to the time of this accident and not perhaps for many years afterward, and then, if at all, very infrequent; and when they may have seen it written it was done by some one who spelled it as it would be pronounced by an uneducated Pennsylvania German, as I have frequently heard it in my day—thus, “C’ake-ey.” Just here it should be stated that in the deed of conveyance above referred to the name is spelled Cagy in the commencement of the instrument, but the signature to it below is Kagy. Again, an aged lady in Virginia, whose maiden name was Kagey, informs me that her father wrote his name “Cagy.” A few other instances of like kind have come under my notice. Then, I see nothing in that form of the name that is very objectionable; it has the great merit of simplicity, which many of the others have not. There is another fact bearing upon this question that seems to warrant, or at least to strengthen our belief that the pioneer Cagey of Fayette Co. is the Rudolph, alias Richard Keagy, the third son of John R.—“Hanse” Keagy—and it is this: a diligent search among the records in all the counties then organized has failed to discover his name upon the records; neither in the offices of Register of Wills or Recorder of Deeds, or Clerk of the Orphans’ Courts, etc., except in the counties of York and Lancaster. In the record of his brother Abraham’s descendants it is stated that Eliza Ann, daughter of Michael and Susan (Wesley) Shenk, m. Edward Hess, a son of John and Catharine (Keagy) Hess, and that her father was probably Rudolph. It is unfortunate that none of the descendants of Catharine or her sister, Sarah (Keagy) Hess, know the Christian name of their ancestor. From the data given me, in a recent letter, dated April 17, 1899, written by Mr. Elmer Cagey, of Point Marion, Fayette Co., a very intelligent gentleman, and a great-grandson of the first settler in that region, informs me that his great-grandfather's name was Michael Cagey, and that he was in that locality prior to 1780. Mrs. Anna Taylor, a daughter of Isaac and Ann (Hess) Kauffman, [Anna (Hess) Kauffman is the eldest daughter of John and Catherine (Keagy) Hess] says that her great-grandfather's name was Abraham, and his wife's maiden name was Catherine Bowman, born in 1743, and died Oct. 15, 1834; her daughter Sarah was born March 30, 1787, and died Aug. 24, 1850, near Safe Harbor, Lancaster Co., Pa. The daughter Catherine died in 1867. These were the only children of Abraham and Catherine (Bowman) Keagy. From all the information at our command we think it conclusive that Rudolph Keagy, the son of "Hanse" is the ancestor of Catherine and Sarah (Keagy) Hess; and the ancestor of the Fayette Co., Pa., Cageys. Certain it is, they are related, as all are who bear the name. From the foregoing it will be seen that Rudolph Keagy married, had a family, but how many, and when and where he died is not known. The Catherine Cagy who died Aug., 1835, aged 77 years, was without doubt a daughter of Rudolph Keagy and a sister of Abraham and Michael.

For many years all efforts to discover the descendants of Rudolph Keagy proved abortive. True it is we had found them as we now believe, but could not for a long time feel warranted in fully accepting the proofs, but now, after comparing unquestioned data, a careful examination of court records, contemporary events, and everything that could throw any light on the subject we are fully persuaded that he is the father of Abraham and Michael Cagey. As yet we do not know whether these two sons constituted his whole family or not. There may have been others. For a long time there was much doubt about the name of the first son, but that it was Abraham there is now no longer any doubt. It is a little singular that but one of his descendants are quite certain as to his Christian name. Mrs. Anna Kauffman Taylor, of Millersville, Lancaster Co., Pa., a daughter of Anna (Hess) Kauffman, who was the eldest child of Catharine Keagy and John Hess, says her great-grandfather's name was Abraham, and her great-grandmother was Catharine Bowman before marriage. There was only two children, both of whom were daughters. Catharine Bowman was born about 1743, and died Oct. 15, 1834, aged 91 years. The date of death and age was taken from a family Bible in possession of Mrs. Jacob Rohrer, of Harrisburg, Pa. In a graveyard near Safe Harbor, Lancaster Co., Pa., there is a grave of a Catharine Kagy, who d. Aug. —, 1835, aged 77 years. The name was spelled "Kagy." In the same yard are the marked graves of Christian Hess and his wife, Sarah (Keagy) Hess, b. March 30, 1787; d. Aug. 24, 1850. Christian Hess, b. June 19, 1784; d. Oct. 29, 1842. Both died in Manor township, Lancaster Co., Pa. A son named Levi is also buried there.

Catharine (Keagy) Hess was born about 1785, and died 1867. She married John Hess, a first cousin of her sister Sarah's husband. She is buried on or near Turkey Hill, and her sons, Edward and Amos, and their children, in the Reformed Church Cemetery at Conestoga Centre, near Safe Harbor, where they all lived. Anna, the eldest child of John and Catharine (Keagy) Hess and her husband, Isaac Kauffman, are buried at the Mennonite cemetery at Letort, Manor township, Lancaster Co., Pa. The father of Catharine and Sarah (Keagy) Hess disappeared from his home and it is not known what became of him. The accounts of his disappearance are somewhat conflicting. Mr. John Kauffman, a son of Anna (Hess) Kauffman, a great-grandson of this Keagy, says he remembers well of hearing it said "that his Great-grandfather Keagy went away from home on a certain occasion, and when on his return toward his home he stopped to see a shooting match. From this time nothing was ever heard of him again." Mrs. Anna (Hess) Taylor, previously named, says her mother told her that her mother's father left his family in very pressing want. Mrs. Hannah Macomber, the widow of Amos Hess, a son of John and Catharine (Keagy) Hess, residing in Harrisburg, Pa., now in her 82d year, says her husband's grandfather, Keagy, enlisted during the Revolutionary War, and never returned home. Mrs. Hannah (Macomber) Hess enjoys the rare distinction of being a real, live Daughter of the Revolution. Her father, Zenas Macomber, was a soldier in the days "that tried men's souls," and was one of General Washington's body guard. All these stories of the disappearance of ye ancient ancestor may have some foundation for support, but I am inclined to think the story of his enlistment and demise in the war is purely legendary, from the fact that at least one of his daughters was born as late as 1787, and the war was ended five years before that. He left no descendants in the male line. Those of the daughters are allied by marriage to the descendants of the other branches of the Keagy family, and are also connected with other families of the highest respectability, intelligence and culture in the State and country.

From all the data that has been found the compiler of this history is compelled to think that the Cagy family, living at Point Marion, in Fayette Co., Pa., and the several branches of the same family residing in Ohio, are closely allied to this Abraham Keagy. They say their early ancestor, Michael Cagay, was from Southeastern Pennsylvania, and further proof is shown in the fact that their children were born in the same generation.

I. D. Rupp in his history of Westmoreland Co., Pa., says: "Among the early settlers in what is now Fayette Co. was one named Cakey." This name was written as it would sound when spoken by a German. There is another reason in support of the claim to kinship between these families and with the original Kägy family, and that is in the Christian names of the sons and daughters, which are strikingly the same as the record in the Kägy history shows. Certain circumstances led the writer to think that Rudolph, alias Richard Keagy, the 3d son of Hanse, was the progenitor of this branch, and later data convinces us that he was, but not the father of Catharine and Sarah Keagy. Most undoubtedly he was their grandfather. Little by little the tangled web of relationship has been unraveled and the record of the four sons of Hanse Kägy completed.

The reader will be attracted to the varied orthography of the name. We deem it but proper to give it as it is used by the several branches of the family. As will be seen in these pages, the sons write the name different from that of their fathers.

The 2d son of RUDOLPH, alias RICHARD, KEAGY is MICHAEL CAGEY.

It is not known at what date Michael Cagey first went into Fayette Co., Pa. He was born in Lancaster Co., Pa. It is known, however, that he was residing there prior to 1780. A careful examination of all the available data, together with corroborative circumstances leads one to believe that the Fayette Co., Pa., Michael Cagey and Abraham Keagy, the father of Catharine and Sarah, in Lancaster Co., Pa., were brothers; with the strongest probability that they were the sons of Rudolph, alias Richard, Keagy, the 3d son of Hanse, the first one in America of whom we have any knowledge. The above statement is made after having spent nearly a quarter of a century in investigating the tangled web of consanguinity, and now, 1899, is given as a conclusion of the matter, and to our mind there is no longer room for doubt.

MICHAEL CAGEY, b. ——— m. ——— Strom, b. ———. Issue: four children, viz: Christian, b. ———, 1780; Henry, b. ———; Anna, b. ———; Catharine, b. ———.

1. Christian, m. Margaret Wall, b. ———. Her family was from Bedford Co., Pa. Issue: eight children, viz: (1) John, b. ———; (2) Michael, Jr.; (3) Christian; (4) Samuel W.; (5) George M.; (6) Elizabeth; (7) Anna; (8) Catharine.

All are dead at this date, 1899, but Michael, Jr., who is 88 years old.

2. Henry Cagey, b., it is thought, prior to 1780, and is supposed to be the eldest son. He went into Ohio at an early day and died there; nothing further is known of him.

3. Anna Cagey, b. ———; m. Nicholas Blazer or Blosser, and died without issue.

4. Catharine Cagey, b. ———; m. a man by the name of Zimmerman; they lived in the vicinity of Connellsville, Fayette Co., Pa., and afterward went into Ohio; no further record of them.

4. Samuel Wall Cagey, b. ———, 1823; m. ———, 1850; he d. in 1883. Issue: six children: (1) Elmer, b. ———, 1852; (2) George J., b. ———; (3) Jacob D., b. ———; (4) Lydia A., b. ———; (5) Eliza D., b. ———; (6) Mary J., b. ———.

Elmer M. m. ———; issue three children: (1) Lloyd W., b. ———, 1877; (2) Perry M., b. ———, 1883; (3) Lucy W., b. ———, 1890. Mr. Elmer Cagey is a farmer.

Michael Cagey, Sr., was killed while building a house near Smithfield, Fayette Co., Pa. It appears that he and his two boys were engaged in putting the top log or plate in place, when it fell upon the father and killed him. This occurred about 1790-2; his children were all small, and after his death became separated from one another. The mother afterward married a man by the name of Keedy, with whom the son Christian lived awhile. We regret our inability to present a more complete record of this branch of the Cagey family.

There is yet one more person who claims to be a Keagy, for whom we cannot find a place in the Keagy family; this person is Mrs. Catharine Rife, of Littlestown, Pa. She says her father's name was Alexander Keagy, and her mother's maiden name was Bush; they had but one son and a daughter. The boy died in childhood or youth, and the father and mother died when the children were quite small. They lived between Gettysburg and the South Mountain near the place called "Two Taverns" at the time they died. Mrs. Rife never heard the Christian name of her Grandfather Keagy. There is no place for her in any Keagy family except that of Rudolph, of the number of whose family we have no knowledge; we feel warranted in stating that she is a great-granddaughter of Rudolph. Her husband, — Rife, was a soldier in the Civil War, and either was killed in battle or died while in the army.

Catharine Cagy, who died Aug., 1835, aged 77 years, previously mentioned, was without doubt a daughter of Rudolph Keagy.

This ends the record of Rudolph Keagy, or Chapter Third.

“ What though the years are flying fast
And drive sprinkles through the hair,
And crow's feet come and wrinkles last
In spite of pride's most jealous care :
That with reluctance we confess
And 'growing old !' escapes the tongue
So plain a truth should not distress—
'Tis nothing if the heart is young.”

BOOK FIRST, CHAPTER FOURTH.

HENRY KAGEY, the 4th son of Hanse or John R. Kägy, of Conestoga, Lancaster Co., Pa., and his descendants.

He was born in 1728, Nov. 11; died Oct. 8, 1883, aged 54 years. The exact date of his emigration to Virginia is now known to have been the year 1768. In the year 1767 he and his wife Barbara (whose maiden name was Barbara Stoner) sold a tract of land in Lancaster Co., Pa., to John Musser, and as this is the last time his name appears on the records, it is quite probable that he went to Virginia the year above stated; a number of his children were born in Pennsylvania. He first went to Page Co., Va., afterward crossed the mountain (called Massanuttan Mountain) to Shenandoah Co., and settled on Smiths creek, where he subsequently possessed a large tract (404 acres) of land* and also built a mill; here he lived and died in the year 1783, leaving a family of eight sons and three daughters, viz: (1) John, (2) Henry, (3) Jacob, (4) Anna, (5) Abraham, (6) Christian, (7) Rudolph, (8) Barbara, (9) Isaac, (10) Martin, and (11) Elizabeth. Henry Kagey was married Feb. 2, 1756. Barbara Stoner b. Dec., 1732.

Biography of JOHN KAGEY, who was born March 7, 1757, in Lancaster Co., Pa. He was a minister in the German or Triune Baptist Church, and a man of exalted

*The tract of land containing 404 acres purchased by Henry Kagey, on Smiths Creek, was originally in Frederick Co., Va., and was taken up and patented by Samuel Lusk on the 21st day of July, One Thousand Seven Hundred and forty-nine (1749), and by him sold to Henry Kagey, the deed being dated April 5th, 1769: the consideration money to be paid for the above mentioned 404 acres was five shillings current money of Virginia, and in addition there was to be paid each year upon the feast of Christmas one ear of Indian corn if the same should be lawfully demanded piety, as well as noble generosity, and was revered by old and young, rich and poor, white and black, wherever he went. His affectionate disposition, kindness of heart and practical piety won the love and esteem of all who came in contact with him; his love and affection for his wife was of the purest character, and it is said of him that he never left her presence to be gone only an hour that he did not kiss her affectionately and bid her good-bye; on one occasion, being called on business to the next village, he as usual sought his wife, who had not been feeling well for several days, and on her stating that she felt better, he started from home; he had not been absent more than an hour when he was informed that his wife had died. Filled with sorrow he remarked, "I bade her good-bye for the last time, but did not know it."

The exalted character of John Kagey was such that none knew him but to love him, and the influence of his holy life will be felt and appreciated by generations yet unborn. From sire to son the good deeds of Father Kagey have come down to this generation, and we well remember years ago having heard of his benevolence from lips long since hushed in death. A few are yet living who listened to his teachings and were guided by his wise counsels, so kindly and lovingly given. Indeed he seemed to live in an atmosphere of love and joy that infused itself into all who came in contact with him, and even when his advanced age (for he lived far beyond that allotted to the patriarchs) and his bodily infirmities confined him to the house, he was as cheerful as was his wont, content to live, or ready to obey the summons to leave earth for a more glorious mansion in the skies. The last seven years of his life were passed in blindness, his eldest daughter ministering to his wants until the "weary wheels of life stood still." In all the mutations of a long and active life, most of which was spent in a new country, where great diversity of character always exists, and where a teacher is so likely to provoke opposition, if not hatred, no matter how anxious to avoid it, he seemed to possess such rare qualifications of mind and heart that disarmed all opposition and won the respect, the love and esteem of all classes and conditions of men, an accomplishment so rare that one must needs feel that some supernatural power was his. This he did not claim, but he believed the best way to persuade men to lead the life of a Christian was to exemplify that kind of a life in daily practice of the divine commands to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, comfort the distressed in heart and in all things do justly and love mercy. In an eminent degree he thus practiced what he taught, and by it gave the most abundant proof of his sincerity and established a claim to an exalted Christian character.

John Kagey was married to Elizabeth Brenneman, Dec. 24, 1782. She died March 29, 1836, in the 78th year of her age. John Kagey died Oct. 11, 1845, aged 88 years, forty of which had been devoted to ministerial duties. He lived and died near the old home place near New Market, Shenandoah Co., Va.

"The following beautiful "Elegy" appeared some years ago in the Boston Courier and Traveller, and in the Rockingham Register, and at a later date in the Spirit of Democracy.

"Almost as good as John Kagey" has been an expression on the lips of old and young, rich and poor, for the last forty years, whenever they wished to convey as exalted an idea as possible of a man's piety and virtue. The following stanzas would reverently indulge a few reminiscences of this good man. He died October 11, 1845, aged 88 years, forty of which had been devoted to ministerial duties, and to acts of the most exemplary benevolence.—Editors Shenandoah Valley.

Come, meekest virgins of the vale,
 With silent step and votive tear,
 With cypress boughs and pansies pale,—
 Your Abdiel* is sleeping here,
 From Pennsylvania's epic shades,
 Where first the paths of life he trod,
 Sweet Ephratah, thy vestal maids,
 Bedew this consecrated sod:—
 What Elah† that the prophets knew,
 On holier ground its shadow threw?

* Abdiel, a worshiper of Jehovah.

† Elah, or El-Elan the Oak, in the English version of the Scriptures. It is supposed to have been the Serrebinth tree. It lives to a great age, and has therefore been used as the emblem of prosperity.

Come see where now the mantling snow,

One spot with whitest swell invests;

In silent happiness he rests.

Ah, purer than the snow that heart,

Which meekly lies unthrobbed here;

More undefiled the god-like part

He bore in our precarious sphere,

And deathless in our souls shall be

The fragrance of his memory.

The breezes of suspiring Spring

From Massanutten's side shall blow,

Around this spot their incense fling

And sigh in holy whispers low;

For while with joyful haste he trod

Yon deepening dale and arduous hill,

The conscious, all-pervading God

Engrossed his soul-felt whispers still,

And still the airs of hill and plain,

Effusions from his lips retain.

In yonder lane the widow lorn,—

Naomi of our heartless year,

Leans o'er her orphan every morn,

And yields to unavailing tears,

For, he whose voice had soothed so long,

Sad memory's unobtrusive sigh,

Whose hand secured from reckless wrong,

Whose bosom bled at sorrow's cry,

He, too, has left our wintry shore,—

He hears the sufferer plead no more.

Ah! never down the rocky vale

She hastes to meet her orphan's more;

Shares the warm kiss and lifts the pail

White-wreathed with sweetness from his store,

No more the fatherless from play,

Shall run with lisping joy to tell,—

"The good man brings his gifts to-day;

Come see his white locks in the dell."

Deep Death hath wrapped in darkness now,

The honors of that reverend brow.

Long years through flood and beating storm,
 The messenger of life divine,
 We saw his worn and wasting form
 Expanding still his blest design.
 Age came with mortal omens sere,
 Keen Pain, and Blindness, and Decay;
 Though clouded in his high career,
 The glorious watchman spurned delay;
 Through darkening years wrapt echo rung
 The dictates of his fervent tongue.

And when from each familiar aisle,
 Inveterate Time his feet withdrew,
 E'en strangers paused to share his smile,
 And learn submission sweet and true,
 As lingering years subdued his frame,
 Still warmer grew the whispered prayer;
 Till silence o'er his chamber came.
 The shadow of White Death was there;
 Wan daughters ceased their watch to keep,
 And strangers turned away to weep.

Cease meekest virgins of the vale!
 Dim not with tears your Abdiel's tomb;
 Fond spirit of the choral gale,
 Thy starlit wing of Faith resume!
 He has rejoined the countless throng
 That glow in unapparent space;
 Sweet on his lips triumphant song,
 Ethereal beauty on his face,
 And radiant with immortal youth,
 He wings the realm of love and Truth.

Elizabeth Kagey Ryan inherited the noble qualities of mind and heart of her parents. She devoted much of her time to reading and was a lover of music. She possessed a strong and musical voice even in her old age. The last seven years of her life was passed in blindness, like her venerable father and sister. Her well-balanced mind fortified her heart to meet every ill, every calamity incident to life, and made her hopeful and cheerful. She was every ready to counsel and aid the unfortunate and needy, and in her quiet way did much good during her long life. She united with the Mohawk Baptist Church in 1839 and remained a sincere, worthy member of the same till she died. In her sphere in life she wielded an influence for good far beyond that of ordinary persons. Her Christianity was of the practical kind that seeks to do good. Such a life cannot fail to leave a "blessed" memory behind—and such is hers. In 1823 her father visited her and preached to the people under an apple tree, then large enough to shade the congregation at that time; the tree is yet green and bears fruit in its season and promises to outlive the youngest of that assembly who found shelter beneath its wide-spread branches. In 1853 her 2d son, Abraham, started for California to make a fortune in the gold mines. After leaving St. Louis nothing has ever been heard of him since.

Kagey d. b. Oct. 13, 1847.

DAVID F. KAGEY, son of Abraham and grandson of John Kagey, was born at the old homestead two and a half miles northeast of New Market, Shenandoah Co., Va., Jan. 18, 1834. He was reared on the farm until the age of 12, attending school during the winter months after his tenth year, at the old Kagey school house. Then he spent two sessions at the New Market Academy under the tutorage of the late Prof. Joseph Salyards. At the age of 15 his father placed him with the late John R. Strayer, a prominent and successful merchant of New Market, Va., where he remained twelve years, at which time, May, 1861, the beginning of the Civil War, he volunteered in the 5th Star Artillery, Rice's battery, Confederate States Army, serving as a private until disabled by sickness in the West Virginia campaign. He hired a substitute, and after recovery spent one session, nine months, at the University of Virginia, taking the course of medicine. However during this period it became necessary for all, even those who had substitutes to again enter the army, whereupon he joined the 25th Virginia Infantry and was soon after appointed assistant surgeon, or hospital steward, in which capacity he served until the surrender at Appomattox. He emerged from the four years' war without capital, but still possessed of that spirit that mark the career of every Confederate soldier that followed the immortal Lee and Jackson. Hence he promptly embarked in the mercantile business again at his old stand in New Market, Va., and success crowned his every effort, so much so that in 1872, after seven years of active and energetic work as a merchant, the New Market Bank of Virginia, having been chartered and organized, he was against his wish and earnest protest unanimously elected its cashier. He continued in that position until the bank went into voluntary liquidation in 1884, a period of twelve years. The business of the bank was wound up with credit and success, and to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. The same year he conceived the idea that Luray, Va., was a good field for the banking business. He opened a private bank there, and was prospering under the confidence of a satisfied, as well as gratified public, until 1890, a period of six years, when the spirit of speculation, the father of "booms" started in Virginia and crippled her people more than the four years of Civil War. It seized him, and took possession of him, body and soul, and he went into it with all the energy that had marked his progress in the past. He little thought of the precipice of disappointment that was in his immediate front, and he went down like thousands of others, who were marching to the same music and maddened by the same false, but bright hopes. The public, for nearly every one engaged in these undertakings, paralyzed financially, looked in every direction for relief. His bank went under with the "boom" and some of the depositors, sore from losses in the "boom," sought to punish him for misappropriation of the bank's funds, but to his credit, twelve of his countrymen, after a thorough examination of his acts, pronounced him not guilty, and acquitted him of the charge. Since 1890 he has gone into business again at his old home, New Market, Va., and is doing well and has the respect, esteem and entire confidence of the public.

Emma M. Kagey, wife of D. F. Kagey, daughter of the late Samuel Godfrey Henkel, a prominent and successful physician and surgeon of New Market, Shenandoah Co., Va., and Susan Henkel (nee Koimer), was born October 13, 1847. Reared in a refined Christian home, she was properly educated, and to an attractive personality she united the Christian virtues with the gentle graces of head and heart. She was m. to D. F. Kagey on Sept. 22, 1868, to whom she proved a help-meet indeed, the union being crowned with unalloyed peace and happiness. There was no issue from this marriage. She took great interest in the Lutheran Church, of which she was a life-long, consistent member, and shining light. Miss Kagey was m. to Isaac Hershberger in Roanoke, Va., Nov. 4, 1835, and d. near Bell's P. O., Bedford Co., Va., June 13, 1890. Isaac Hershberger was b. in Shenandoah Co., Va., on Smith's Creek, near New Market, Oct. 15, 1813, he was the youngest child of his father's family, Jacob Hershberger, who was a farmer and Baptist preacher. The farms of Henry Kagey, the 3d, and Jacob Hershberger adjoined each other on Smith's creek. In the year 1834, Isaac Hershberger went to Roanoke and, as stated above, m. in 1835. In religion he is a Baptist and by occupation a farmer; as a man he has the fullest confidence of his fellow-men. In all the walks of life he has been noted for his integrity and honesty, and in all his dealings with his fellow-men he has been above reproach or blame. In misfortune or in prosperity he has always proven himself to be an honest, upright man in the strictest sense of the term. Few men have been called upon to pass through so many trying ordeals. In a few brief years nine of his children died, seven out of the nine with diphtheria; one son was a soldier in the Confederate army and was killed in an engagement on the Kanahwa river. In 1868 he lost all his property by fire and $5,000 besides that burned up. He then moved east of the Blue Ridge into Bedford Co., near Bells P. O., where he now resides (1898), at the good old age of 85 y., loved and respected by all who share his acquaintance. His wife was blind the last five years before she died. She made no profession of religion, but in all her long life of 72 y. she lived the most exemplary life; such as would have adorned the life and walk of any professing Christian. While she subscribed to no particular creed, yet she was guided in all her conduct by those wholesome truths that the wisdom of ages has proven to be good. Her's was a well-balanced mind that no prospect, however pleasing, could unduly elate, or no calamity could unduly depress or intimidate. At last the weary wheels of life stood still and as the morning broke the darkness of the night, the eyes that were so long blinded opened to the light and life of a better world. Calmly as an infant sleeps she passed over to meet the loved ones who had gone before and share the holy rest of a life well-spent.

ELIZABETH KAGEY, 5th child of Jacob, the 3d son of old Henry from Pennsylvania, b. Sept. 7, 1792, in Shenandoah Co., Va., and was m. to Mr. Gabriel Barb, Sept. 20, 1820; he was b. in ———, Feb. 15, 1794, and d. July 11, 1834, in Bristol township, Trumbull Co., O. Elizabeth Barb (nee Kagey) d. July 4, 1881. In the year 1819 Elizabeth Kagey, her brother and another relative, went from Virginia to Ohio to visit her brother, Abraham, who had moved to

ELIZABETH (KAGEY) BARB.

Ohio in 1819, after having bought land there with dry goods in 1810, as heretofore stated. She performed the entire journey on horseback, and in the fall of the same year she returned to Virginia, riding the same horse, which she had bought with her own money, paying $100 for it. On her return to Virginia she sold her horse for the same amount she had paid for it. At that distant day it required courage, fortitude and endurance of the highest order to make a journey like that over mountains, across rivers and through a trackless wilderness. During this visit to Ohio the maidenly beauty and sterling worth of Elizabeth Kagey attracted the attention and won the heart of a young frontiersman named Gabriel Barb, whose father had settled in that vicinity in 1805. In 1820 the young lover journeyed back to Virginia and sought and obtained the hand of Elizabeth in marriage. They returned to Ohio and in Feb., 1821, the young husband commenced to clear a place for his log cabin; the first tree he cut fell upon another tree, breaking off a large limb which was thrown swiftly back by the recoil of the bent tree and in falling struck Mr. Barb, dislocating his hip, mashed his arm and hurt his head, and he was held fast to the ground by the weight of the limb which was upon him. He was two miles from his father's house and a mile from his brother-in-law's, Abraham Kagey, where he had intended going at night, and had so informed his wife and parents in the morning before leaving home. His pain and suffering were intense and his situation a terrible one. When young Barb sufficiently recovered from the shock he called as loud as he could for help. Several times he fainted from loss of blood and pain. After repeated calls he was heard by a woman who lived one and a half miles north of where he lay. She told her husband and son to go and see and find out what it meant. They finally went in the direction the sound came from, but after going some distance they could hear or see nothing. They were about to turn back home when they heard a faint call, and proceeding in that direction they found him. They then had to go to his home for help to take him home, which was finally reached just as the shades of night were gathering. He recovered after a long time and with the help of a few friends cleared a place and built a log cabin, in which he moved in the fall of 1821. The old log cabin has since given place to a far more commodious house, now the lovely home of Elizabeth Barb and her worthy son, Joseph S. Barb, to whom the author of this history is greatly indebted for data relating thereto, as well as for many kindnesses while a guest at their house in 1888. On June 8, 1898, he was m. to Mattie V. Frey, in Bridgewater College.

JOHN WALTER WAYLAND.

John Wesley Wayland was a native of Shenandoah Co., Va. His ancestors on his father's side were from Madison Co., Va. When in the prime of life, he was noted for his intelligence and was a successful teacher. He also possessed mechanical talent of a high order and was a skilled workman in wood or metal. During his life he was engaged in carpentering, cabinet-making, painting, silver-smithing, etc. During the Civil war he served part of two years in Co. G, 24th Virginia, and served under Generals Meem, Ashby and "Stonewall" Jackson. He endured all the hardships and privations of a soldier's life in the Confederate army, and at its close returned to his home the physical and intellectual wreck of his former self. His wife, Anna M. Kagey, was born near the Northern Branch of the Shenandoah river, near the famous Rudes Hill, made ever memorable by the tragic scenes enacted upon its summit during the Civil War. The house in which she was born has long since been replaced by a larger one of brick. Here she was born spiritually, also, having been baptized Aug. 11, 1866, according to the rules of the Baptist church, in the beautiful Shenandoah river. In this society she has remained ever since, and is one of its most consistent, faithful and highly intelligent members. When she was yet a babe her father, Jacob Kagey, bought a farm of 102 acres about four miles west, where he remained nearly ten years, near where the village of Forestville has since been built. On the 4th of March, 1841, her father moved about six miles north of Mt. Jackson, Va., where he bought a farm of 300 acres, on which he lived and died, and here all of his children, except two, who died in infancy, were reared to manhood and womanhood, and which her brother, Abraham J. Kagey, now (1898) owns and occupies. The early education of the subject of this sketch was obtained in the country schools and later on at Woodlawn Academy, which was in the immediate vicinity of her home, but which has been removed for more than twenty-five years past. Upon the death of her father, she inherited a portion of the farm nearest the old academy, and gave the place the name of "Woodlawn" and resided there until Sept. 5, 1893, when she moved to Bridgewater, Va., in order to afford her son, John W., better facilities for acquiring an education. Mrs. Wayland is the best-known woman and one of the most highly esteemed in all her large relationship. She possesses in a large degree all those qualities of mind and heart that make friends and retain them. She is a most entertaining speaker, and a model in letter-writing, as all will testify who have been the recipients of her clear, concise and edifying epistles. Her love for her kindred is of the sincerest kind and it impelled her to keep track of the many branches of the old Henry Kagey family of Virginia. To her more than anyone the compiler and editor of the "Kägy History" is indebted for the full and complete record of this branch of the Kägy family. Her name and memory will long be cherished by her grateful kindred.

4. Elizabeth Kagey, was born in 1836, and died in Hawk-insville, Va., at the home of her brother, Joel F. Kagey, Feb. 26, 1898, aged 61 y., 4 m. and 11 d. Miss Kagey was highly respected and a most estimable lady.

ABRAHAM NEFF KAGEY, the 3d son of Abraham, the 4th son of old Henry, of Pennsylvania, was b. July 20, 1807, in the Shenandoah Valley, and lived there until he was 22 years old, when he went to Trumbull Co., O., and was m. there, April 15, 1832, to Anna Fansler, whose parents and grandparents were natives of Virginia. To them were born four children, viz: Barbara A., John Henry, Mary E., and one child, died in infancy. On the 30th of March, 1838, his wife died. He remained in Ohio until 1853, and then went to California, and worked at his trade, blacksmithing, doing work for the gold miners. In 1856 he returned from California to Virginia on a visit, where he met his youngest daughter, Mary E., and after completing his visit, they both returned to Bristolville, Trumbull Co., O., their former home.

ABRAHAM NEFF KAGEY.

JOHN HENRY KAGEY AND LADY FRIEND.

His eldest daughter had married and moved to Nebraska, while her father was in California. His son, John Henry, was then in Kansas. In Oct., 1856, he went to Nebraska, near Nebraska City, and took a claim for 80 acres of land and went to farming. In 1857 his daughter, Mary E., went out to Nebraska and kept house for him. He remained in Nebraska until 1885, when he removed to Edwards Co., Kan. His boundary line is the line between Stafford and Edwards counties, and his P. O. address was Prattsburg, Stafford Co., Kan. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He d. Jan. 15, 1893.

Barbara A. was b. about 1833, and d. Jan. 22, 1882. She was first m. to Allen Mayhew, of Ohio, in 1852, and to them was born eight children, viz: (1) Edward, (2) Henry, (3) a girl, died in infancy, (4) Charlie, (5) Thomas, (6) Hannibal, (7) Herschel, and (8) Albert. She then married, after Mayhew's death in Nebraska, one Calvin Bradway, of Iowa, and had three children, viz: (1) Elmer, (2) a girl, who died in infancy, and (3) Calvin. Of these children Herschel is dead. Nothing further is known of these children.

John Henry Kagey, the only son of Abraham Neff Kagey, was b. March 15, 1835, at Bristolville, Trumbull Co., O. His mother dying when he was but 3 years and 2 weeks old, he was deprived of the influences wrought upon the young by a mother's love. His early education was such as the common schools in his neighborhood at that early day afforded. He was quick at learning and possessed a retentive memory. He was quiet and studious, and of good moral character and highly respected by all who knew him. His natural talents were seen and appreciated by his schoolmates. Whenever an exhibition was planned by the scholars he was always assigned the most difficult task. He was in a great measure self-taught, and was a rapid shorthand writer. He taught school in Nebraska and in the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, at an early age. He studied law in Nebraska City; finished his course and was admitted to the bar. He was a fluent talker and a ready debater. His companions, among whom were Richard Ralph, called him "Greely," because in manner and style he looked like Horace Greely. He went to Kansas in 1856, during the trouble there between the pro-slavery and anti-slavery men and was correspondent for several Eastern papers, taking sides fearlessly with the free State men, and an equal sharer in the hardships and dangers incident to those perilous times. When Governor Geary arrived in Kansas the free State men withdrew from the field. A large number of them were arrested, among them John Henry Kagey. He was a member of Co. B, Second Regiment of Kansas Volunteers, and participated in the border wars. When he first went to Kansas he was with Jim Lane and engaged in reporting for some eastern papers—The Tribune and National Era.

The pro-slavery men, knowing his sentiments and position on the questions then at issue, sought every means at their command to provoke a quarrel with him in order to furnish a pretext to kill him. He had early acquired a reputation as a writer of ability, a brave man and an incorruptible politician.

The pro-slavery administration then in power under President Pierce, viewed with dismay the possible triumph of the free State men, and the consequent admission of Kansas as a free State into the Union, and accordingly sent Col. Geary with United States soldiers into the Territory with orders to arrest and imprison those found in arms. The condition of these prisoners was pitiable in the extreme. They were herded like cattle and fed like swine. The indomitable spirit of Kagi, as he wrote his name, which is the original way, could not be subdued by cruel treatment, and it only incited him to greater efforts. He managed to continue his correspondence while in prison. He would borrow a plug of tobacco from a comrade (he was not a user of the weed) and hollow it out in such a way that he could insert his letters, then cover it over with a leaf of tobacco, and when a friend would call to see him he would manage to exchange pieces with them, and by this means he would convey an account of what was being done around him. Soon after his liberation from prison, which he effected by fully and fearlessly vindicating himself from the unjust charges against him, he became more widely known throughout the country by the brutal attack on him by Judge Elmore. The occurrence happened in this wise: The store of a free State man had been robbed at Tecumseh, a village about four miles from Topeka. The owner could get no redress from the party then in power, because he was known to be a free State man. After all other efforts failed to bring the thief to justice, the owner applied to the "Topeka Boys" for justice. These sent word that an investigation must be made or they would visit and burn the town. As soon as this "gentle" warning was given and received a committee was appointed. It consisted of first, a free State man; secondly, the person suspected of the robbery; thirdly, Ex-Judge Elmore as chairman; a conservative. The evidence, full and explicit was given in, the free State man deciding in favor of a restitution of the stolen goods, and the accused man opposing it. The decision, therefore, developed on Elmore. In true "conservative" spirit he declared his inability to decide the case. Kägi, in commenting on the decision, remarked that "President Pierce need not have sought a pretext to dismiss Elmore on account of his extra judicial investments, as it was self-evident that a man who could not decide a case where the clearest evidence was given, whether a convicted robber should restore stolen goods or retain them, was hardly qualified for a seat on the Supreme bench of a Territory." Elmore was greatly incensed at these comments, and meeting Kägi in Tecumseh, as he was going up the court house steps, he said to him: "Are you the man who writes under the signature of K?" and being answered in the affirmative he immediately struck Kägi over the head with a heavy gold-headed cane, knocking him down. Stunned and half blinded by the brutal blow, he drew his revolver and shot the judge in the groin; the ball could not be extracted and he carried it to his grave. Several shots were exchanged between the parties. A ball from the Judge's pistol struck Kägi in the region of the heart, first passing through his coat and vest, then through a memoranda book an inch thick and glancing on a rib, passed around his body several inches, lodged in his side. His friends took him to Topeka and there he removed the ball himself with his pen-knife. The perfidity and brutality of Elmore's attack on Kägi can be properly estimated when it is known that he sent a note by the hands of a man named Pardee to Kägi requesting an interview, to which Kägi assented and it was when going to keep this appointment that he met Elmore, and was assaulted in the manner described. It was reported at the time that Elmore said to his friends: "If he had known that Kägi had so much pluck he would have invited him home to dinner."

One who shared the same trials, privations and dangers with him in Kansas, says of him: "He was truly a model man, in temperance and good morals. I never heard him swear an oath; nor saw him drink intoxicating liquors, chew or smoke tobacco. He was a brave, fearless man, a warm, true and steadfast friend; he suffered many hardships in marching and fighting to make Kansas a free State. He was not afraid of death, and was a firm believer in the doctrines as taught by Thomas Paine, Voltaire, and other free thinkers.

He first went from Nebraska to Kansas with James H. Lane, who took a party of emigrants to Kansas by way of Nebraska. It was about this time that Colonel Titus had invaded Kansas with the avowed purpose of driving out the free State men or kill them. Kägi looked upon the attempt of the pro-slavery men to force slavery upon Kansas with detestation and abhorrence, and at once enrolled his name as a member of Co. B, 2d Regiment of Kansas Volunteers, under Colonel Stevens, then known as Colonel Whipple. This force was opposed to Titus, and was following him in the northeast part of the State, when about the last of September or 1st of October, by order of Governor Geary, who had been sent out with United States soldiers to arrest all men found with arms, they were taken prisoners. It was during the marches in this campaign that one day, tired, footsore and thirsty, they came to a small town, and while resting, some of the "boys" of his company obtained some liquor and brought it into camp. It was duly shared out and drank by all except Kägi. He said his stomach was all right, but as his feet were sore and tired he would give his share to them, and bathed his feet with it.

After their surrender to Governor Geary's forces, to whom they looked for protection, they were taken to Lecompton, and by one of those many strange coincidences in human affairs they were placed under guard of Colonel Titus, whom they had attempted to capture. They were confined in a new building just enclosed and kept there until about December. They were then taken to Tecumseh for trial. He was charged with murder for having killed one of Titus's men in battle, but at the time of that battle Kägi had not yet entered the service (of his country, as he stated it). He was asked to prove it (this was in exact keeping with their idea of equity, although grievously at variance with the rules of law as laid down by Blackstone, etc.). This he readily did and he owed his life to a woman and her boy, who gave their evidence in his behalf.

At the time the Bogus Legislature met at Lecompton Kägi was correspondent for several eastern papers and was associate editor of the Topcka Tribune. Being a rapid stenographer, he reported their proceedings and commented upon them very freely. This provoked their ire, and a plot was arranged to assassinate him. This no doubt would have been successful had it not been for his landlady, who informed him of the plot and entreated him not to attend the extra night session, which evidently was held for that purpose. The "distinguished" Judge Elmore formed one of the number of that august body, and when the meeting was organized he rose and moved that the person who was reporting their proceedings be arrested and summarily dealt with. Kägi had taken the woman's friendly advice and gone to Topeka and thereby frustrated their designs upon his life. The situation in Kansas at this time was deplorable. In Governor Geary's "Farewell address to the people of Kansas," dated March 12, 1857, he says, in describing the condition of things on his first arrival and when entering upon his official duties as Governor of the Territory: "Desolation and ruin reigned on every hand. Homes and firesides were deserted; the smoke of burning dwellings darkened the atmosphere; women and children driven from their habitations, wandered over the prairies and among the woodlands or sought refuge and protection even among the Indian tribes. The highways were infested with murderous predatory bands, and the towns were fortified and garrisoned by armies of conflicting partisans, each excited almost to frenzy and determined upon mutual extermination. Such was, without exaggeration, the condition of the Territory at this period."

The excitement produced by the state of affairs in Kansas on the slavery question throughout the Union was intense, and in that Territory had assumed the character of a civil war on a small scale. After the close of the difficulties in Kansas, John Henry Kägi returned to Bristol, O. He had made the acquaintance of a young lady (a teacher, I am informed), to whom he seemed greatly attached before he went to Nebraska. A correspondence was begun and kept up for some time, but through the changing of his address so frequently the correspondence ceased, and the lady thinking she was forgotten, received the attentions of another man and married him.

When Kägi returned to Bristol and learned that his "sweet-heart" was wedded it is said he was greatly disappointed and declared that "Now he didn't care what became of him." He returned to Kansas and with John Brown engaged in running off slaves from Missouri into Iowa and thence to Canada.

In 1857 he went to Springdale, Ia., and with others engaged in military drilling. In the spring of 1858 he went with John Brown and others to Chatham, Canada, where was held the Convention of the "Friends of Freedom." Kägi was elected secretary of the Convention and also Secretary of War of Brown's Provisional government. In the following year, sometime about June, in company with Brown, he came to Chambersburg, Pa., and engaged board at the house of Mrs. Mary Rittner, on East King street, where he remained most of the time until the first week in October, when he and Brown left there for the Kennedy place near Harper's Ferry, Va., and from there to the Ferry on the night of October 16, 1859.

During the time of his stay at the home of Mrs. Rittner Kägi won the good opinion of the family and boarders by his friendly manner and social disposition. He took a great interest in instructing and pleasing the young folks in the family by engaging with them in social games, etc. All of these young misses have grown to womanhood and now have families of their own and to this day speak of the kind conduct of Kägi toward them and sincerely mourn his unhappy fate. He was a fluent talker and freely discussed the questions of the day with the boarders, always using good language that at times sparkled with humorous wit. To the writer of this sketch he appeared more like a divinity student than a warrior. He was of medium height and build, had large blue-gray eyes, and a somewhat round face, full of expression when engaged in an animated conversation, but somewhat careless in his dress. Several incidents occurred during his stay in Chambersburg that I will relate as told me by Mrs. Rittner and her eldest daughter a short time after it occurred. One day accompanied by one of the eldest of Mrs. Rittner's daughters, he went to a photograph gallery kept by a Mr. John Keagy, who was distantly related to him, though at that time the artist was not aware of it, as John Henri was the name by which he was known at his boarding place. After the negative was taken and John Henri turned to leave the room, the artist, as was usual, asked him his name. He replied John Henri. The artist being an aged man and a little hard of hearing had to ask again, and the third time before he was assured he had the name right. As Henri and his little companion were leaving the room he said to the little girl, "I could have given him a name he will always remember," meaning his full name, which was the same name as that of the artist. "John Henri" used the Swiss orthography in the name Kägi, as it universally is done in Switzerland. The above recited expression is the only one as far as known which he ever made that would indicate a secret mission during his stay here, but in his correspondence with his cousins in Virginia he asked them to direct his letters to "John Henri" (omitting the last name). This the reader need not be told was for prudential reasons.

I will relate another little incident that occurred during his stay in this place, which will show his skill as a marksman. A near neighbor of Mrs. Rittner's named Gross, a man of rough, uncouth habit, one who had won the unenviable name of a "Slave Catcher," had a worthless dog that annoyed the neighbors by running over and destroying their gardens. As Mrs. Rittner's lot adjoined the Gross property she was the most annoyed, and all her requests to the dog's owner to abate the nuisance were treated with scorn. Indeed Gross rather delighted in annoying her because he knew she was a woman of pronounced anti-slavery sentiments, and for every slave that Gross captured and returned to their master she aided a score to freedom and liberty. The daily depredations of the dog were exceedingly provoking and became so frequent that she expressed a wish some one would shoot him. The room occupied by John Henri was on the first floor adjoining the dining-room and a window opened out toward the garden. The weather being warm, Mr. Henri sat near the open window engaged in writing when his attention was directed to the garden by Mrs. Rittner (who was in the dining-room and from the open door saw the dog leap the fence and commence his foray among her vines and vegetables), exclaiming: "Oh, there that hateful dog is again." She had scarcely uttered the words when the sharp report of a pistol rang out and ere she she could turn around the dog fell over dead shot through the heart. The distance was at least fifty yards. The dog was left there until evening when some one threw him over the fence into his master's lot, where he was found the next day. The owner swore terribly, declaring he would shoot the person, if he ever discovered who did it. He never attempted to avenge it, for if he had it would have insured his speedy exit out of the world and ended his dastardly slave-catching proclivities, as his character in this respect was well-known to Brown and his men.

The life and conduct of John Henri during his stay in Chambersburg was most exemplary. The greater part of his time was spent in reading and writing. His was a strong social nature and he no doubt would have made a model husband. He frequently engaged in reading aloud to Mrs. Rittner while she was engaged at her work, sometimes from newspapers, histories or poetry. Sometimes he would go away for a few days and then return again. At the time that the celebrated Frederick Douglass came to Chambersburg, Pa., to meet Brown, John Henri was present at the meeting, which took place in an old stone quarry near the creek south of town. This occurred Aug. 19, 1859, or about nine weeks before the raid upon the Ferry. On the night of Oct. 16th, the raid was made on Harper's Ferry, Va. Brown gave the order to Kägi to take and hold the rifle works, situated about a half mile above the town on the west side of the Shenandoah river. From here he was driven out the next day by a large force of Virginia militia and was shot in endeavoring to cross the river. It was said that he and others were buried on the south bank of the Shenandoah river at the foot of the Blue Ridge mountain. Kägi had become a scientific military officer and brilliant hopes were formed of his future by the friends who knew him best. He was a young man of clear, logical intellect, but wholly unlike his leader, Brown, he was skeptical in religious matters, and he engaged in the military anti-slavery movement rather from a haughty sense of duty to a friendless race, and in obedience to the teachings of Virginia's greatest statesmen. His talents, natural ability and acquirements would have enabled him to make his mark in any society.

Perish with him the folly that seeks through evil good.

Long live the generous purpose, sustained with human blood.

— Whittier.

Now, "North" and "South" shall strive no more,
And all their feuds and fears are lost
In freedom's holy Pentacost.

For forty years his body rested in an unknown grave, the waters of the beautiful Shenandoah river murmuring his requiem as it flowed to the sea. Just as this record was about being given to the publisher the following account of the disinterment of the bodies of seven of John Brown's men, who were killed at Harper's Ferry, Va., appeared in The New Era of Lancaster city, Pa., and no doubt the body of John Henry Kägi is among the number. The account is appended hereto. The John Brown Raid was the prelude of the mighty Civil War, during which the contending armies in advance, in battle and in retreat trod over his pulseless heart, and their trampling squadrons knead the winter's snow in clay, but he heard not the thunder of Miles's cannon from Maryland Heights, nor those of Stonewall Jackson on Loudon Heights, or the shouts of his victorious legions, whose matchless valor has won imperishable fame.

JOHN BROWN'S MEN.

Their Bones Removed from Harper's Ferry to North Elba, N. Y.

A Harper's Ferry, W. Va., special says: The bodies of seven followers of John Brown were disinterred near this place on Saturday by Dr. Thomas R. Featherstonhaugh, of Washington, D. C., and Captain E. P. Hall, employed in the Interior Department. The forgotten graves were located by Dr. Featherstonhaugh three years ago.

The seven bodies were buried in a lonely spot near the banks of the Shenandoah river. Dr. Featherstonhaugh learned that Jefferson county paid James Marshall, now a very old man, $10 for burying the bodies. Marshall assisted him in locating the graves, one of which was opened.

The remains were sent to North Elba, N. Y., the old homestead of John Brown, where his body lies buried, and will be interred in adjacent soil. The bones were shipped to North Elba in charge of a nephew of one of the men who participated in the raid and escaped with his life.

The bodies had been buried in two large store boxes. There was nothing left in the boxes except the bones and some of the men's clothes. Oliver Brown was buried in a shaggy overcoat of bearskin cloth, which was found around the bones of one individual, and two short lead pencils dropped from the coat.

BARBARA KAGEY, the eldest daughter and 5th child of Abraham Kagey, the 4th son of Henry from Pennsylvania, was b. Feb. 11, 1811, at the old "Kagey homestead," now occupied by her nephew, J. H. Kagey, about three miles north of New Market, Va., where she spent the greater portion of her long and useful life.

Her whole life was one unbroken record of loving devotion to those about her. From her early girlhood she had the constant care of a deaf mute sister, who lived to be more than sixty years old. After her father's death, she still resided at the old home with her brother David and family. When a number of years had passed away, he sold out to his brother Henry, and removed to a farm near Bridgewater, Rockingham Co., Va. She accompanied the family there, and remained with them several years longer, and by her unselfish devotion to those nephews and nieces became very near and dear unto them. But she was recalled to the old home to take a mother's place, in the household of her brother Henry, which she so nobly filled for many years with unwearied devotion. For all her life she obeyed the injunction, "Be not weary in well doing." In all her busy life she yet found time to assist the needy and distressed, to nurse the sick, and her charity was dispensed so quietly that the right hand knew not what the left hand did.

At the age of 14 years she united with the German Baptist church (Tunker), and her many friends know what a consistent life she lived; always ready for every good work, never thinking of self, and thus she followed the divine Master to the end.

She "fell asleep in Jesus" at 6 o'clock p. m., April 27th, 1892, at the home of her beloved niece, Mrs. L. H. Zirkle, and was laid to rest on the 29th, in the Cedar Grove Cemetery. A large congregation of sorrowing friends and relatives were present, notwithstanding the rainy weather. An appropriate funeral sermon was preached by Elder Benjamin Neff, at the church, where she had worshipped ever since it had been built, and where she was always found in her place, regardless of the weather. She considered it a blessed privilege to go up to the house of the Lord.

She leaves two brothers, Abraham, who lives in Kansas, and Isaac, living in Arcola, Ill., besides numerous nephews and nieces to mourn her departure.

“ Her work was done: her mission ended:

Time had measured years, four score :

And the present was so blended

With the future's golden shore,

That the world had lost in interest

What it held to her before.

Lost to her were all its pleasures,

And she cared not to remain ;

For in heaven were all her treasures,

So at last the Angel came,

Came and bore her to that city

Where her heart so long had been.

Life to her had been a blessing,

Naught of work was left undone,

Long—long years ago confessing,

Christ accepted her as one

Of the ransomed of his children ;

So to-day we know she's home.”

Henry Kagey and Catharine (Fitzgerald) Kagey were natives of Virginia, and were born in Shenandoah Co., and emigrated from there to Licking Co., O., in the year 1833, where he purchased 109 acres of land. This tract was all or nearly all woodland, a primitive forest; this the sturdy pioneer subdued, with the assistance of his sons, and made out of the wilderness a home and habitation for his family. In the course of years he built himself a comfortable and commodious house which is still the home of those of the family who yet remain by the old home hearthstone, a place dear to the hearts of all, and to which departing years lend a richer charm. Here he and his helpmeet spent their wedded lives together, and reared their large family, and from here some of the sons went into far-away States to die among strangers. One of these, Alfred, was one of the celebrated forty-niners, who went to California to dig gold, and from there to Walla Walla, Washington State now, where he owned a farm. His brother, William, also started for California, but died on the journey at the Platte river, on the 8th of June, 1852. The father, Henry Kagey, was a plain, unassuming man and was what is called a practical man, the cast of his mind was such that he never became unduly elated or depressed; in all the changing vicissitudes of a long and useful life, he preserved a wholesome cheerfulness, and a pleasant demeanor. In every relation in life, whether as a citizen of the State, or a member of the community, he discharged his obligations as became a good citizen and a good neighbor; as a friend he was true and steadfast; his counsel was often sought by his neighbors, and followed with advantage; he was uniformly kind to all with whom he did business, and his truthfulness and integrity was never in doubt, never questioned. As a farmer he was industrious, careful and economical. He saved that he might have wherewith to give, and no worthy person was ever turned from his door empty handed. He was charitable, not only with his goods, the labor of his hands, but he had that larger charity that thinketh no evil. He was firm in his convictions of right, yet tolerant of the views and opinions of others; his was a well-poised, well-balanced mind, that no disaster could overawe or success unduly elate. He asked for no rights he was not willing freely to accord to others. His religious views embraced the golden rule, "Do to others as you would they should do to you." Upon this principle his whole life actions were based, and it was this that won for him that high esteem, with which all held him, who were fortunate enough to share his acquaintance, or who had any business transactions with him. His principles were deep-rooted, and remained with him all through a long life, far beyond the patriarchal age, to guide and direct hand and brain. It is allotted to few to live to his age and fewer still to attain to his many virtues, but his work was done, his task ended, his mission fulfilled, and the weary wheels of life stood still. He has gone from among us, we shall not soon see his likes again, but he has left behind him a grand good name, the name of an honest man, "the noblest work of God."

"And I am glad that he has lived thus long,

And glad that he has gone to his reward;

Nor can I deem that nature did him wrong,

Softly to disengage the vital cord.

For when his hand grew palsied, and his eye

Dark with the mists of age, it was his time to die.

“Why weep ye then for him, who having won
The bounds of man’s appointed years at last,
Life’s blessings all enjoyed, life’s labors done,
Serenely to his final rest has passed;
While the soft memory of his virtues yet
Lingers like twilight hues when the bright Sun is set.”

RESOLUTION.

Adopted by the Fairfield County Agricultural Society Board of Directors Upon the Death of Rudolph Kägy.

With feelings of the most profound regret, but with a desire to do what little honor is in our power, we perpetuate on our record the memory of an honest man, a useful and esteemed member of society, an affectionate husband and father, and a faithful and valued member of the Board of Directors of this society.

For fifty-nine years Rudolph Kägy has lived in Fairfield Co., devoting himself to the business of farming. His life has closed without a single stain upon his unpretentious but manly career. In business, in society, in his family and his church, in whatever position, calling or capacity he chose, or was called upon to assume, he was always the same straightforward, frank and honest man, free from guile or deception, and intent only in accomplishing what was right. In his life "malice towards none, charity towards all," was typified and no wrong or questionable act ever marred his pure character of moral rectitude. He was genial and hospitable in his disposition, and his relations with others in business and in social life were always marked with kindness and generous forgiveness of the faults of humanity. All his life he was a constant sufferer from a painful physical affection, but like the afflictions of the mind and heart he bore his burden with patience and humility, and his even temper and good humor were never touched by a murmur of complaint. His affectionate manner at home, his enthusiastic and earnest devotion to his church, and his benevolent and kindly conduct toward his friends and neighbors, illustrated and emphasized his general good and noble character.

As a man of business and affairs, Mr. Kägy's views were broad, clear and comprehensive. His judgment was often consulted by those in need of advice and his conviction usually deferred to. It was not his habit to arrive at a conclusion quickly, but he was not vacillating or capricious and when, after mature deliberation, his decision was made, only the most sound and potent reason could move him; yet he accorded to each individual the right to his own personal opinion, and could respect it if he could not agree with his opponent in debate or altercation. In his political convictions this disposition was particularly illustrated. He believed with unflinching faith in the principles of his political party, but was a respecter of honest men wherever found, and counted among his sincere friends men of all parties, all creeds and denominations, and was likewise fearless in condemning dishonesty or corruption wherever it might be discovered.

4. Charles Edward Keagy, was b. in Virginia, and at this date (1899) resides at Victor, Colo. He was m. to Bertha Lehr, Dec. 29, 1898, and is now engaged in gold mining. For one so young he had a varied experience, as the subjoined account will fully show, taken from the Rocky Mountain News, of Denver, Colo., Jan. 8, 1894:

HE FOUND $10,000.

But it Sent Him to Penitentiary—A Remarkable Story.

Charles E. Keagy walked into The Journal office one day this week and presented a petition for signature praying for his release from the penitentiary at Canon City. A look of astonishment naturally overspread the countenance of his listeners. Here was a man walking about, apparently as free as the air, begging to get out of prison. What's more he has not been in prison for a year. In the summer of '90 he was sent to the penitentiary from this district, by Judge John Campbell, for a period of twelve years for forgery.

Keagy's story is as interesting as any ever written. He says that a few years ago he was proving up on a claim on the Cimarron river near the north line of Stevens Co., Kan. In the spring of 1888 there was quite a flood on the Cimarron and it washed into his land. While driving along the river one day he noticed something sticking out of the bank which looked like a rude coffin. He approached it with some degree of curiosity and took hold of it. It moved, and with but little trouble he lifted it out. It was shorter than a coffin and something rattled inside. He placed it in his wagon and drove to his little sod shanty where a hatchet made short work of exposing its contents. Inside the box was a tin box about a foot long and a foot deep. Inside of this box was a sight that made the farmer boy's eyes startle from their sockets. Nicely stacked up was a pile of greenbacks "about the size of three bricks," as he says in telling about it.

There was exactly ten thousand dollars in the pile from fives to fifties. As Keagy's farm is on the Sante Fé trail, he naturally supposed that some one returning to civilization with a fortune had met with some accident or danger which prevented him from carrying his gains farther, and so buried them, hoping to return at a later day. Perhaps the owner was killed by Indians or died some other unnatural death on the plains. He never came back for his money.

Throwing away the box, Keagy put the money in an old satchel and hid it. He was afraid to tell anybody anything about his find, for fear of robbers. In the fall of that year, he proved up his claim in Kansas, and located a homestead under the Henry ditch, three miles from Lamar, Colo. Late in the summer of 1889 he came to Manitou to see the sights, and stopped at the Mineral Springs Hotel, kept by Dr. A. G. Lewis. Here he ran across A. K. Fullam.

Fullam is a character about whom a small volume could be written. He came here several years ago, and lived in a little "A" tent. He had scarcely any furniture, slept on straw and lived chiefly on crackers and cheese. The good ladies of the town took pity on him and a subscription was taken for the poor man. At the time, he had sewed up in his clothing, which he never took off, over $10,000. He afterwards bought property in Manitou, at the corner of Manitou and Ruxton avenues, for $7,000, which a few years later he disposed of for $20,000.

Fullam scented Keagy with the same keen insight that one of "Soapy" Smith's men would locate a sucker on lower Seventeenth street. Keagy bought a confectionery stand, near Fullam's abode, and used it to sleep in. The two men became quite intimate. Fullam was now occupying a room in one of the cottages on his property, and under the plea of sickness, had Keagy come up and stay with him. He offered certain Manitou property to him at $15,000. Keagy agreed to take it, giving $10,000 cash, and his Lamar farm, which he valued at $5,000. Fullam next offered, according to Keagy's story, to start up a big grocery in Manitou, each to put in $10,000 cash. This was agreed to, when Fullam took another turn. He wanted Keagy to go in with him on a mining deal. Then Keagy went back to his Lamar farm, proved up, and traded it for lots 7 and 8, Kenwood place, Denver. The trade was made by a Mr. Funk, of Peabody, Marion Co., Kan. The lots were valued at $5,000. They were worth about $500. Keagy never saw them. He pinned his faith to Funk.

A correspondence began between Fullam and Keagy, which, to make a long story short, resulted in Keagy's coming to Manitou and turning over to Fullam his $10,000 and his Denver property for two notes of $10,000 each. The transaction was witnessed by no one. Fullam then had Keagy arrested for forgery of the notes. He was found guilty by a jury, after being out thirty-six hours, sentenced by Judge Campbell, and taken to the penitentiary, all in a few days. Fullam then left the country. No one knows where he went. A Manitou man claims he saw Fullam here three weeks ago.

Keagy's case is a sad one. He has scarcely any education and knows absolutely nothing of business. A year ago he was let out on parole, and had been cooking for the contractors on the Midland Terminal until Midland was reached. Lately he has been with the same contractors on the washout near Colorado City and has taken the opportunity of circulating his petition in person. A large number of prominent men of Manitou have willingly signed it.

If Keagy had an instinct of revenge, he would run Fullam to earth and cut that $10,000 out of his clothes. But he is not built that way.

DISCOVERY OF A BOX CONTAINING $10,000 ON THE SANTA FE TRAIL.

The wildest imagination could scarcely conceive of a more intensely interesting story than was unfolded before the State Board of Pardons yesterday.

An unsophisticated young countryman, traveling on the old Santa Fe trail, discovers a box containing $10,000. The treasure is allowed to lie for three years in the discoverer's valise, in a lone cabin of Kansas. Then the young man starts out in the world to invest his fortune. Passing along the streets of Colorado Springs with his valise in his hand, he is accosted by an old man, becomes a companion of the stranger in a rude tent and finally parts from the $10,000, receiving two notes of $10,000 each in payment. The notes are signed by the aged individual, who, according to the story, follows his victim with a devilish malignity that never ceases in its operations until the too confiding rustic is landed in the State penitentiary under a sentence of twelve long years. The grand denouncement came yesterday when a minister of the gospel appeared in behalf of the young man before the Board of Pardons, and Governor Waite signed a full and unconditional pardon for Charles E. Keagy.

THE GOOD ANGEL.

The minister who appeared as the good angel in the case is the Rev. John E. Roberts, of a peculiar religious denomination known as the Church of the Living God. The reverend gentleman is an intelligent looking and as handsome a man as one can see in a day's experience. His story is told in such a plain, straightforward way that it carries conviction, although it may be stated that Judge Campbell, of the district court at Colorado Springs, who to-day is elevated to the Supreme judgeship, and President W. F. Slocum, of Colorado College, do not accept the story as true. On the other hand, the minister's story is supported by the mayor of Colorado Springs and numerous prominent citizens of Colorado Springs and Manitou, as well as by experts in handwriting who, it is claimed, were refused the opportunity to appear and testify at the time of the trial.

The address which the minister delivered before the Board of Pardons yesterday convinced many of the listeners that a gross injustice has been practiced on Keagy. It failed, however, to touch the hearts of the majority of the Board, and Governor Waite acted upon his own responsibility when he issued the executive order, relieving the young man from the cloud that has hung over him for years past.

A SORROWING FATHER.

According to Mr. Roberts, the case was first called to his attention while in attendance at a camp-meeting of his church over two years ago, at Junction City, Mich. A white-haired man arose and told the story of his son's misfortunes and imprisonment in the penitentiary of Colorado. The recital greatly affected the hearers and right then and there prayers were offered up for the release of the young man and for his vindication. Mr. Roberts pledged to the sorrowing father his utmost efforts in freeing his son.

Keagy was sent to the penitentiary in Nov., 1890. From the day he entered the institution good fortune seemed to smile upon him. He was made the recipient of every favor the prison officials could bestow and at the first favorable opportunity the prison board ordered him transferred to the reformatory at Buena Vista. In less than three months Keagy was released on parole. He has visited Denver several times and is at present a prospector in the Cripple Creek gold fields. The telegraph last night bore the glad news to the father in Michigan that his prayers had been answered.

YOUNG KEAGY'S LIFE.

Mr. Roberts says that Keagy was born near Elkhart, Ind., thirty years ago. "His mother died when Charles was quite young," said Mr. Roberts, "leaving Charles and his father to work the farm and support a family of six or seven growing girls. For this reason Charles was denied the privilege of a common school education. In 1886 Charles took up land in Stevens Co., Kan., and drove a freighting team for a living, between Hartlan and Hugoton while proving up on his claim. While at one of the towns he was delayed over night by a heavy rain. The next morning he started for home and as he was crossing a bridge on the Cimarron, in the line of the old Santa Fé route, he noticed the end of a wooden box protruding from the opposite bank of the river. The sand had been washed away by the freshet. He dismounted from his wagon and pulled out a box three feet long. Upon opening the box he found within it a tin box containing $10,000 in cash, mostly currency."

Mr. Roberts relates how the surprised young teamster carried the treasure to his cabin and hid the money away from sight. There it remained for several years until the young man disposed of his Kansas farm and started for Colorado. The evil genius, according to Mr. Roberts, appeared in the form of Alvin K. Fullam, of Colorado Springs. The minister says that Fullam was an old man, apparently on the verge of starvation, living in a tent. The W. C. T. U. of the city had compassion on him and took up a collection for his benefit. In reality, Mr. Roberts says, Fullam was a miser and it was afterwards shown that he was worth $50,000 in money and property. Walking on the streets of Colorado Springs or Manitou, Keagy was accosted by Fullam and a friendship was struck up which resulted in Fullam's getting possession of the $10,000 and $2,000 additional which Keagy had accumulated by selling his ranch and other operations.

"After securing the money," says Mr. Roberts, "Fullam disappeared and Charles became alarmed. He called to his aid several of the business men of Manitou and every effort was made to ascertain the whereabouts of Fullam. He was finally located at Friend, Neb. Fullam returned to Colorado Springs and remained there for two weeks without the knowledge of Charles or his friends. It was during Fullam's sojourn at the Springs that Charles' awful fate was planned. He was arrested for forgery and placed behind the bars. The prisoner's money was freely used to convict him and the only method he had of paying two young attorneys, who engaged in his behalf, was to give them his gold watch and other effects. One of the grand jury refused to vote for indictment because upon comparing signatures he felt convinced that Fullam wrote the notes. Experts were summoned, but their testimony was ruled out except that of the men with whom Fullam had his money deposited. All of Charles' witnesses were ruled out and Fullam's signature was not allowed to be compared with the signatures on the notes, and Charles, who a short time before had walked the streets of Manitou, Colorado City and Colorado Springs with $12,000 cash in his hand satchel, wearing a neat suit of clothes worth $75 and everything to match except experience, was sentenced to the Canon City penitentiary for twelve years."

Mr. Roberts says he presented the case to Governor Routt before the retirement of that officer from the chair. "I said, 'I leave this case in God's hands and yours.' The governor replied, 'I am running the State of Colorado and God has nothing to do with it.' " Mr. Roberts disagreed with the governor and is now positively convinced that God has a great deal to do with the administration of affairs in Colorado.

"God answers the prayers of the righteous," devoutly said the minister last night.

The Board of Pardons met in adjourned session yesterday to consider several cases referred to Professor Slocum in order that he might talk personally with Judge Campbell at Colorado Springs concerning them. The list embraced the names of Charles E. Keagy, C. W. Mills and William S. West, all sentenced to the penitentiary from El Paso county. Keagy got twelve years for forgery; Mills, two and a half years for burglary, and West two years for horse stealing. Professor Slocum reported unfavorably on all three of the cases, the vote standing three to one in favor of refusing the application. Governor Waite voted in favor of clemency, and Slocum, Appel and Mrs. Love voted against pardon. Members Wheeler and Mills and Mrs. Belford were not present.

Immediately upon going to his office after the adjournment of the board, Governor Waite began issuing pardons, and before night documents bearing the governor's signature and the seal of the State were issued in favor of the three applicants named. The governor took the ground that Keagy is innocent, that Mills was inveigled into pleading guilty and that the deputy district prosecuting attorney admitted that West was not guilty.

Mrs. Eve (Kagey) Wenger informed the writer that there was another son in her father's family that bore the name of (7) Rudolph; he was born Dec. 18, 1809, and died May 31, 1815. She says her mother often spoke to her in her childhood about this little son and brother. Mrs. Eve Wenger was the youngest child of Rudolph Kagey, the son of old Henry, from Pennsylvania, and it is highly probable that he was born in Pennsylvania, as he was born Jan. 14, 1768, and as that is the year his parents emigrated from Pennsylvania to Virginia; first into the Luray Valley, and the next year into the Shenandoah Valley, where he bought 960 acres of land, on which he built a mill and died before it was completed. It is not at all likely that Henry Kagey would go to Virginia in the dead of winter at that early day, hence we feel warranted in stating that Rudolph was born in Pennsylvania. Certain it is that several of his brothers, viz: John, Henry, Jacob, Abraham, Christian, and a sister Anna, were born in Pennsylvania. Eve Wenger died Feb. 4, 1898, near Dayton, Rockingham Co., Va., and is buried at the Bank church. She was a member of the Mennonite church for over sixty years, and was a pillar in the church. Her many excellencies of mind and heart won many warm and lasting friends; to know her was to love her.

BARBARA KAGEY, the second daughter of Henry from Pennsylvania, was born Feb. 27, 1770, on the old Kagey homestead, on Smith's creek, Shenandoah Co., Va. She married Daniel Beery, one of two brothers, who were millwrights, and who walked from Pennsylvania to the Valley of Virginia. They stopped to build the "Old Kagey Mill" (which is still standing, 1899), when Daniel Beery fell in love with and married Barbara. They lived and died in Rockingham Co., Va. Beery owned a farm on Linville creek. They raised five sons and five daughters, viz: (1) Daniel, (2) John, (3) Abraham, (4) Henry, (5) Joseph, (6) Barbara, (7) Elizabeth, (8) Mary, (9) Anna, (10) Kittie.

1. Daniel, b. ———; m. Anna Huffman, and settled in Fairfield Co., Ohio.

2. John, b. ———; m. Magdalene Wenger.

ISAAC KAGEY, the seventh son of Henry from Pennsylvania, was born April 12, 1772, and died unmarried. He was the miller in his father's mill; he was the only Kagey in Virginia, it is said, who ever owned slaves; he liberated them at his death. His uncle Abraham, of Pennsylvania, was the only Kagey that ever owned a slave in that State; he also liberated them at his death.

MARTIN KAGEY, the eighth son of Henry, from Pennsylvania, was born August 26, 1774, and died when about full grown.

ELIZABETH, the youngest daughter of Henry from Pennsylvania, was born Dec. 5, 1776, and m. Martin Myley. They had one son, whom they called Martin; he died at about 19 years of age. Before her marriage to Myley, she had a son called Zachariah Shirley; after the death of her husband she lived with this son until she died. Shirley's father, and his brother Thomas, were bachelor brothers, and lived together, and at their death gave all their wealth, land, money and negroes, to this son of Elizabeth Kagey-Myley. Zachariah Shirley, this son, married Barbara Kagey, the eldest daughter of Christian, the fifth son of Henry, and, of course, her first cousin.

Elizabeth Kagey Myley lived to a good old age, and was highly esteemed by all who knew her.

End of the record of Henry Kagey's descendants.

BOOK FIRST, CHAPTER FIFTH.

Susannah Kägy, the eldest daughter of Hanse Kägy, was born ———.

Barbara Kägy is thought to be the second daughter of Hanse Kägy, and was born ———.

Anna Kägy is known to be the youngest daughter of Hanse Kägy, as she is the only one named as being under lawful age in her father's will.

It is not now (1898) known who any of them married, and it may never be ascertained now, after the lapse of so many years. If they married, and remained in Lancaster Co., the county records must have something in its archives relating to them; a careful search would no doubt reveal it, but the task was too much for the limited means of the Editor.

This closes the record of Hanse Kägy's descendants, as far as is positively known.

BOOK SECOND.

THE SECOND EMIGRATION (of which there is any record) of the name of Kägy, to this country, occurred in the year 1739, December 11th, when the ship "Lydia," commanded by James Allen, from London, England, arrived with seventy-five passengers from the Palatinate, among whom was one

JOHANNES KAGIE.*

It is known that Johannes Kagie was not married before he came to this country. His wife's name was Ann Kendig, a daughter of Martin Kendig, the head of one of the seven first families of Mennonites who came into Lancaster Co., Pa., in 1708-9.

In religious faith he was a Mennonite.

On the 13th of Feb., 1748, he bought two hundred acres of land from Susannah Connelly, and on the 15th of the same month and year, three hundred acres more. This land had formerly been sold to Thomas Ewing by John, Thomas and Richard Penn, Esqs., Proprietors and Governors-in-Chief of the province of Pennsylvania; the deed bearing date March 21, 1739. This land was in Manor township, Lancaster Co., Pa. This John Kägy was called Manor John, to distinguish him from John R. Kägy, who was called "Hanse" Kägy, who lived in Conestogoe township; the two townships adjoined and are separated by the Conestogoe creek.

There was a relationship existing between these two Keagys—"Hanse," being the eldest, may have been an uncle; it is certain that they sprang from the same stem tree; as do all who bear the name.

*The orthography of the name here given is the way the ship's clerk spelled it. The (e) in the Kägy name is permissible, but wholly unwarranted. The accentuated (ä) in German orthography permits the use of an (e) but should always follow, and never precede the (a), thus (ae) or Kaegy—all forms deviating from the Swiss form Kägi or the German Kägy, detracts from the simplicity and beauty of the name.

Some years after the death of Johannes Kägy, his widow married James Jacks, who was Register and Recorder of Deeds for years at Lancaster city, Pa. James Jacks was a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature in 1780-1-2, and appointed Recorder of Deeds in 1783. It is said that Ann Keagy Jacks jumped out of the attic window of her house and was killed by the fall. She was among the first persons to make claim to a knowledge of sins forgiven in her vicinity, as taught by the Wesleys and Whitfield. She was a woman of uncommon energy and activity, as well as piety. Martin Boehm, who with Philip William Otterbein, were the founders of the "United Brethren Church," says of her: "At this time (1756) I knew no one who claimed the birthright by adoption but Nancy Ann Keagy, my mother's sister. She was a woman of great piety and singular devotion to God." She outlived all of her family and grandchildren except Ann Katharine, the wife of Col. Sewell. Her body and mind, enfeebled by age gave way and in a fit of mental aberration she met her death in the manner stated. For a more extended account of her parentage see the first chapter of this history.

Johannes Kägy bought 188 acres of land in Conestogoe Manor June, 1760, and 159 acres in 1761; Conestogoe Manor was in Conestogoe township, Lancaster Co., Pa., and as there was two John Kägy's owning lands in the same township, the first settler was named "Hanse" Kägy; the other was called "Manor" John, as his dwelling-place was in Manor township.

The biographical sketch of the Kendig and Boehm families given in the beginning of this work properly belongs to this branch of the Kägy family, but it was deemed necessary to give it there for several reasons, which will be apparent to the reader.

In 1761, John Kägy bought two tracts of land in Conestogoe Manor, Lancaster Co., Pa.; one of 188 acres and another of 159 acres.

John Kägy made a will before he died, which is dated 8th day of Nov., 1763, in which he names his sons, first Jacob, whose full Christian name was John Jacob; the second son, named John; third, Rudolph, and fourth, Isaac, and a daughter Ann, who married Isaac Neff.

JOHN JACOB KEAGY was the eldest son, and was born July 28, 1751, in Manor township, Lancaster Co., Pa., and died in Lancaster city, Nov. 27, 1783, and is buried in the Moravian graveyard in Lancaster city, Pa. He was a member of the "Unitas Fratrum" or Moravian church.

John Jacob Keagy married Catharine Reigart,* in Oct., 1773, and had one son, John, living at the time he died. In his will which bears date Nov. 7, 1783, he provided for an unborn child, who was named Ann Katharine, born Dec. 12, 1783, and died June 14, 1836.

John Keagy, the only son of John Jacob, was born about 1774-5, and died intestate, unmarried, and his sister Ann Katharine inherited the whole of her father's estate, previously willed to her uncles and aunt, Ann Neff.

Catharine Reigart was born Jan. 20, 1758; died June 30, 1822.

Ann Katharine Keagy was born Dec. 12, 1783, and was married to Charles Smith Sewell, on Jan. 9, 1805, by the Rev. Dr. James Latta, of Chestnut Level. Miss Keagy owned and resided at the house built by her grandparents. A stone in the gable shows that it was built in 1756, and a stone in the barn has the date 1763, and has the name of John Keagy and Ann Keagy, by whom they were built. This house is still standing, and is now (1898) owned and occupied by the venerable ex-commissioner, Jacob B. Shuman, now in his 90th year, the greater part of whose life was spent at this old

*Catharine Reigert married a second time, one Christian Stake. This name is often written Reigart. Through the kindness and courtesy of Mrs. T. F. Bayard I am enabled to present pictures of Colonel Sewell and his wife. These pictures were copied from oil paintings in the possession of the Bayards, at Wilmington, Del. I am indebted to Mrs. Mary E. Wilson, of Calvert Co., Md., for the picture of Colonel Sewell taken in his old age, and by permission of Mrs. Bayard I present a picture of her honored and distinguished husband.

house, which yet looks as if it would stand another century of sun and storm.

It will not, I hope, be deemed irrelevant to narrate here an occurrence that will go far to show the peculiar condition of society as it was at that day. Mr. Sewell brought with him to the home of his bride several slaves, a pack of hounds and several race horses. He was having a good time generally in the Manor when he was ordered by a writ of mandamus from the court in Lancaster to produce his slaves in court.

Under the law of 1788 a sojourner from a slave State had a right to keep his slaves in Pennsylvania for a period of six months. Parties often evaded the law by crossing over the line into Maryland for a few minutes at the expiration of each six months and then returning again to Pennsylvania soil. These proceedings did not fail to be noticed by such sterling anti-slavery men as William Wright, of Columbia, Pa., who had been watching and waiting for the expiration of the time limited by law, when he made application for this writ.

When Sewell appeared in court with his slaves he was enraged and in a belligerent mood, and ready to inflict corporeal punishment upon Mr. Wright, who was not only a member of the "Society of Friends," but physically a very small and weak person; however he was a very agile and active man. He was fond of the "chase" and a most excellent rider, and backed one of the fleetest horses in the neighborhood.

After the court declared Sewell's slaves to be free, Mr. Wright went to the hotel and mounting his horse, started to return to his home in Columbia. When near the outskirts of Lancaster he discovered that Sewell was following him. Both put spurs and whip to their horses and both went on a dead run for five miles. Then Sewell began to gain a little, and when near Klugh's tavern, a short distance east of Mountville, he struck Mr. Wright several times with a raw-hide. When their horses arrived opposite the tavern Mr. Wright sprang off his horse and ran into the tavern, called the "Bear," while Sewell stopped a moment to hitch his horse, and thus Mr. Wright escaped his fury.

Mr. Sewell became so disgusted with the court and people in their interference with his slaves that he soon afterward sold his entire property in Lancaster Co., Pa., and returned to Maryland, to the Eastern Shore, from whence he had come. The deed of sale bears date April 1, 1807; the purchaser was Jacob Dritt, of Windsor township, York Co., Pa., for part of the estate.

11. Willing Francis Bayard, d. in 1871, in infancy.

12. Philip Francis Bayard, is single (1899).

Hon. Thomas F. Bayard died Sept. 28, 1898.

Thomas F. Bayard has been so prominently before the country that he needs no biography. He was born at Wilmington, Del., October 29, 1828, and although his early training was for a mercantile life he later studied law and was called to the bar in 1851. His first public office was that of United States District Attorney, but this he resigned in 1854, after an incumbency of one year. In 1869 he succeeded his father in the United States Senate, and served three consecutive terms with distinction. In 1885 he resigned his seat to become President Cleveland's Secretary of State. His discharge of the duties of this office was marked by his characteristic ability, although he was called on to deal with many difficult diplomatic problems, not the least in importance of which was the Behring Sea difficulty. Since his retirement from office Mr. Bayard has practiced his profession. His first wife, who was Miss Lee, of Baltimore, died soon after he became Secretary of State, and in 1889 he married Miss Clymer, of Washington, of the distinguished Pennsylvania family.

One of the many things that will particularly distinguish Mr. Cleveland's second administration is the high character of our representatives at foreign courts. All his diplomatic appointments have thus far been of the highest standard and those that were made to-day only emphasized the fact that our diplomatic service will be excellent throughout.

The ripe statesman whom he to-day commissioned as the first American Ambassador and sent to the Court of St. James, is one of the ablest and most thoroughly experienced men that have represented us in England in the last half century. He is a typical representative of the family name, long since made synonymous with courage and honor by the great French Chevalier. Many Bayards have served Delaware and the Union in places of great importance during and since the Revolution, but Thomas F. Bayard has rendered more distinguished service than any of them. As the Democratic leader in the Senate for many years, as acting Vice-President and heir apparent to the Chief Magistracy and as Secretary of State for four years he has become richly equipped for the important duty to which he is now assigned.

When it is recalled that Cleveland was President and Bayard was Secretary of State when Lord Sackville-West was sent east so unceremoniously for his attempt to interfere in our domestic politics it will be seen that Mr. Bayard's nomination has a peculiar significance. It is indicative of a strong foreign policy and of an intention to bring about the ampler recognition of the influence and importance of the United States by the great powers of the Old World.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 1, 1898.—With the simple and impressive ritual of the Protestant Episcopal Church all that was mortal of former Ambassador Bayard was to-day given to the grave. The entire city joined in the expression of sorrow over the death of Delaware's noble son; flags fluttered at half mast, bells were tolled, places of business were closed and the streets were thronged with people.

A multitude of people early assembled at the quaint and historic Old Swedes' Church, where the body had been taken the night before on its arrival from Dedham. But the church was not thrown open to the public, as it had been decided not to open the casket and permit the people to view the remains. But all morning the crowd lingered around the old building, waiting for the time of the brief funeral procession from the church to the grave.

The hour of the funeral was 2 o'clock p. m., and long before that time the little church was crowded with those for whom admission had been reserved. They comprised the pall-bearers, members of the New Castle County Bar Association, representatives of the Delaware Society Sons of the American Revolution, and committees representing the Bayard Legion and the Young Men's Democratic Clubs.

The honorary pall-bearers were former President Grover Cleveland, former Secretary of the Treasury Charles S. Fairchild, Ebe W. Tunnell, Governor of Delaware; Chancellor John R. Nicholson, George L. Rives, of New York city; John V. Craven, and Thomas Craven, of Salem, N. J., and Judge Ignatius C. Grubb, Dr. James A. Draper and Henry G. Banning, of Wilmington.

3. CHARLES SMITH SEWELL, Jr., d. Sept. 11, 1832; drowned; unm.

The following remarks by a friend of the family on learning of the death of Charles S. Sewell, Jr.: Death is still busy and is sweeping away both the old and the young among our friends. At the residence of his father, in Harford Co., Md., the Hon. Charles Smith Sewell, Sr., long a member of the Senate and House of Delegates of Maryland; on the 11th of September, 1832, Charles S. Sewell, Jr., in the 23d year of his age. It seems like the other day, and it was but a few weeks ago since we were two nights at Mr. Sewell's house, and we have seldom seen a more happy family. We sat by the side of the affectionate mother and a fond father, and a group of interesting sons and daughters, and now we have to put upon record that one of that happy family has been called away, in the very prime of life. These are sad, sad circumstances, and many, very many, feel deeply for the loss this family has sustained. We dare not dwell on this melancholy subject, yet when death robs our friends of those so dear to them, we must and do "weep with those who weep," for Sewell is one whom we love as we do a brother; we sat with him in the House of Delegates, and five sessions by his side in the Senate chamber at Annapolis, and while there he lost a dear boy, on board the United States ship "Hornet," and now Charles, another son, is called away, and we fancy we hear more than one of the family say, "Would to heaven I had died for thee."

1. Maria Eloise Morsell, m. Sept. 9, 1861, to James Freeborn Lambdin. Issue: (1) Anna Maria, b. Aug. 28, 1862, lived 1 week; (2) Catharine Sewell, d. at 18 months; (3) Margaret Eloise, b. Aug. 28, 1864, d. at 2 years of age; (4) James Morsell, b. May 14, 1867; (5) Sallie Morsell, b. Feb. 7, 1875, and m. to George Peabody Loker, June 30, 1897; (6) Rosa Eleanor Lambdin, b. April 21, 1877.

On the 23d of July, 1835, Mrs. Anna Maria Morsell, in the 26th year of her age, wife of James Morsell, Esq., of Calvert Co., Md. In the death of this lovely and interesting woman, society is called upon to mourn the loss of one of its brightest ornaments. In the bloom of life and vigor of health, but a few months since she bade fair to run her course with joy, when death has suddenly chilled the stream of life, and forever closed its course. Though he has marred the beauty of her faultless form and quenched the light of her radiant eye, yet there was no terror in his embrace to one whose heart was fixed on God and whose treasure was in heaven. She bore her illness, which was long and painful, with patience and Christian resignation. Perfectly conscious of her situation, she strove to conceal from her husband for some days the nearness of the end, with a resolution that almost conquered his despair. In the death of her lovely babe, which died the day previous, the last link was broken, but only for a few short hours, that the chain of affection might be more firmly riveted in heaven. Thousands of God's holy angels rejoiced when these two spotless spirits were admitted within the portals of heaven. They are now in that happy place where the flowers of happiness never fade, and where disease and death can never molest. On the 22d of July, Olivia Clementina, youngest daughter of James and Anna Maria Morsell, died only a few hours before its mother.

5. CLEMENT KEAGY SEWELL, M. D., d. unm., March —, 1843, on the Island of Jamaica, of consumption. Having put off this mortal frame, he lives, clothed with immortality. When the old and venerated of the land are called to their final rest, our grief is tempered with the thoughts that after a long and well-spent life, the repose of the grave is but a means of heavenly rejuvenescence; that the tomb is but the portal to a world where the age-enfeebled body is thrown aside, and the spirit no longer dogged or encumbered, revels in all the delights of those mansions illuminated and made joyful by the presence of an approving and eternal God. But when the shafts of the destroyer strikes down the young, those whose prospects of worldly happiness were unclouded, whose visions were only those of joy, the objects of their parents' deep and sure centred affection, their pride, the depository of their honor and happiness, then do the springs of the soul well up naught but the bitter waters of sorrow and affliction, overwhelming the mind with thoughts of grief and misery. Such are our feelings when we contemplate the death of Clement Keagy Sewell, whom we remember as being one who, by his amiability and gentleness, had endeared himself to both old and young; one deeply imbued with all those generous feelings and high-toned sentiments, which characterize the man of probity and honor. Youth was his with all its attributes. Wealth and all the enjoyments it could procure, were at his command. But disease with its long train of afflictions fell upon him. And did we hear him murmuring and repining? Oh, no. Calm and peaceful resignation, under the severest suffering, was depicted in his countenance, and evinced in all his actions. He spared us the anguish of hearing him complain of sufferings which could not be alleviated, or of a fate which could not be averted. With his relations and friends, the writer of this humble tribute to his memory, sincerely and truly sympathizes. Their grief is his also. But still should not their sorrow be softened with the thoughts that "our loss is truly his gain?" That the gates of paradise have been opened to him, and that he now stands before the throne of a just and merciful deity, an advocate for their temporal and eternal welfare?

Cornelia Wright, was m. to Captain Otho Norris, who was commander of the United States ship "Hornet," which was lost off Tampico, Sept. 10, 1828, and 200 with the crew perished, including the commander. Captain Norris had urgently invited George Smith Sewell, the 4th son of Col. Charles Smith Sewell, to go on a trip on board his vessel, and he perished with the rest. He was a lad of 14 years of age. Not a vestige of ship or crew were ever seen or heard of afterward. Every soul on board perished.

Cornelia (Smith) Sewell m. again, to John Sotheren, and it appears he d. prior to 1819.

The following notice appeared in the Baltimore papers, Dec. —, 1848, announcing the death of Colonel Sewell: Died on the 30th instant, at his residence, "Rose Hill," Harford Co., Md., the Hon. Charles Smith Sewell, in the 70th year of his age. The announcement of this death is sufficient to touch a responsive chord in a most extended circle of friends to awaken a feeling of deep sorrow, mingled with recollections of past enjoyments, not only in his immediate neighborhood, but far beyond the limits of ordinary intercourse and acquaintance. Colonel Sewell was b. in Queen Anne Co., Eastern Shore of Md., on the 12th day of May, 1779, where he lived until manhood, and until he had fully confirmed his inborn tendency, to that courteous dignity of deportment, and cordial hospitality so characteristic of that portion of his native State, and which, on his subsequent removal to this city, and afterward during his long residence in Harford Co., made him so universally respected and beloved, and caused him to be regarded as among the most conspicuous of the surviving few gentlemen of the old Maryland School. This affectionate regard of his fellow-citizens, with their unbounded confidence in his integrity, and their high opinion of his capacity for usefulness, led to Colonel Sewell's repeated nominations and election to offices of high honor and trust, and in the various stations which he filled in the House of Delegates and Senate of this State and in the Congress of the United States, he not only fulfilled the partial expectations of his friends, but added to his deserved reputation and popularity by his activity, ability and zeal in supporting measures of policy calculated to advance the interests of the people and the national honor and prosperity. And not only was he untiring in his civil efforts to promote these, but when in the War of 1812, this State was invaded by the enemy, he was as prompt to maintain his country's honor in the field, and with his regiment was of those who participated in the glorious defence of this city. Thus whether in the forum or the field Colonel Sewell was always among the foremost in his efforts to promote public welfare. But, however distinguished as a patriot, he was perhaps even yet more remarkable for those admirable traits which adorn social life, and contribute to the happiness of immediate friends and neighbors. None such ever sought without obtaining aid and council, and his warm heart was ever eager to seek out and his kindly hand ready to relieve the sufferings of the afflicted and the wants of the needy. Many such pensioners of his liberal bounty will sadly mourn the passage from time of a beloved benefactor. Many bound by the ties of family and social regard will deplore the void left in the charmed circle of love and friendship. In Oct., 1823, Colonel Sewell represented Harford Co., Md., in the Legislature, and again in 1825. In 1826 he was chosen an elector; at that time two such electors chosen in each county, met at Annapolis, as an electoral college, to choose a Senator for each county in the State. Colonel Sewell was chosen by the body of which he was a member State Senator (Sept. 19, 1826), for Harford

Co. In 1828 he was chosen on the Adams ticket to represent the electoral district composed of Harford and Cecil counties in the national electoral college. In 1832 he represented the same two counties in the national Congress as a Jackson man. He was a high-minded, honorable man of marked ability and integrity, one whom no bribes could seduce, nor threats overawe. He left a landed estate of nearly 3,000 acres, the greater part of it in Harford Co. He also left valuable property in the city of Baltimore and on the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

2. John Keagy, b. about 1753; d. unm., and intestate, the 2d of his family to die.

3. Rudolph Keagy, b. about 1755; d. unm. and intestate, the 1st of his family to die.

4. Isaac Keagy, b. about 1757; d. unm. He left a will dated July 11, 1780, and bequeathed part of his estate to his nephew, Isaac Neff, his sister's son, and to his nephew, John Keagy, and his niece, Ann Katharine Keagy, the two minor children of his brother Jacob, who died a few years before him. A seeming strange fatality followed this Keagy family. Three of the sons and a grandchild of Ann Katharine Keagy Sewell, the only surviving grandchild of John Keagy, were drowned.

5. Ann Keagy, b. about 1760; m. Isaac Neff, and had two sons, viz: John and Isaac. Of these John d. in infancy, and the other in his young manhood before he possessed his inheritance. Ann (Keagy) Neff d. prior to 1780.

The descendants of John or Johannes Keagy are all extinct in the male line, and in the female line are found in the Sewells, Lees, Somervells, Morsells, of Maryland, and the Bayards and others of Delaware, all of whom are of the highest respectability and distinguished for their intelligence, sociability and hospitality, and are accounted among the most worthy citizens of the States in which they dwell.

BOOK THIRD, CHAPTER FIRST.

DESCENDANTS OF

CHRISTIAN KEAGY, the eldest son of Rudolph Kägy who came to America in 1764, landing first in Pennsylvania, and about the year 1781 migrating to the valley of Virginia, where he died in 1793.

“ Biography is the only true history.”

The third emigration of Kägys to this country took place Oct. 27, 1764, when the ship “Hero,” Ralph Forster, captain, from Rotterdam, last from Cowes, arrived with 500 passengers (194 of whom were adults), the balance were under 16 years of age. Among this number was one

RUDOLPH KAGY, the progenitor of this branch. It is quite certain that this Kägy located in Pennsylvania and remained there until after the close of the Revolutionary War. When he left Pennsylvania to take up his residence in Virginia is not now (1899) definitely known. The most definite and reliable information we have thus far been able to get has been furnished by John Kägy, of Tiffin, O., in a letter to his son, Dr. Isaac Kägy, of near the same city, which I insert here “Verbatim et literatim :”

DEAR SON ISAAC: According to your request, I will give you a biography of the Kägy family as near as I can remember. So far as our family is concerned, I will commence with my grandfather and grandmother. They were both from Germany and settled in Pennsylvania, where they had a good property, which grandfather sold and took the avails of it all in Continental money. He intended to move from Pennsylvania to Virginia to buy property at the latter place, but he delayed so long doing so that the money he had received for his Pennsylvania property became worthless, and so he became poor and dependent on manual labor to make a living. He however moved to Virginia and raised quite a large family. They lived in Shenandoah Co. (the place of my nativity), on a small stream called Holeman's creek, where he undertook to raise a saw-mill. He and another man went out into the woods to prepare some timber to raise the mill. The man who was with grandfather cut down a tree which fell against another and then fell back where grandfather was sitting and killed him. So grandmother became a widow, and some time afterwards married a man by the name of Jacob Miller, with whom she was living when we left Virginia.

"There were seven children in my grandfather's family when he died, three boys and four girls. The names of the boys were Christian, Rudolph and Jacob. The names of the two older girls were Barbara and Elizabeth. I have forgotten the names of the two youngest girls. As to their marriages, Christian married Mary Bibler; father (Rudolph) married Hannah Siple; Jacob married Rebecca Bibler, sister to Mary Bibler above named. The girls were married as follows: Barbara married George Zirkle; Elizabeth married David Wine; one whom I cannot name married Samuel Wine, brother of David Wine, and the fourth married Samuel Good.

"Thus I have given you a description of our ancestors. Now as to the other Kageys, with whom our relationship is very distant, so that I cannot give anything more than the names of some of the older ones, with whom I was acquainted. There was old Henry Kagey,* who owned a mill on Smith's creek; Isaac, who was the miller in said mill; Jacob, who was a Mennonite preacher; John, who was a preacher among the Dunkards, so-called, but now named Triune Baptists; then there was Rudolph, who had a large family of boys, with whom I was never acquainted. All these old Kageys named were brothers and respectable people.

* Henry Kagey was the fourth son of John R. K gy, the first of the name in Pennsylvania, who came from Switzerland in 1715. Henry migrated from Page Co., Va., to Shenandoah Co., Va., in 1769. Isaac, Jacob and Rudolph were three of his eight sons.

[Henry Kagey d. Oct. 8, 1783, and the writer has been told that the mill was not yet completed, but that his wife, Barbara, completed it and brought a miller from Pennsylvania to instruct her young son Isaac, a lad of some 13 years of age, in the art of milling. Tradition says this person was named Rudolph Kägy. Later researches furnish indubitable proof that it was him (Rudolph Kägy), the founder of this branch, who came to America in 1764. If so, then he came to Virginia a few years later than heretofore stated, or about 1783. The millwrights that built Henry Kagey's mill were Daniel and ——— Beery, who walked from Pennsylvania to the Valley of Virginia. Daniel Beery, the first named, married Barbara Kagey, the 2d daughter and 8th child of Henry Kagey.—
EDITOR.]

"The old ones are dead and no more, and the young ones are scattered throughout the States. Thus I have given you all the information concerning the Kägys that I am able to according to my recollection.

Your father,

JOHN KAGY."

The only error, if such it be, in the above statement of John Kägy is the omission of the daughter Anna's name. It is certain that there was a daughter Anna, which makes five daughters.

From Mrs. Catharine Knupp, of Moore's Store, Shenandoah Co., Va., I have learned that Rudolph Kägy was unmarried when he came to this country and settled in Pennsylvania. His wife, who was Frances Bargebaugh, was 14 years old when she came to America from Germany.

From I. D. Rupp's 30,000 Emigrants to Pennsylvania, I learn that one Johan Jost Birckelbach came to this country from Rotterdam Oct. 29, 1770, on the ship "Sally," John Osmond, master, 143 passengers. He is confidently believed to be the parent of Frances Birckelbach, who became the wife of Rudolph Kägy.

In the year 1727 the Provincial Council adopted and enforced the following rule, to wit: "That the masters of vessels importing Germans and others from the continent of Europe, shall be examined whether they have leave granted them by the court of Great Britain for the importation of these foreigners, and that a list be taken of all these people. These lists contain the names of all male passengers above the age of 16. These were made to subscribe to a Declaration of Allegiance, with their own hands, if they could write; if they could not, the name was written by a clerk, and the person qualified made his mark. This is the reason why the names of wives and children do not appear in the lists, with fathers and adult sons."

On the occasion of the 6th reunion of the Kägy Biographical Association at Valley Springs, near New Market, Va., in 1889, the venerable Mrs. ——— Moffett,* of near the latter place, said that her grandfather, Rudolph Kägy, came to Virginia from Pennsylvania. He was a millwright by trade, and also a miller. Some time after he came to Virginia he erected a saw-mill. While at work in the woods he was killed by a tree falling on him. He was not instantly killed, but never regained consciousness, dying at midnight of the same day. Mrs. Moffett says her mother could well remember how her father looked when brought to his home, the sight of his mutilated, bleeding form was indelibly impressed upon her memory. He was buried in a nearby graveyard. Mr. Kägy was of a dark, swarthy complexion, dark hair and eyes, and his son, Rudolph, was like him and was sometimes called "Black Rudy," to distinguish him from another Rudolph Kagey, a son of old Henry, who went from Pennsylvania to the Valley of Virginia in 1768. Mrs. Moffett says: "I can remember well hearing my father tease mother about her father being so black. She also says my mother was very dark." Mrs. Moffett says there were four sons in Rudolph Kägy's family, one of whom was killed accidentally by the premature discharge of a gun in the hands of his brother. The two brothers were preparing to go on a hunt, and while one of them was engaged casting bullets outside of the mill, the other one was inside, the gun resting on the lower half of the door, the muzzle directed outward, when the gun went off accidentally and killed the one outside. Mrs. Moffett is a granddaughter of the widow of Rudolph Kägy by her marriage to Jacob Miller. Mrs. Knupps was a descendant of Jacob Miller and so was the venerable mother of Rev. Joseph M. Kägy, of Dayton, Va., and by her marriage to David Kägy, a son of Abraham, 5th son of Henry, the two branches of the Kägy families became doubly related in a distant degree. It seems conclusive from all the data obtainable that Rudolph Kägy, who came to America in 1764, was a generation younger than John R. Kägy, who came in 1715, or quite as likely two generations younger. That they bore some kinship to each other we can well believe from the testimony of the few old Kägys and others, who yet linger among us on the shores of time, and who always regarded one another as kindred.

RUDOLPH KÄGY, as has heretofore been stated, sold a property in Pennsylvania and was paid in Continental money. This must have taken place during the Revolutionary War and before its close, while that kind of money was yet good, because while it had rapidly depreciated in value, it was not wholly worthless until 1781. Therefore it is quite likely that this date is about the time of his migration to Virginia. As to the time of his marriage we are not informed. His youngest daughter and child was born in 1793, three months after the death of her father. I am informed that he never owned any real estate in Virginia. He lived on a place called Boiling Spring, about three miles northwest of New Market, Shenandoah Co., Va., in the vicinity of which he evidently is buried. The exact locality is not now known.

To Rudolph Kägy and Frances Bargebaugh were born four sons and five daughters, to wit: Christian, Rudolph, Jacob, Anna, Barbara, Elizabeth, Mary and Catharine. There was another son, who was killed by the accidental discharge of a gun as before stated.

In religious faith they were both "Mennists." When, after the death of her husband, she married Jacob Miller, she united with the German Baptists. I wish to call the reader's attention to what appears to be a grave discrepancy between the statement made by Dr. Isaac Kägy's father when he says: "There were seven children in his grandfather's family when he died." I have stated that there was nine. A little reflection will correct the apparent discrepancy. It has been previously stated that a young son was accidentally killed, and as the eldest daughter had married and left the parental home before the Doctor's father was born, at least before he had arrived at an observing age, so far as it relates to the number of sons, we are perfectly safe in saying that he never could have known the one killed and may have never even heard of the occurrence, and hence his statement was correct as to the fact he mentioned, viz: There being seven persons, sons and daughters, in his grandfather's family when he died. John's father, Rudolph, the 2d, left Virginia about the year 1818, or perhaps a little later. I am informed that all three sons of old Rudy left Virginia about the same time and settled in Ohio and became pioneers in the upbuilding of that great State, and from whence their descendants have gone out into every State and Territory, and by their industry have added to the wealth of the country and have shaped and administered its laws, with honor to themselves and to the satisfaction of their fellow-citizens. In every walk and avocation of life is found some one of this worthy people, adorning their calling with credit and ability, exhibiting all the virtues that ennoble manhood and womanhood.

Much doubt existed for some time among the descendants of Rudolph Kägy as to the time he left Pennsylvania and went to Virginia. After much time spent and thought given to the matter and an examination of all the data bearing upon the subject we now feel confident we have arrived at the time to within a month or two at least, and which is sufficiently satisfactory for the purpose of a Kägy History. A correct chronology is however the life and soul of any history. Thus it will be seen that Rudolph Kägy lived some thirteen years in Virginia and was not killed (as heretofore stated by a tree falling on him soon after his arrival in Virginia, as is generally believed).

Mr. Benjamin Zirkle, of Mt. Horeb, Jefferson Co., Tenn., a son of Geo. Zirkle, who married Barbara, the daughter of Rudolph Kägy, says in a letter to the Editor dated April 24, 1890: "I recollect hearing my mother say that her father told her that he came from Switzerland; he was a Mennonite and brought his church letter with him. My mother always said, in speaking of the Shenandoah Co. Kageys, that they were cousins in Switzerland. I never heard her say that her father, Rudolph Kägy, had any brothers or sisters." In regard to the Continental money that Rudolph Kägy received for his property sold in Pennsylvania, Mr. Zirkle says: "My mother told me that they left Pennsylvania in the fall of the year and by spring the money became worthless. A handkerchief full of it was used to light the fire in cooking. Mr. Zirkle says: "I saw a few pieces of it in my father's house." From the above statements, coming as they do from so authentic a source, we are led to believe that Rudolph Kägy left Pennsylvania in the fall of 1781. In further support of this conclusion I will quote from Harper's New Monthly Magazine, vol. 26, page 433, for the years '62 and '63, Dec. to May numbers, which gives a table exhibiting the depreciation of the Continental money at the beginning of every month during the last five years of its existence, specie being the standard of value, to wit:

January,	$105	$325	$742	$2,934	$7,400
February,	107	350	868	3,322	7,500
March,	109	370	1,000	3,736
April,	112	400	1,104	4,000
May,	115	400	1,215	4,600
June,	120	400	1,342	6,400
July,	125	425	1,477	6,900
August,	150	450	1,630	7,000
September,	175	475	1,800	7,100
October,	275	500	2,030	7,200
November,	300	445	2,308	7,300
December,	310	634	2,593	7,400

In the above table we see that in February, 1781, Continental money became valueless, and confirms the statement of Mr. Zirkle's mother, and fixes the time of Rudolph Kägy's migration to Virginia as being made in the fall of 1781, or a little later.

In order to show the practical effect of this depreciation of Continental money, I append a bill of sale of goods as follows:

two daughters and one son, viz: Ethel May Kägy, b. in Ottawa, Ill., June 26, 1866; Volney B. Kägy, b. in Ottawa, Ill., Oct. 31, 1867; Laura C. Kägy, b. in Kankakee, Ill., Dec. 31, 1869. John M. Kägy and family now (1898) reside at Bozeman, Mont. John M. Kägy has had a varied experience in his life as this brief biography will show. He was b. in Fairfield Co., O. His early life was spent on a farm until he was 21 years of age. At that time his father's land was mostly in timber, and had to be cleared, which involved the hardest manual labor. His schooling was such as was then obtained in country schools; the sessions were for three months only. In the spring of 1857 he left Fairfield Co., O., and went to Illinois, in company with his brother-in-law, J. M. Walters, and in the spring of 1859 he returned to Ohio, and moved his father and family to Ottawa, Lasalle Co., Ill., where his father d. in 1872. His great-uncle, Jacob Kägy's farm was within a half mile of his father's in Fairfield Co., and frequently visited John M.'s home, and on such occasions he would often recount the story of his pioneer life, and no doubt the recital of these stories had much to do with the subject of this sketch in forming a taste for adventure in the wilds of the far west. In a letter to the writer he says: "My great-uncle was one of the best men that ever lived. He wrote his name Cagy, stating that it was easier for him to make a C than a K. Becoming ambitious to see something of the country, in the spring of 1861 he left Illinois in company with an old friend of his, A. R. Keller. They went across the plains with a team to California. They had entered into a solemn compact to stand by each other, and to do nothing without the other's consent. In the spring of 1862 young Keller got the war fever and asked his companion to consent to his return to the East. This being given, young Keller enlisted as a private, and so acquitted himself that at the close of the war he wore the uniform of a colonel. Our hero being thus left alone, in the spring of 1862 he went to the Salmon River mines, in Oregon, where he worked in the mines six months, and secured $1,000. The mine failing to yield, he returned to California and went up the Feather river, from Butte City,

Cal., and there he rented a ranch and farmed it for two years, 1863 and 1864. He then concluded to return to Illinois, and sold out and found he had $10,000 in gold. This he exchanged for greenbacks, and received $20,000 for it. He located at Ottawa, and entered into the wholesale grocery and whiskey business in company with his brothers-in-law, J. W. Walters and James T. Church; he had a half interest in a distillery at Joliet, Ill. This enterprise was a financial success, but a destructive fire consumed the greater part, and he sold out his interest. Concluding that that was not the business for him, he then went to Kankakee Co., Ill., and bought 960 acres of land and went to farming, with the purpose of making that the business of his life. But fate decreed otherwise. In an evil hour he yielded to the generous impulses of his heart and endorsed largely for friends, and through them lost all his possessions and he became poor and penniless, and was made to feel in his own experience the terrible truth of the old adage, "Prosperity makes friends; adversity tries them," and alas, too often we find them wanting. With hope still undimmed, he again started for the west with his little family, a wife and three children. This was in the spring of 1872. He located in the same place he occupied in 1863 and '64. Here he went to work with a will and determination to achieve success, but he found he could not do as much work or stand the wear and tear of hard work as he once did. He remained here until Oct., 1879, during which time he and his family suffered from the chills and fever. About this time he was appointed to assist his old friend, A. R. Keller, who was then Indian agent under appointment of the United States Government, and had control of the stock, serving in this capacity for five years, afterward going into the sheep raising business. He is now engaged in farming at Bozeman, Mont.

Mr. Hall was b. in Rockingham Co., Va., and with his parents went to Ohio (Fairfield Co.) in 1804. At that time this county was a dense wilderness, and was still inhabited by remnants of Indian tribes. A few months after their marriage, Aug. 25 1828, they moved from Fairfield Co. to Seneca Co., and unloaded their little household utensils under the grateful shade of two large oak trees, on the banks of Morrison's creek, and one week later the rude cabin was raised in the wilderness and became their home for forty years.

Here he raised a family of ten children, eight of whom still live. The last few years of Mr. Hall's life were attended with great suffering from rheumatism, but he bore his sufferings with great patience and resignation, calmly and serenely waiting the Master's call to come up higher. He retained his kind, genial spirit all through life, which won for him many warm personal friends, with an ever-abiding faith in God. He trusted his all to Him.

“His was a faith that would not shrink.
 Tho' pressed by every foe—
 That would not tremble on the brink
 Of any earthly woe—”

For years he served as justice of the peace and as a civil officer he was just and impartial and his decisions in matters of dispute among his fellow-men—he was often asked to decide them, not as a magistrate, but as a friend—and very often the parties submitted to the verdict of his just judgment. JOHN KAGY, the eldest son of Rudolph Kägy, the 2d, was b. in Shenandoah Co., Va., Jan. 17, 1797, and was 22 years of age when his parents moved from Virginia to Fairfield Co., O., in 1819. His father's family at this time consisted of ten children, John being the eldest. Their journey westward was made in a four-horse wagon, which served the three-fold purpose of passenger, freight and sleeping-car. The journey was a long and tedious one, and was accompanied with many discomforts and privations. The roads were exceedingly bad, and often they were obliged to cut their way through the dense woods and draw the team through deep creeks. There were no smooth, well-ballasted pikes in those days, no Pullman coaches with their elegant dining saloons, sleeping-berths with lavatory and observation accommodations, for these were not then dreamed of. The prospect that was before these hardy and brave pioneers was not a glowing, pleasing one. The termination of their long and perilous journey would not seat them in a country surrounded with all the comforts and conveniences of modern life, far, vastly far from it. The stout-hearted pioneer was going out into the wilderness to battle with nature, to reduce the forest, and with grub and hoe carve out of the primeval forest a home and habitation for himself and his family. The forest around him in his new chosen home resounded with the woodman's axe, where but a short while before was heard the Indians' war-whoop as he stealthily struck his last blow to defend the graves of his sires, and his hunting grounds from occupancy by the pale faces. The soil was yet wet with the blood of the slain, spilled in the mighty struggle between the savage and civilian, in which fate has decreed victory to the latter. By energy, industry and perseverance the forest has been subdued, the wild beasts have disappeared, and the red man has gone to the "happy hunting ground" and in their place we see to-day smiling fields of golden grain, cattle upon a thousand hills, and homes where the sons and daughters of the pioneers dwell, in the possession of all the comforts that embellish and adorn modern life, and who are accounted among the most cultured, able and worthy citizens of the State. The place where the subject of this sketch first settled in Ohio is now in Walnut township, Fairfield Co. Afterward he moved into Seneca Co., O. The date of his emigration from Virginia to Ohio was Oct. 10, 1819, which is supposed to be the time when they left Virginia, and not the date of arrival in Ohio. Soon after his arrival in Ohio John Kägy married Catharine Hite, whose parents had emigrated from Virginia a few years previous, or near the same time, and settled in the same County (Fairfield). John Kägy removed from Fairfield Co., O., to Seneca Co., in the year 1827. At this time the place where he located was a primitive forest, not a tree had been cut in the dense woods. There was no white persons near, no cabin of some earlier pioneer to give his family temporary shelter until he could erect one. He and his family lived in the wagon used in transporting them until they could cut timber and erect a log cabin for their future place of dwelling. The place where he located was about one mile south of the village of the Mohawk Indians, who were quite numerous at that time, and though they appeared friendly, they often caused alarm by appearing in numbers of from two to six, begging for something to eat; the good wife gave them pie on the occasion of some of their visits and told them what it was; by this name they afterward called every kind of food. Mrs. Kägy often related to her children that the Indians would often appear and ask her for "More peace pie." Here John Kägy established his permanent home on one of the most fertile districts of land in Ohio. A stream wound its course across these lands, on which he erected a saw-mill, which was operated day and night during much of the season, and which proved the source of considerable profit. This stream took its name, "Honey creek," from the large amount of wild honey found in the forests along its banks. In the course of time, as the country began to be settled and schools were needed, John Kägy engaged in teaching, which he continued at for several years during the winter months. In whatever he did he was scrupulously honest and was always fearful lest he would not give good measure when he sold the products of the farm, and always gave several extra measures to insure correctness. His word was as good as any man's bond, and his statements in any transaction where he was an interested party were never questioned—never doubted. He was like the towering oak that lifts its head high above the lesser trees and catches the first rays of the morning light, while the others are still in darkness. Thus in like manner was he above the common men of his time. He was a noble character and worthy of imitation.

In early life he and his wife attached themselves to the regular Predestinarian Baptist Church and remained in that order or society during their lives, faithful and consistent members, both living far beyond the patriarchial age—he having attained the ripe old age of over 88 years, dying March 9, 1885, at Inka, Marion Co., Ill. His wife died Feb. 21, 1886, less than one year after the death of her husband. After a long, busy, useful life, on which they had journeyed together so long, kind nature granted them but a brief separation, and the drama of life of two grand souls ended.

"Weep not for them, who having won
The bound of man's appointed years at last,
Life's blessings all enjoyed, life's labors done,
Serenely to their final rest have passed;
While the soft memory of their virtues yet
Lingers like twilight hues, when the bright sun is set."

His youth was innocent; his riper age
Marked with some act of goodness every day;
And watched by eyes that loved him, calm and sage
Faded his late declining years away;
Cheerful he gave his being up, and went
To share the holy rest that waits a life well spent."

Mary Maria, b. Oct. 2, 1895.

Rudolph, b. May 27, 1897.

Charles, b. Feb. 17, 1898.

Mr. Frank Kägy is a tiller of the soil and a successful farmer.

Rudolph Kägy removed with his parents from Fairfield Co., O., to near Tiffin, Seneca Co., O., where he grew to manhood on the farm now owned by his brother, Dr. Isaac Kägy. In 1861 he removed to Marion Co., Ill., and commenced farming there; in 1872-3 he engaged in merchandizing, and in the latter part of 1873 he again took up farming on another farm, on which he is living now (1898). Mr. Kägy is known throughout the county where he lives, and is regarded as one of the most just and upright of citizens; he is a man of few words, decided in his convictions and firm yet kind to all; a good neighbor, ready and willing to oblige. His wife d. Oct. 22, 1881. Neither the father or sons ever joined a church, believing that a correct life here in all its relations to our fellow-beings is the best, and that virtue is its own reward; and if there be another life right conduct here will be the best passport, the surest means of meriting it.

4. ISAAC KAGY was b. on the 2d of Feb., 1828, in Seneca Co., O., on the old homestead now owned by him. His youth up to 18 years of age was spent upon his father's farm, where he imbibed that love for a farmer's life that he follows so enthusiastically and so successfully to-day. After his eighteenth year he began the study of medicine and entered the medical college at Cincinnati, O., graduating in the year 1848-9. He was m., March 29, 1849, to Nancy Taylor Martin, daughter of Samuel S. Martin, of Perry Co., O. He practiced his profession for six years at Green Springs, O., when, on account of broken health caused by a laborious country practice, he discontinued the practice of medicine. He was appointed postmaster at Green Springs under the administration of President Pierce, and served for six years. At the same time he was appointed railroad agent at the same place, which position he filled for the same time. In 1861 he resigned both of these positions to enter upon the duties of the office of county auditor, to which office he was elected in 1860 and re-elected in 1862. He was a member of the school board and City Council of Tiffin, O., for two years each, and was elected in 1865 a member of the Legislature of Ohio and served one term. He was appointed auditor to fill a vacancy in 1872, and was appointed county treasurer of Seneca Co., to fill a vacancy in 1885, serving sixteen months. In 1890 he was elected a member of the Decennial Board of Equalization of Taxes of Ohio, having been land appraiser for his township for the same year (1890). He was twice elected to the office of justice of the peace, which office he now fills (1898). An intelligent and enthusiastic farmer, he was chosen and served as one of the lecturers for the State Board of Agriculture of Ohio, at "Farmers' institutes." He was the editor of the Toledo Democrat, published at Toledo, and was a correspondent and essayist for a number of papers, and wields a trenchant pen on any subject he writes upon. He is independent without haughtiness; as a politician he is incorruptible and always true to his principles and under every circumstance he has exhibited the strictest integrity. His hands are as free from bribes as his heart is from malice. His kindness and charity is of the largest kind, yet so unostentatiously done that the left hand hardly knoweth what the right hand has done. Dr. Kägy and his noble wife have taken under their roof fourteen orphan children and fed and clothed and educated them and made them useful members of society, and who have gone out into the world equipped for the duties and responsibilities of citizenship, and are the living monuments of the nobleness of heart and mind of their foster parents. This is but one of the many charitable deeds of Dr. and Mrs. Kägy. In all his dealings and business affairs with his fellow-men he has been on the giving side. In all these acts of the most practical kind of Christianity Dr. Kägy is seconded and assisted by his wife. Their home is a model one; here is seen the happiest proofs that marriage is not a failure. Love, the divinest thing on earth, is the goddess that rules here, and here is seen the rich fruits of its influence. The generous and liberal hospitality of Dr. Kägy and his wife is too well known to need repeating here. The "gude housewife" always has an extra plate for the casual friend or "stranger within the gates." St. Paul, the most learned and greatest of all the Apostles, has said that "Charity is the greatest of all the virtues that adorn Christian character." The broad-gauged generosity of Dr. Kägy and his wife embraces the whole relationship and human kind and to their loving hearts and generous minds the "Kägy Relationship" are indebted for the origin and success of those grand reunions, which have wielded so much influence for good and aid in tracing the Kägy genealogy. Four or more of these meetings have been held at their beautiful home, and of the hundreds who attended all testify to the princely hospitality shown them. Dr. and Mrs. Kägy have both reached and passed patriarchial age, but still take a lively interest in all the duties and affairs of life. If the sincere and well wishes of a mighty host of friends could prolong their lives, they would live far beyond the century mark, to enjoy the love and esteem of their many friends, neighbors and kindred. It is impossible to estimate the worth and value to the world of such as they, and impossible to overestimate them.

NANCY TAYLOR MARTIN KÄGY was b. in Perry Co., O., on the 19th day of Sept., 1827. She is a daughter of Samuel S. Martin, of the above named county. Her education was such as was afforded by the common schools in the vicinity of her home; being of a ready and inquiring mind, she was fitted for and commenced teaching in her 16th year, in which she was engaged for six successive terms. Mrs. Kägy is distinguished for her amiability, sweetness of temper, gentleness and kindly deportment, with an intelligence that is rare and a judgment seldom mistaken. She seeks and gives counsel to her husband. This she does with a grace and ease that is as unique as it is matchless. She seems to understand the science of family government well and trained her own children (and fourteen orphans, who found shelter under her motherly wing), to habits of industry and usefulness, giving to those the same motherly care that she did to her own. We know that the burden and care of children falls heaviest upon the mother, and we can but wonder and admire the self-sacrificing spirit of this noble-hearted woman. Where do we find an instance to match it, or even to approach it? This is not unmerited, fulsome praise; it is simple justice. Let us be just to the living; it is a duty we owe them. The children of Isaac and Nancy Kägy are:

1. Samuel Thompson Kägy, b. Feb. 23, 1850; d. Sept. 30, 1852.

2. Mary Catharine Kägy, b. Feb. 11, 1852, in Green Springs, O.

3. Hannah Sabina Kägy, b. Oct. 29, 1853, in Green Springs, O.

2. Mary Catharine, m. Thomas Jetson Frazier, Dec. 28, 1876. Their children are: Mary Kägy, b. March 29, 1878; Harry Clinton, b. Dec. 14, 1880; Nancy Estelle, b. July 14, 1882; Edith Lee, b. July 12, 1884. All were born in Tiffin, O. There is a noteworthy circumstance connected with the birth of the two last-named children. The last one at birth weighed only $2\frac{1}{2}$ pounds, while the other one, Nancy E., weighed only $1\frac{1}{2}$ pounds and could have been put in and covered over in a quart measure. Life was scarcely discernable for six weeks. She was not dressed at all for three months, but was kept in cotton. When one year old she weighed 6 pounds, and looked like a beautiful doll. She is now (1898) a beautiful girl of 16 years and of average size. Mr. Thomas J. Frazier is an officer of the B. & O. R. R. Co., at Zanesville, O., and was b. in Loudon Co., Va., March 31, 1849.

3. Hannah Sabina Kägy, b. Oct. 29, 1853; m., Aug. 10, 1875, to Dr. James S. Haly. Issue: Wm. Stokes Haly, b. Nov. 6, 1876, and is now (1898) a student at the Ohio State University: John Kägy Haly, b. Jan. 27, 1879, graduate of the High School, is a druggist; An infant daughter, d. in infancy. Dr. James Steadman Haly was b. July 25, 1851, at Napoleon, O. He was educated at the public and private schools in Napoleon, after which he studied medicine, attending college at the University of Michigan, at Ann Harbor, and at Jefferson Medical College, at Philadelphia, Pa., having graduated at the latter place March 9, 1872, and has continued in the practice of medicine ever since at Napoleon, O., where he now resides (1898). Dr. Haly possesses many of the qualities that go to make up the successful physician, notably among these is the kindness and sympathy shown the sick under his care, which in many cases is more efficacious than any medicine. This anxiety and unremitting care has in a large measure resulted in the impairment of his own health, but has made him many warm and appreciative friends among all classes of people.

5. JOHN BENJAMIN KAGY, was b. Jan. 9, 1830, in Seneca Co., O., on the farm to which his father removed in 1827. His early education was acquired at the common schools in his neighborhood; later he entered the Seneca County Academy, located at Republic, and took a course of instruction under eminent instructors, the faculty consisting in part of the late Thomas W. Harvey, professor of languages; and Aaron Schuyler, who was professor of mathematics. After leaving the academy Mr. Kägy engaged in teaching as a chosen profession, which he continued for thirteen years successively. In 1853, Sunday, Feb. 13th, he was united in holy wedlock to Miss Marietta Black, the eldest daughter of Daniel Bies and Phoebe Black, of New York, a lady of much culture and many graces, and of untiring energy and industry, and one who has been to her husband a helpmeet in all that the word implies. In Mrs. Kägy is found that rare combination of qualities that enables her to fill all the varied offices and duties of wife and mother, with such singular ability to command with gentleness, to reprove without wounding, yet firm in maintaining that discipline so essential in the household. Her devotion to her large family of sons and daughters is proverbial, and though some of them have left the parent nest, her rich mother-love follows them with a mother's prayers, but it is not alone to her own family that her native goodness of heart manifests itself. All who chance to come within the charmed circle of her presence are made to feel that they are in the presence of no ordinary woman and one with the noblest impulses. Mrs. Kägy is highly esteemed in the community where she resides by all who know her, as a modest Christian woman of the practical kind.

At the age of 23 the county commissioners of his county unanimously offered Mr. Kägy the appointment to the office of county surveyor, and although the office was a lucrative one, he declined to accept it, preferring the more congenial one of that of a teacher. In 1860 he and his family removed to Salem, Marion Co., Ill. Here he purchased a farm near the city, a portion of which lays within the city limits, and upon which he still resides. Here he completed the study of law, which he had previously pursued under the Hon. Silas L. Bryan, father of the Hon. Wm. Jennings Bryan, of Nebraska, late Democratic candidate for President of the United States. The subject of this sketch was admitted to the bar in 1864, and was thereafter appointed master in chancery by Judge Bryan, which office he held for three successive terms of two years each. From the time of his admission to the bar he began the practice of law at Salem with his youngest brother, Amos H., and Wm. H. Brazier, under the firm name of Kägy, Brazier & Kägy. Later this firm dissolved and at the close of the twelfth year of Judge Bryan's judicial terms Mr. Kägy and he formed a law co-partnership under the firm name of Bryan & Kägy. An amusing incident occurred during this co-partnership. Judge Bryan, in writing a business communication, signed the firm name in such undecipherable chirography that the party receiving it could not clearly make out the name of the writer, but answered it, addressing their letter to "Barrel and Keg." In June, 1885, Mr. Kägy was elected judge of probate, with common law jurisdiction, and was re-elected to the same position at the expiration of the term, holding the position of judge for the full term of six years. His decisions were almost universally acquiesced in by litigants and the bar, that but a single case was appealed to the higher courts and this one was affirmed in the Circuit and Appellate Courts of the State, thus every opinion rendered by Judge Kägy during his long service stands unreversed as the law of the case in which it was rendered. This is a very rare case and deserves special mention as showing a full and comprehensive knowledge of the laws of his State. In 1868 Mr. Kägy compiled an ingenious perpetual calendar, which is based on the dominical or Sunday letter as the Mnemonic Key, or Chronological unit. This calendar is as useful as ingenious, and points out the day of the week on each day of any year, Julian or Gregorian, old style or new. For simplicity of arrangement and ease of application it is believed to excel all others of its kind now extant. It also presents the basic laws and principles on which it is constructed. It has become popular as a unique pocket companion in the counting room and in the historian's studio. Judge Kägy is at this time (1899) enjoying the comforts of life, the earnings of an active and energetic busy life, in his beautiful and commodious home on one of the loveliest sites in the city of Salem, within the boundary of whose lawns and groves the reunions of his kindred, by name and blood, have met on four different occasions, and enjoyed the princely hospitality so freely and courteously bestowed upon all who chose to abide with him. The first general reunion of the Kägys was held at his residence on Nov. 12 and 13, 1884, and the last one there was held Oct. 1 and 2, 1897. The writer hereof had the pleasure of being the guest of John B. Kägy and family on the occasion of the Kägy reunion at Prairie Summit Baptist Church, near Salem, Marion Co., Ill., in the fall of 1886, Sept. 29 and 30th, and has had the most convincing proofs of their kindness, and of the Kägy relatives who met on that, to me, the most pleasing, the most enjoyable occasion of my life, the recollection of which after the lapse of twelve years is still as vivid as if it had been but yesterday, and which will abide with me while life and memory lasts. In this beautiful home

1. Levi M., b. Dec. 15, 1855, and on May, 18, 1887, he m. Emily Alice Larimer, youngest daughter of the Hon. Smith Larimer, deceased. Levi M. is a lawyer and by his integrity and honorable dealing, and by his courteous and gentlemanly manners, has won a large and remunerative clientage, and the esteem of all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance. He was b. in Seneca Co., O., on the old home place, where his father was born, and when 4 years old removed with his parents and his baby sister Alice to Red Lick Prairie, in Alma township, Marion Co., Ill., Oct., 1859. Levi Monroe Kägy received a common school education, and at the early age of 17 began teaching, which he followed for eight successive years. During the summer he worked on his father's farm. After arriving at his majority he decided to study law. He worked on the farm in summer and taught school in the winter until Sept., 1881, when he entered the Union College of Law, at Chicago, Ill., graduating June 14, 1883, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. He was admitted by the Supreme Court of his adopted State to practice in her courts, June, 1883. On the 1st day of Jan., 1884, he opened an office in Salem, Ill., and began the practice of his chosen profession, to which he has given all his time, and by study and perseverance has overcome the many obstacles and hindrances that ever beset the pathway of a young lawyer, especially so in his case, where there were many old, able lawyers at the bar. Gifted by nature with a strong will and with the purpose and determination to succeed he has risen step by step until to-day he stands in the very front rank of the local bar, and has a practice extending into other counties. His many friends predict for him a bright and honorable future. His wife, Emily Alice Larimore, of Marion Co., Ill., received her education principally in the high schools of St. Louis, Mo. She is of Scotch-Irish descent, a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian church. She is a woman of deep convictions, energetic and has superior social qualifications, and has a host of friends. The fruit of this union is: John Larimer, b. Feb. 22, 1888, and a little daughter, who d. March 4, 1891, in infancy.

2. Alice Amanda Kagy, was b. on the old homestead in Seneca Co., O., on the 7th of July, 1859, and was about 3 months old when her parents moved from the old home in Seneca Co., O., to their new home in Marion Co., Ill. She had all the advantages of acquiring an education such as was afforded by the common schools at that day. She became a successful teacher and in that way spent the years of her early womanhood. At the same time assisting her mother in the duties of the household and in the management of her own and her mother's interest in the estate, and is a staff of support and of consolation to her venerable mother in her widowhood, and a worthy daughter of a noble father and mother.

DAVID KAGY removed from his native county in Ohio with his family in the fall of 1859, and settled on the farm where he fell asleep in death at 6 o'clock on the morning of Feb. 8, 1887. David was one of eight sons and three daughters of his parents, and leaves one sister and five brothers surviving him. His venerable father and mother had preceded him to their final resting place within two years. As a man of business he was correct and just to all with whom he dealt. His judgment was calm, deliberate and generally correct. His heart was warm, impulsive and generous, and his sympathies gushed out as a fountain of waters. He was not a member of any church, but the cast of his mind was such as favored that of the church of his parents, who for many years were devoted members of the Old School Baptists. He was a good citizen, a kind neighbor, a loving husband and father and had the respect and esteem of all who knew him.

Mr. Amos Hite Kägy is a lawyer by profession, and has built up a large practice in the city of his adoption, and by his attention to the business entrusted to his care has won the confidence and esteem of his large clientage. Mr. Kägy is a Democrat in politics, but has never sought office of any kind, preferring to devote his time and talent to his chosen profession, rather than engage in the debasing, corrupt life of the modern politician. Mr. Kägy joined the Order of Freemasons in early life, and takes a lively interest in every good work of this ancient order and has taken the 32d degree. In his early career as a lawyer he was associated with his brother John B. Kägy and William H. Brazier, under the firm name of Kägy, Brazier & Kägy.

This ends the record of John Kägy's descendants.

They resided in Ohio until May 28, 1840, when they moved to Marion Co., Ill. They had six sons and six daughters.

One who knew Mrs. Christian Kägy has said of her: "Mother Kägy never attached herself to any church, though brought up by a regular Predestinarian Baptist father, who was the founder of the church at Prairie Summit. She always remained a friend of that Society, but in so far as her own future welfare was concerned she was firm in her conviction that a well-spent life in all its relations was the best and most convincing evidence of a true Christian. She was a woman of remarkable physical endurance and mental acuteness, and her convictions were of the most decisive character. She often expressed herself as ready and willing to die, satisfied that all was well with her. Thus calmly and peacefully she passed from life to death. Few women possessed so many of the qualities necessary to meet the varying vicissitudes incident to a pioneer life. Armed by nature and strengthened by culture, with the attributes of mind and heart which distinguished the great and good, she was the peer of the most eminent of her sex; nevertheless acting within the sphere of her own and her husband's calling. She displayed discipline without harshness, and achieved success without pride. Whether as wife, mother or neighbor she was the uniform and constant dispenser of the goodness of heart and purity of purpose, which she eminently characterized through the whole of her long and useful life. She was firm in her convictions, strong in her purposes, just in her dealings, circumspect in manners and ready and pleasing in conversation. She loved justice and praised wisdom. She esteemed friends and pacified enemies. She proved her faith by her example and led in the way she would have others go. Her history abounded in deeds of kindness toward all with whom she mingled while here, and her uniform goodness of heart secured encomiums of praise from all who knew her, which stands a continuing monument to attest her virtues and nobility." Their children are as follows, viz:

1. Elizabeth Kägy, b. Nov. 19, 1826.
2. Nancy J. Kägy, b. ———, 1828; d. ———, 1832.

1. ELIZABETH KÄGY, eldest child of Christian Kägy, was b. in Fairfield Co., O., Nov. 19, 1826. She was 14 years of age when her parents moved from Ohio to Marion Co., Ill. The early youth of Elizabeth Kägy was chiefly spent in assisting her mother in the cares of a large family of brothers and sisters, and in attending school in winter at such times as her services were not imperatively needed in her home. It is not necessary to say that at that day the cook stove, washing machine and sewing machine were not yet invented, and the life of a farmer's wife and daughters then was one of work, work, from early light till dewey eve. More especially is this true of those who have gone into a new country, where the heaviest burdens often are borne by the gentler sex. But with all the disadvantages that environed her pathway and her meagre opportunities for acquiring an education, she qualified herself for teaching school, and it was whilst in this capacity she met the man who was to be her future husband. He was a native of the same county in Ohio from which she came. This acquaintance ripened into friendship and thence into love and matrimony and on the 18th day of May, 1848, their marriage was duly solemnized. But oh, how different was the surroundings of the bride that day, compared to that of her daughters in our day. There was no canopied, carpeted path, no festooned draperies, flower-bedecked room and hall, no music from the organ or cloistered choir, no rays from richly-colored cathedral glass to cast a dim religious light and halo over the scene. The bride of that day stepped from the altar to the rude cabin with its two rooms and rude furnishings, and with loyal heart and willing hands set to work and in a brief time the busy housewife had transformed the cabin into a commodious and comfortable dwelling and added to their possession several hundred acres of land adjoining their's. Her zeal for the temporal and physical welfare of her family was fully equalled by her care for their intellectual advancement. She was a generation ahead of most of the women of her day in her appreciation of the advantages of an education for women and in order to be able to give such advantages to her children she has, it was said, often worked in the field all day, doing the work of a man and then done her work at the house, thus giving her daughters more time to attend the public schools. It is rarely that there is found so many of the gentle virtues combined in one person as was found in this good woman, with firmness for the right, always and at all times, yet her gentleness disarmed opposition and the vanquished became her fast friends. Her industry was untiring and her frugality proverbial. She saved that she might have wherewith to give. She was wholly free from either malice or envy and none but words of kindness ever came from her lips. She seemed to be pre-eminently endowed with all those womanly virtues and generous qualities that bespeak the true woman. No one ever discharged the duties of life, in all its varied relations, more faithfully and conscientiously than she did. As a daughter she was dutiful and loving, as a wife she was faithful and true, "an helpmeet indeed," in every sense of the word. As a mother, oh, how devoted, tender and considerate for each one of her family. Her every thought was for their good; her every act was to promote their welfare. Her character was as pure and stainless as a child's, and than hers, there throbbed not a kinder or nobler heart in all the world, or one more entirely free from all "the deceits of the world." Words cannot measure the worth and value to the world of such a character; it is beyond computation, it is priceless. It is appointed unto all to die, and in the meridian of life and in the glory of mature womanhood she sank into that dreamless sleep we call death. "After life's fitful fever she sleeps well." The kindly heart is still, the busy hands are folded forever. Mother earth has received her own again, but the pure soul has entered upon that eternal rest that awaits a life well spent. When time with healing wings has assuaged the bitter grief of her departure from among her children and friends, the memory of her life, so true and noble, so fragrant with kindly deeds, will be to those who loved her a sweet and abiding comfort—a sweet peace that passeth all understanding, and that the world cannot take away.

“ Why do we wait till ears are deaf
Before we speak our kindly word,
And only utter loving praise
When not a whisper can be heard ?
Oh ! let us heed the living friend
Who walks with us life's common ways,
Watching our eyes for looks of love,
And hungering for a word of praise.”

SAMUEL E. STEVENSON was b. Aug. 9, 1819, in Fairfield Co., O., his father being one of the early pioneers to this section of the State, and who by their sturdy blows have made the great State of Ohio one of the foremost in the Union in material wealth and prosperity. In his early life the subject of this sketch had few opportunities to acquire an education. At the early age of 6 years he assisted his father in clearing the forest and preparing it for cultivation. Thus was his early boyhood spent up until his 16th year, when he resolved to seek and to hew out his fortune, and leaving the parent nest he hired out at ten dollars per month, and at the end of each year his employer found it to his advantage to increase his pay. He remained four years with Farmer Miller, and at the end of that time he was the owner of seven hundred dollars and a fine horse. His total expense, spent for clothing during these four years, was a fraction over forty dollars. Being ambitious, strong and healthy in body and mind, schooled to habits of industry and economy, gifted with self-reliance and good practical common sense and a business tact rare in one so young, he took with him his earnings, mounted his horse and setting his face westward he resolved to better his fortune in the lonely wilds of Illinois. Here his first venture was to purchase cattle, which he drove back to his native State and sold at a good profit. He continued in this business up to May 18, 1848, when he met and married Elizabeth Kägy, a daughter of Christian and Anna (Hite) Kägy, when he commenced farming and buying and fattening cattle, at which he is one of the most successful in the State. Mr. Stevenson is a self-made man. He is emphatically the architect of his own fortune. His only inheritance was one hundred dollars, given him by his father when he arrived at age. This money he put out at interest with the purpose that it should be used when occasion demanded it, to afford his children an education, which advantage circumstances had deprived him of. This money is yet on interest and amounts to thirty-one hundred dollars without the principal. It has been a cardinal principle with him all through his long business career to be prompt to meet every obligation and to keep every promise. As a farmer he was never behind in his work, and everything was done in its proper season. He managed his farm and business with the strictest economy and by his industry and frugality has won a handsome competency, and has set an example worthy of imitation to all who wish to attain honorable success in life. But it is not alone as a successful farmer and business man that he has attained eminence among his fellow-men. The sterling worth and integrity of Mr. Stevenson has been seen and recognized by his fellow-citizens in many ways. His knowledge of men and business has induced many persons to seek his council and advice and entrust their financial interests to his care and judgment and he filled his trust to their entire satisfaction and advantage. Mr. Stevenson has served the people of his township, county and State as a public officer. He was a member of the Illinois Legislature in the year 1866, and acquitted himself with credit to himself and his constituents. The township in which he resides was called Stevenson in his honor, he being the largest landholder in the township. He is a large stockholder in the Sandoval coal mines and also in the Salem National Bank at Salem, Ill. Mr. Stevenson has long since passed his three-score and ten years of age, but still takes a live interest in everything that is of private or public interest in his county or State. His ample means has enabled him to give his family a liberal education and to establish all of them in comfortable and pleasant surroundings. Human life is often regarded as a success, if financial success is achieved regardless of means, but Mr. Stevenson has done much more. He has acquired wealth and retained honor. His good name is unsullied by no ignoble act. His truthfulness is unimpeached. He has won a host of friends and retains their love and highest esteem. Much more could be truthfully said, in just eulogy of this worthy man, but words are feeble. The best eulogy is a grand, glorious life. The children of Elizabeth Kägy and Samuel E. Stevenson are:

3. JOHN HITE KÄGY, the 3d child of Christian and Anna Hite Kägy, was b. in Fairfield Co., O., and was 10 years of age when his parents moved to Marion Co., Ill. His boyhood days were spent in assisting his father in the varied and rude labor incident to a new settler's life. His opportunities for acquiring an education were exceedingly limited and was confined to reading, writing and ciphering. The greater part of his time was spent in hard, laborious work. He assisted his father in building a house and fencing in the prairie farm and being the eldest son he was the main-stay and manager of the place. After the death of his father the whole management of the farm and the care of a large family of brothers and sisters was added to his other duties, and made his life for years one of anxious care and unremitting toil, leaving him no time for recreation or study. John H. Kägy was made of sturdy stuff, and though he had arrived at his majority the year before his father's death and was legally free, he chose to remain at home and assist his widowed mother until the year 1859, when he met and married Hannah Jane Furry, a lady of many traits of womanly character. Having no children of their own Mr. and Mrs. Kägy were enabled to give their whole time to the care of the farm and relieve his aged mother of hard work. He is the architect of his own fortune, won by honest toil and fair dealing. He is always willing to assist those who are disposed to help themselves and show themselves worthy of assistance. As a man of business he is cautious, prudent and economical. He is the outspoken champion of popular government, that is the government by the people, for the people and against all class legislation, and heartily in favor of equal taxation and representation, regardless of creed or nationality. Mr. Kägy has never sought office. He is content to be a plain independent American citizen, the peer of office-holders, and who are the hope of this free land. Schooled in arduous toil throughout his youth and early manhood, he has born the burdens fate decreed with cheerfulness and manliness in a large degree. These hardships and exactions have not in any way lessened the filial, conjugal or fraternal ties of kinship. His care for, and devotion to his aged mother all through her long life was noble and her declining years were watched over by eyes that loved her, and hands that smoothed her dying pillow, when her grand soul took its everlasting flight beyond this vale of tears. John Hite Kägy still lives on the home place and owns the broad acres cultivated by him in youth and manhood. He and his faithful wife, who, hand in hand are journeying the dusty road of life, full of years, but large with hope, with hands still upon the helm of the barque of life, full of strength and vigor that will, we hope vouchsafe to them years of usefulness and enjoyment in their abundant means and cheerful home. 1. HANNAH KAGY, the eldest daughter and child of Abraham Kägy, was b. Dec. 4, 1824, in Seneca Co., O., and was united in marriage to Daniel Spitler, Feb. 6, 1845, by Elder Lewis Seitz, of the Old School Baptist faith. Daniel Spitler owned a fine farm some five miles southwest of Bloomville, Seneca Co., O., which under his wise and careful management has become one of the best in the county. Mr. Spitler was widely known in the county. He was strong not only in physical frame, but he was stout-hearted and eminently fitted for the work he undertook to do. His honesty and integrity was never impeached, his word when once given was to him a sacred trust not to be broken. It was as good as any man's bond. He was a fine old gentleman, a desirable neighbor, a kind and affectionate husband and father. When age had bent his stalwart frame, and wrinkled his brow, he still retained in a large measure the joyousness of youth. He was fond of his friends and entertained liberally and freely all who came under his hospitable roof. Several of the "Kägy Reunions" were held at his place, at one of which the writer of this too feeble tribute to his memory was present and partook, with many others, of his bounteous store. Industrious and frugal himself, he brought up his large family of sons and daughters to be self-reliant and aimed to equip them for the active duties of life, to make out of them manly men and women. His wife is a woman of like traits of character, and much of the success of the husband was due to the industry and care with which she managed her household and governed her children. She was a helpmeet indeed in every sense of the word, a sharer of his joys and sorrows, for these are the common heritage of man. He d. in 1896, at his home, surrounded by loving sons and daughters, mourned and respected by all who knew him. JOHN SEITZ first saw the light in a rude log cabin in the woods of Ohio, in Seneca Co., and grew up under pioneer conditions, and received such an education as the common schools at that early day afforded, and several terms at an academy, fitting and qualifying himself for teaching, which he followed in the winter months until he was 22 years old, when he m. Cecilia J. Hite. John Seitz is of commanding presence and is in every sense a man of the people and for the people. He inherited some of the indomitable pluck and spirit of his honored father, as well as the ardor and devotion to personal ideals of human excellence of his mother. His fondness for reading history made him acquainted with the lives of the world's great reformers and martyr heroes and these became his models for imitation. He became interested in all live, social and economic questions, which eventually led him into politics in which he engaged as a public speaker as early as 1854. Constitutionally opposed to all forms of oppression, in 1854 he spoke and circulated petitions against the "Kansas Nebraska Act," and voted to send an anti-slavery man to Congress in 1855. The rise of "Know-nothingism" landed him back into the Democratic party. He was elected a member of the Ohio Legislature in 1869, and re-elected in 1871. In 1873 he was elected to the Ohio State Senate from the Third District. In 1875 he was defeated for the nomination for Senator by the "court house ring," but in 1877 he was elected Senator by an unprecedented majority, and during this term was a member of the Finance Committee and chairman of the Committee on Benevolent Institutions. Hon. Allen O. Myers, historian of the Senate, characterized Seitz as "the ever vigilant defender of the people and the watch dog of the treasury." His second election was regarded as a "Greenback victory." He stumped the State for Gen. Ewing for Governor in 1879, but he was defeated by Wall street influence. In 1880 he ran for Congress on the Greenback ticket, defeating the Democratic candidate, and in 1881 he was called to carry the Greenback banner through Ohio as a candidate for Governor and received over 6,000 votes. In 1887 he was chosen to carry the banner of Jeffersonian Democracy in the name of "Union Labor" and received over 25,000. In 1891 he was made a candidate of the "People's Party" against his positive declination and spoke in every city and most of the counties in Ohio and again received 25,000 votes. In 1896 he was on the Union ticket for Bryan and Watson as an elector. Mr. Seitz has always sought the public good and was always to be found on the side of right and against oppression, and was always a true servant of the people. Mr. Seitz is now (1899) and in the past forty-five years, when not engaged in public duty, occupied in farming at his beautiful home near Tiffin, O.

Dr. Martin Kagay says: "I am the 7th son and 12th child of Rudolph Kägy and Hannah Siple, his wife. I am now (Dec. 25, 1893,) in the 69th year of my life. Of the twelve children born to my parents all grew to manhood and womanhood and I and my brother Henry, of near Bloomville, Seneca Co., O., survive. The names of my brothers and sisters in the order of their births as was related to me by my mother often was as follows: (1) John, (2) Jacob, (3) Christian, (4) Abraham, (5) Katharine, (6) Barbara, (7) Hannah, (8) Elizabeth, (9) Mary (Polly), (10) Rudolph, (11) Henry and (12) Martin. All m. and raised families except Jacob, who d. in Fairfield Co., O., at the age of 67. All were b. in Virginia except Henry and myself. We were both b. in Fairfield Co., O. My parents with ten children made the journey in a four-horse wagon from Rockingham Co., Va., to Fairfield Co., O., in the year 1818-19. They were met on their journey in this town (Somerset, O.,) by Uncle Christian Kägy and my mother's brother, Frederick Siple, who must have come here several years prior. I cannot give the names of my aunts, my father's sisters, but at least two of them were left in Virginia. One of them was m. to George Zirkle and lived in Shenandoah or Rockingham Co., Va., and probably d. there about 1860-2. My father, Rudolph, d. in 1829, when I was 4 y. old, aged 56 y. He therefore must have been b. about 1773. His eldest brother, Christian, was probably b. in 1771, and Jacob, his youngest brother, not earlier than 1775, in the midst of the Revolutionary War. My brother John, who was married before I was born, and his son Andrew, though my nephew, was older than I. It is a curious fact that all of my mother's children never sat down together at the same table on the same date, for, as I said, one or perhaps more were married and gone from home before the youngest was born, and had moved away from Fairfield Co., O., to Seneca Co., O., at least 120 miles away. I and my brothers, John, Abraham and Henry, ate at the same table but once in our lives and that was at the table at Dr. Isaac Kägy's, near Tiffin, O., less than a year before my brother John died. My mother lived to the age of 91 years and over and so far no child of hers has approached such an age except her eldest son John, who neither chewed tobacco nor smoked it. My mother was a great smoker and it was in lighting her pipe at the open fireplace that I learned to smoke and got my first taste of tobacco smoke, but not the last, for I still both chew and smoke, not excessively, but in moderation. I imagine that it was born in me to love and endure the effects of tobacco. I don't say this because I think it a virtue to be imitated, but rather a vice to be shunned."

Martin Kagy was born Aug. 20, 1825, three miles south of Lancaster, O., on the left bank of the Hocking river. His father (Rudolph) having died in 1829, leaving his farm to his widow and three younger sons after his death. The will proving defective, because only one, and not two witnesses were attached to it, the farm was sold to the Hon. Thomas Ewing, subject to the widow's dower, which was found to be fifty-two acres, with the house, barn and orchard. This dower was sold and guardians appointed for the minor children, (Polly) Mary, Rudolph, Henry and Martin. He went to live with his sister, Katharine, who had m. Andrew Hite, and who lived near the Baptist church, seven miles east of Lancaster, O. Andrew Hite afterward moved to Marion Co., Ill., and thence to Cowly Co., Kan. Became correspondent of Sunday newspapers and dealt largely as agent in real estate, the business that now engages his attention. He invented a new method of constructing roadways, affording both a dirt or McAdam track face at the pleasure of the driver, and which is destined to become the roadway of the future. At the end of four years so acceptably had he served his constituents that he was chosen in convention as a candidate for a second term. His subsequent career in the Senate justified the confidence placed in him, and when occasion required it no voice was more potent than Senator Rinehart's. It was largely owing to the persistent personal efforts of his that provision was made by the State for the care of the incurably insane. Born and brought up on a farm, reared by sturdy parents, by inheritance his instincts and sentiments are in harmony with the masses. From the farm to the common school, from school to college, and thence to a lawyer's office, by industry and persistent labor he has grown to be a lawyer of marked ability, ranking among the foremost in his profession and one of the ablest advocates in the State. JACOB KAGY, the youngest of the three sons of Rudolph Kägy (who came from Switzerland in the year 1764, Oct. 27, in the good ship "Hero," Ralph Forster, captain, from Rotterdam, last from Cowes, England), was made an orphan at an early age by his father's death, who was killed by a tree falling on him while cutting timber in the woods, and he became a member of the Bibler family, with whom he moved from Virginia into Ohio, and like Jacob of old, after serving his guardian many years, took the daughter, Rebecca Bibler, for his wife in 1810. Dr. Martin Kagay, of Somerset, O., in a letter to the Editor dated Dec. 25, 1893, says: "Uncle Jacob Kägy was a man of about 5 feet 10 inches in height, had fine, glossy, black hair, dark skin, gray eyes, blunt nose, with large nostrils, head long, narrow and high and 22 inches in circumference. His countenance beamed with serene benevolence, his temper was as calm and even as a summer morning. He was never in a hurry, except when he thought he might be too late for church. His wife's temper was about the same, and she was his constant companion; wherever he went, whether they rode horseback, went on foot or rode in the 'dandy wagon,' which was a buggy without springs, or later in life used a spring wagon or the covered buggy. At home or abroad they were happy and very seldom found apart, either at church, associations or on visits to friends, neighbors or relatives, and no two old people were ever more welcomed by all whom they honored with a call, whether it was a business or friendly interview. He was not only a prodigy in the sweetness of his temper and gentleness of his manner, but towered above all around him like a giant oak, in the rectitude of his actions, the veracity of his tongue and in the exaltation of his morality. He was the centre-post in his church, a deacon for many years preceding his death at the advanced age of 80 years, an oracle in the doctrines and tenents of his church, 'the iron jacket Baptists,' the umpire to whom all disputes were referred with the certainty of satisfactory adjudication. He was the noblest work of God, an honest man, whom no bribe could seduce and no terror overawe. With this tribute to the 'just, who die in the Lord,' I close my reminiscences of Jacob Kägy." Dr. Martin Kagay was the 7th son and 12th child of Rudolph Kägy, the 2d son of old Rudolph, who was killed by the tree falling on him, and a nephew of Jacob above named.

"Kind hearts are more than coronets
And simple faith than Norman blood."

Many of our older readers will remember Mr. Benjamin Zirkle and his wife, both of whom were born, reared, and married in this community.

We learn from the Mossy Creek, Tenn., Visitor, that he departed this life. In speaking of him, it says: He was b. in Shenandoah Co., Va., near the town of New Market, in Aug., 1815, and d. near Mt. Horeb, Jefferson Co., Tenn., Dec.

Mrs. Knupp says her mother was three years old when her mother (Rudolph's widow) m. Jacob Miller, and raised a family of sons and daughters. The late venerable Mrs. (Polly) Mary Kagey, wife of David Neff Kagey, was a granddaughter of Jacob Miller, above named. A grandson named Jacob now (1899) resides on the old Jacob Miller farm near Moore's Store, Va. Rudolph Kägy brought his church letter (certificate) with him from Switzerland. Both he and his wife were Menonites. After her marriage to Jacob Miller she united with the German Baptists, of which society he was a member.

BOOK FOURTH. CHAPTER FIRST.

Descendants of Simon Kegi, of Switzerland, 4th emigration about 1818.

The fourth emigration of Kägys to this country occurred about the year 1818, possibly a year or two earlier. It appears that about this time one Simon Kägy, b. in Zeiningen, Switzerland, in the year 1778, and his wife, whose maiden name was Ursula Jeck, were m. in Switzerland in 1801, as appears from a marriage certificate, which being translated and appended hereto will be of interest to their descendants and the general reader.

It appears that about the year 1818 Simon Kägy, his wife, Ursula, and a son about 10 years of age, accompanied by a brother of Simon's, left the fatherland for America, and that during the voyage the father and mother both died, leaving the son and his uncle remaining. They landed in New York. The captain of the vessel took the son (whose name was John B. Kägy) home with him. The uncle (whose name we have not been able to learn), is said to have settled some where in Pennsylvania.* It was clearly understood that Simon Kägy had uncles in this country many years before he left the old country and the name of one "Rudolph Kägy" was frequently mentioned in some old papers that were in the son's possession, for many years after his arrival in this country, and were yet in existence a few years ago. A singular thing in the old papers above referred to is the orthography of the name, which was Cagi. This may have been done by a clerk or scribe, who was not acquainted with the true orthography, as the son, John B., always spelled his name Kägy. His sons have added the e and a g, and like all other superfluous letters, added to it only destroys its simplicity and renders its proper pronunciation more uncertain.

CONTRACT OF MARRIAGE.

Simon Kegi and Maria Ursula Jeck, both of Zeiningen, having resolved to be united in matrimony, have, on the 4th of Sept., 1804, agreed upon the following conditions, to hold good after the consent of the civil authorities and the priestly blessing shall have been obtained, to wit:

1. The father of the groom promises to the bride 150 francs. As to the property of the father and mother of the groom, consisting of a house and land, it will come into their use and possession after the decease of the father.

2. Should the father of the groom fall into a lingering illness, and the groom and bride show themselves querulous and ill-tempered towards him, the father shall have the right to take to himself another friend, and to bequeath to that person a share of his property, at his discretion.

3. The father and mother of the bride promise to the groom 150 francs. As to the remaining property of the bride's parents, they shall receive their share of it, after division.

4. The properties thus settled shall, after the decease of the parents, form one possession.

5. Should there be issue of the marriage, then at the death of either husband or wife, the inheritance in real estate and movables shall go to the children of the first marriage. It shall be divided into two equal portions, one half to be given to the children of the first marriage, the other half to the surviving husband or wife.

6. Should there be no children, and the groom die before the bride, without heirs of his body, the bride shall have after his decease the maternal property, in real estate and movables; also the half of the house; in all things the half shall be delivered to her.

7. Should the bride die before the groom, and without heirs, if the father and mother of the bride are still living, the groom shall, at their decease, inherit her entire interest in their property, both real estate and movables, to possess and enjoy.

All of which is here subscribed to by the contracting parties.

RHEINFELDEN, Sept. 12, 1804.

When John B. Kägy arrived at a proper age he learned the trade of a mason, and it is said that he built the first stacks for the Beuna Vista blast furnaces in Centre Co., Pa. At one time he ran a line of canal boats on the old Pennsylvania Canal in the eastern part of the State. John B. Kägy was a small man, very active in all his movements; he had black hair, black eyes and dark skin. He fell dead from heart disease in about the year 1847 or 8, and was about 41 years of age at the time of his death.

The dates of birth of Simon Kägy's four sons are as follows:

Vinzeng, b. in 1805.

John B., b. in 1809.

Anton, b. in 1811.

Simon, b. in 1815.

In the record the name is spelled Kegi, but we have given it Kägy.

It is positively certain that two of these sons are dead, viz: John B. and Simon. What became of the uncle is not known up to this time; he is supposed to have died without issue; this is, however, only conjecture. Maybe, perhaps in future years, some wandering sheep of his tribe may find his way into the family fold; if perchance his gaze should be directed to these pages, or possibly the future historian of our people may be able to remove the doubts and uncertainties that hide so much from our view, and make all things clear.

4. DAVID H. KEAGGY was b. in Indiana Co., Pa., Feb. 26, 1842; worked on a farm until he was 16 years of age, and then went to Allegheny City, Pa., in 1858, and was in the employ of the Fort Wayne Railroad when the war broke out; enlisted in 1861, and was discharged Aug. 1, 1865; he served in the army and navy with credit and won distinction.

David H. Keaggy stands 5 feet 11½ inches high in his stockings, weighs 160 pounds, is as straight as an arrow, agile as a boy of 15, has dark curly hair and gray eyes. There is a most striking resemblance between his family and the sons and grandsons of Rudolph Kägy who came to America in 1764. Independent of this resemblance, there is not only legendary, but documentary proof that the families are more closely allied to each other than either of them are to any of the other branches of the Kägy family in America. The documents above referred to were given into the hands of a Philadelphia, Pa., lawyer, to establish title to some expected fortune in the old country. The lawyer died and the papers, deeds, etc., were lost and with them all claim to the estate.

David H. Keaggy has had an eventful life. His youth was spent upon the farm until his sixteenth year. He then engaged in railroading five years on the Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad as freight and passenger conductor and served three years on the Pennsylvania Railroad in the same capacity. In the latter part of 1861 he enlisted in the 123d Regt., Co. H, Pa. Vol., as fifth corporal, and participated in all the battles in which his regiment was engaged up to the battle of Gettysburg. At Fredericks-burg he was wounded in the leg, but only flesh wounds. After the Gettysburg fight he returned home, and soon afterward enlisted in the United States Navy as ensign on board the United States volunteers dispatch boat, and was also a short time on the iron clad "Neoshia," and participated in several naval engagements. He was mustered out of the service Aug. 25, 1865, with a record of which he may justly be proud. Mr. Keaggy has been a merchant, then farmer, then merchant, then an oil prospector, auctioneer, landlord, horse dealer, and is now the superintendent of his deceased uncle's (H. G. Lomison) estate at Greensburg, Pa., now the property of his younger brother, who inherited it by virtue of his uncle's will. The estate is valued at $700,000 dollars. In 1867 he married a daughter of John J. Henderson and the widow of Henry Shafer, and to them were born three sons: John B., b. Oct. 27, 1886, and David H., b. April 16, 1890; the eldest son, D. H., Jr., was b. Oct. 27, 1876, and d. April 16, 1880.

5. HENRY L. KEAGGY was b. in Indiana Co., Pa.; m. Maggie Parks, and is a locomotive engineer, and for years ran on the Pennsylvania Railroad between Pittsburg and Altoona, Pa., and is now in the employ of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Company. They have two sons: Charles B. and William T., and a daughter, Clara, b. ———; m. to J. W. Mulette.

1. Charles B. was b. ———, 1868; he was killed on the railroad in 1891 in a wreck; three more young men were killed at the same time.

2. William T., b. in 1870.

Henry L. resides at Albuquerque, New Mexico.

6. JOHN B. KEAGGY was b. in Indiana Co., Pa., and is a doctor of physics, resides in Allegheny City, Pa. He was m. to Carrie Grim. No issue.

The knowledge and skill of Dr. Keaggy won for him a large practice in a city where the best medical skill was to be had. He was and is yet a close student and keeps pace with every advancement and new discoveries in his profession. Some years ago he came into the possession of a princely inheritance, estimated at $700,000, from an uncle, Dr. Lomison, of Greensburg, Westmoreland Co.

BOOK SIXTH.

The sixth emigration of the Kägy name occurred some time in 1893. When one Henry Kägy came from ———, Switzerland, and located for a while at Ouray, Colo. He is about 45 years of age at this time (1899), and is married, but whether he has a family or not, I have not learned. All my efforts to reach him by letter has failed. I am indebted to Mrs. Nettie (Kägay) Gravett, a daughter of Rudolph Kägay, of Bremen, O., for this information of him. She then (1898) resided at Ouray, Colo., and met Mr. Kägy at her home. She says he was a very intelligent and estimable man, spoke four or five languages fluently, and was highly respected by all who knew him. Mr. Kägy is a tailor by trade. We regret our inability to give a better record of this Kägy.

THE KAGY FAMILY REUNIONS.

The first reunion of family, gathering that year was G. O. by the Kagy's took place at the beautiful home of Dr. Isaac Kagy at Vero, Ill., near Tiffin, Seneca Co., O., on the 15th day of Jan., 1884, and was an informal meeting held by the friends residing in the immediate neighborhood of Vero, of the State residents of John Kagy, Sr., the venerable father of the doctor. The meeting was a most enjoyable one, and while the hour will not be forgotten by those whose good fortune it was to be a participant on that happy occasion.

On the 14th day of Nov., 1884, a much larger gathering was held at the beautiful home of Judge John B. Kagy in Jendish of H. Isenstadt Salem, Maine Co., Ill. At this meeting it was determined, and recommended, to form the Great Biographical Association, which has for its object, the collection of data of the various branches of the Kagy relationship, compiling, editing, and publishing the same in book form.

The meeting was called to order by John B. Kagy, who welcomed all to his home in some very appropriate remarks. Dr. Isaac Kagy, of Tiffin, O., was elected temporary chairman and addressed the relatives as follows:

"Friends and Kindred: We have convened here to-day at the pleasant home of our brother to make incursion into the biographical history of the Kagy family. We greet you all with the salutation of friendship and love, and bid you a hearty welcome. Five families in the land have answered to the great numbers and have become so widely disseminated throughout the world, as has that one whose name we bear. Originating in Switzerland, in the dim vista of departed centuries, our ancestors scattered throughout Germany, where, we are informed, their posterity reside in great numbers, and from which country they, or representatives of them, emigrated into this country in the latter part of the sixteenth or the beginning of the seventeenth century, and became the formations of the family in America. Reunions of large families are becoming the order of the times, and the Käggs are not the last to imitate the good example and to reap the golden harvest of benefits the practice affords.

Perhaps the people of no civilized nation on earth are so migratory in their habits as Americans. This character of our people grows out of the peculiar conditions and institutions of our country. Our is comparatively a new country; its first settlements were made on the Atlantic seaboard, where the early emigrants to this country, including our kindred, began the stupendous work of carving out of the primeval wilderness of a continent, a new civilization. As the colonies became more and more populous gradual encroachments were made upon the boundless forest that surrounded them and upon the race of the barbarous red men, which inhabited them. Thus following westward the "Star of Empire" families became divided and sub-divided, led in this direction by the promptings of interest, and driven in that by imperious necessity, it was often the case that families were gradually estranged and finally lost to one another. To some extent is this the case with the Kägg family. To remedy the melancholy evil resulting from such estrangements, so far as we may be able to do, to search out the lost tribes of the family; to bring back to the natal hearth and banquet, the wandering prodigals, to feed the sheep, recovered from their wanderings from the flock, upon the luxuriant pastures of filial love, and to bear in our bosoms the tender lambs of the fold and direct them in virtue's blissful ways, is the chief business of this reunion. Here we seek to form new acquaintances, to renew old associations, to greet the living with love, and with sublime reverence to honor the dead. Many causes conspire to make it necessary that accurate family records should be kept. I will mention some of them. So far in our history there have not been great fortunes amassed by Americans, but the events of the times demonstrate the fact that in the near future fortunes of considerable amounts will go searching for lawful claimants, and if the indifferent habits and careless practices of our people continue it will be difficult, if not absolutely impossible, for lawful heirs, removed only a few generations from the ancestor, to establish their identity and prove themselves entitled to inherit. If there were a fortune of say twenty, sixty or a hundred millions of dollars discovered as the estate of some of the old Kägys of not more than one hundred years ago, is there one of the unknown thousands of the Kägy race who could establish his claim on the ground of unbroken lineal descent? Such a state of uncertainty should not be permitted to exist in any family, and I hope the evil will be remedied by the persistent efforts of those who have engaged in the good work so far as the Kägys are concerned.

Another of the serious consequence to the family growing out of the estrangement and consequent non-intercourse is the change and final loss of the family name. Names become gradually corrupted both in orthography and pronunciation, so that in the course of time they become quite another and different name. Whatever may have been the original spelling of the name Kägy. Certain it is that it has become corrupted, there are now at least a dozen different ways of spelling it, by branches of the family, that are known to be intimately related. I believe it is agreed on all sides that the original German spelling was Kägy, which is the orthography employed by the oldest living members of the family. This evil should be corrected in the family record, which we are here and now taking steps to make. The research into the antiquity of our family has enabled us to glean from various authentic sources, and to rescue from the dire vortex of oblivion, fragmentary evidence that the American stock of the Kägy sprang from Switzerland. Their early habitation in this country undoubtedly was in the state of Pennsylvania, whence some of them emigrated into Virginia, one of them into Canada. From these distributing points they gradually spread into nearly all the States and Territories of the Union, in obedience to the divine injunction, "to multiply and replenish the earth." We expected representatives here—some of them have come—of several branches of the family which only a few years ago knew nothing of the existence of one another.

Thus have our labors been crowned with signal and gratifying success in searching out our kindred and fanning into life the smouldering embers of consanguinity.

Family reunions are beneficial and deserve to be encouraged because they bring kindred immediately or remotely connected, often unseen and sometimes almost unknown, into intimate and hallowed communion with one another. They serve to dispel the lowering night of brotherly estrangement, and usher in the holy light and genial warmth of friendship's cloudless day.

These reunions are the family conclave, at whose sacred threshold all the antipathies, the bickerings, the asperities of human nature are laid down and forbidden to enter. Here we put away the chalice of worm-wood and gall that are wont to embitter the sweet and pearling fountain of terrestrial joys; the deadly upas of hate shall not poison the air of our habitation. Here we lay down the armor of our warfare; we banish from this hallowed home all cares and vexations of business and hush the muffled sound of discontent. Here we cultivate the amenities of life, and fling abroad the genial sunshine of fraternal affection, and lay upon the altar of each impulsive heart, the holy incense of love. Here in this reunion, in this fraternal home, we are gathered from the sunny fields of the South, from the icy moorlands of Switzerland, from the hills of the East, and the boundless lawn of the West, from the snow-capped mountains of the Pacific slope, and the sun-gilded hills of Virginia. We are here represented in the broken accents of infancy. In the vivacious sports of hopeful youth, in the ripe years of manhood and womanhood, with hand still upon the helm of the barque of life to stem the storms and tides of adversity, and guide her into the haven of security. Here we have the aged with feeble limbs and faltering step and tottering pace, the silvery hair and snowy beard, at once the insignia and inheritance of patriarchal age. This is our family—to its delightful and holy communion we bid you welcome. Our family! What a portentous word is that! What deep significance! The family is the school of morals. Here the unfolding infantile mind receives its lesson of right and wrong; here are instilled into the growing understanding those hallowed principles of justice, mercy, love and truth, meekness, patience and obedience, which elevate and ennoble the human character. The home is the council chamber of the family; here by means of checks and chastisements wisely tempered with love and mercy, on the one hand, and with instruction in virtue's ways on the other, are the young qualified for the active duties of life. The family is the promoter of civilization. History tells us that the first step in the grand march of mankind up out of the labyrinthian darkness of barbarism, toward the glittering zenith of civilization, was marriage. The family followed as a sequence and gradually grew in sacredness until the present time. In the family is formed the purest bond that binds us together, the cord of parental affection, strengthened by filial love. From the wholesome radiance of the light of home are evolved by imperceptible degrees all that is dear, all that is pure, all that is cherished as good and revered as sacred, all that elevates the character, ennobles the mind, chastens desires, and purges the heart. . This is our family! See that your duty to it is faithfully done."

The chairman then appointed the following-named persons a Committee on Permanent Organization, viz: Lewis H. Kägy, John D. Kägy, Levi M. Kägy. The relatives and friends were then addressed by Luke H. Hite, of East St. Louis, and Charles I. Kägy, of Arcola, Ill.

The Committee on Permanent Organization reported a Constitution, which was adopted as reported, as follows:

Article First. This organization shall be known as "The Kägy Biographical Association."

Article Second. The officers shall consist of a president, three vice-presidents, a secretary, a treasurer, and a committee of five members on biography of the Kägys.

Article Third. The president, vice-presidents, secretary and treasurer shall perform the duties usually incident to their respective offices, and the Committee on Biography of the Kägys shall gather all information in their power in relation to the biographical history of the Kägys, and shall report at the first meting of this Association after their appointment.

Article Four. The officers of this Association shall hold their offices for one year, and until their successors are chosen.

Article Five. The secretary shall record all proceedings of this Association in a well-bound book to be kept for the purpose.

Article Six. The rules governing deliberative bodies generally shall govern the members of this Association at their meetings, but if any contest shall arise, "Roberts' Rules of Order" shall be considered the standard of Parliamentary authority.

Article Seven. This Association shall meet at the call of the president, by and with the consent of the Committee on Biographical History of the Kägys, at such time and place as may be designated.

On the adoption of the Constitution, the following persons were elected officers for the ensuing year:

President, Dr. Isaac Kägy, Tiffin, O.; vice-presidents, Samuel Kägy, Findlay, O., John H. Kägy, Salem, Ill., Charles I. Kägy, Arcalo, Ill.; secretary, Levi M. Kägy, Salem, Ill.; treasurer, Mrs. Dollie Brubaker, Iuka, Ill.; committee on biographical data, Joseph R. Kägy, of Findlay, O., Lewis H. Kägy, of Salem, Ill., Martin B. Keagy, of Wellington, Kan., Abraham D. Kägy, of Arcola, Ill., Samuel Kägy, of Mount Erie, Ill.

After music, adjournment was made until after dinner. The meeting was called to order at 1.30 o'clock, when a photograph was taken of all the relatives present, and afterwards of all persons present. The meeting again being called to order, remarks were made by Rev. T. H. Padgett, of the C. P. church; H. C. Feltman, Levi M. Kägy, Uriah Mills, S. E. Stevenson and Dr. Isaac Kägy. Miss Clara Mourey, upon invitation, treated the audience to a most excellent recitation. After singing a solo by a lady member of the choir and music by the band, the now permanently organized Association adjourned sine die. Thus closed the second reunion of the Kägys.

The Editor of this biography deems it of sufficient importance to give a full report of the business enacted at several reunions, as recorded in the minutes, by the worthy secretaries of the Association.

Minutes of the Third Annual Meeting of the Kägy Biographical Association, held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Spitler, near Bloomville, Seneca Co., O., Thursday, Oct. 8, 1885:

The meeting was called to order by Dr. Isaac Kägy, president of the Association. The secretary being absent, B. F. Siple was elected secretary pro tem. Elder Lewis Seitz then invoked the divine blessing, after which the president welcomed all in the name of the Association in some very appropriate remarks, and then proceeded to address the relatives and friends on the objects and benefits of these reunions of the Kägy family.

Joseph R. Kägy, of Findlay, O., then made a report on such biographical data as he had gathered, after which music was rendered by the Honey Creek Band, and a recess taken for refreshments. The Tiffin News under date of Oct. 16, 1885, says: "According to arrangements a family reunion of the Kägys and relatives met at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Spitler, of Bloom township, Thursday, Oct. 8th. The prospects for a fine day were not very flattering in the morning, nevertheless the arrival of relatives began at an early hour and from 9 a. m. till 1.20 o'clock buggy after buggy halted in front of the beautiful home of Mr. Spitler, and every buggy brought a well-filled basket or two, until it looked as if an army was to be fed. During the proceedings in the house a number of large tables in the yard were loaded with the good things which showed that the Kägys lived in a land of plenty and that while the men provided, the ladies were experts in preparing it for the feast. Mr. Spitler now announcing that dinner was ready, President Kägy marshalled the hosts and arranged them back of and on either side of the tables. Then Mr. Donaldson, the photographer from Tiffin, took a picture of the tables and eating began.

One hundred and thirty-eight ate at one time. After dinner all the relatives were seated on a stage erected for the purpose and photographed in a group. We would say right here that was a grand sight, nearly two hundred relatives. There was seen the highest types of physical manhood, towering intellect and ability, men whose ringing eloquence has been heard on many occasions; women whose beauty and virtues grace the land. There were present two hundred and four, all relatives of the Kägys, but about ten. We could not, if space would permit, give the names of all present, but will give the names only of those from a distance: Jos. R. Kägy, wife and mother, from Findlay, O., Thomas and William Kägy of North Bristol, O.; John C. Kägy, wife, son and daughter, of Ashland, O.; John H. Kägy and wife, of Salem, Ill., and Judge John B. Kägy, the silver-tongued orator, of Salem, Ill., a brother of Dr. Isaac Kägy, accompanied by his wife and little daughter.

This was an occasion long to be remembered by all present, and should we ever have another opportunity to attend a Kägy family reunion we will try to be there."

The Association being called to order, the report on "biographical data" was taken up and completed, and the relatives were addressed by Joseph R. Kägy, of Findlay, O.

The constitution of the Association was then read by the president, followed by the election of officers of the Association for the next ensuing year, as follows: President, Dr. Isaac Kägy; vice-presidents, John H. Kägy, of Salem, Ill., Samuel Kägy, of Findlay, O., and Charles I. Kägy, of Arcola, Ill.; secretary, Levi M. Kägy; treasurer, Mrs. Dollie Brubaker, of Iuka, Ill. Joseph Kägy, of Findlay, O., Lewis H. Kägy, of Salem, Ill., M. B. Keagy, of Wellington, Kan., Franklin Keagy, of Chambersburg, Pa., and Samuel Kägy, of Mt. Erie, Ill., were elected a committee on "biographical data."

When, on motion, the Association adjourned sine die.

Minutes of the Fourth Annual Reunion and Meeting of the Kägy Biographical Association, held at the Baptist church, Prairie Summit, Marion Co., Ill., Sept. 29 and 30, 1886:

The Association was called to order by the president, and the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. On motion of John B. Kägy the rules were suspended and Franklin Keagy, of Chambersburg, Pa., was unanimously elected president of the Association for the ensuing year. On motion of Dr. Isaac Kägy, John H. Kägy, of Salem, Ill., Samuel Kägy, of Findlay, O., and Charles I. Kägy, of Arcola, Ill., were unanimously elected vice-presidents of the Association. On motion of Joseph R. Kägy, of Findlay, O., Levi M. Kägy was elected secretary. On motion of Dr. Isaac Kägy, Mrs. Dollie Brubaker was elected treasurer of the Association for the ensuing year. On motion of John B. Kägy, the following-named persons were unanimously elected a committee on biographical data, viz: Dr. Isaac Kägy, Tiffin, O.; Mrs. Anna M. Wayland, of Hawkinstown, Va.; Joseph G. Keagy, of Hanover, Pa.; Joseph B. Keagy, of Johnstown, Pa., and Joseph R. Kägy, of Findlay, O. The secretary then read letters of regret from several of the relatives and also a letter from Jacob Kaegi, of Ruppen, Switzerland. Joseph R. Kägy then read a historical sketch of John Henri Kägi, famous for his connection with John Brown in the raid on Harper's Ferry, Va., in 1859, followed the newly-elected president, who had the singular fortune of having boarded at the same house with Brown and his men during their stay in Chambersburg, and who was personally acquainted with both of them, but by their assumed names of course, which was I. Smith and John Henri. Dr. Isaac Kägy then made some remarks on the work to be done by the Association and was followed by Joseph R. Kägy, who also spoke on the same subject.

A motion was made, seconded and carried authorizing the president to appoint a committee of three to arrange a program for the next day, Sept. 30, 1886, and Dr. Isaac Kägy, Joseph R. Kägy and John H. Kägy were appointed. Some remarks were then made by Wm. B. Keffer as to the place of holding the next reunion, when, on motion, the Association adjourned to meet at 9 o'clock the following day, Sept. 30th.

FRANKLIN KEAGY,
President.

LEVI M. KÄGY,
Secretary.

The second day's exercises commenced, Dr. Isaac Kägy acting as president, and after a song was sung he delivered the address of welcome. The minutes of the last meeting of the day before were read and approved.

Franklin Keagy (a member of the committee on biographical data), then made a lengthy report of the data he had gathered, during which a recess was taken for dinner, and a picture of the relations was taken. At 2 p. m. the Association was again called to order by the acting president and after a song by the relatives, Franklin Keagy resumed his report, and at its conclusion another song was sung, after which addresses were made by Joseph R. Kägy, Wm. B. Keffer, Joel Spitler, Rudolph Kägy, John B. Kägy. The Omega Cornet Band then rendered a selection, followed by a song, "Twenty Years Ago," sung by Mr. H. T. Pace. At its conclusion, Christian Kagey, of Corunna, Ind., addressed the relatives, and the meeting adjourned by singing the doxology.

FRANKLIN KEAGY,
President.

LEVI M. KÄGY,
Secretary.

The Fifth Kägy Reunion was held at the home of Dr. Isaac Kägy near Tiffin, Seneca Co., O., Oct. 5 and 6, 1887.

The Sixth Kägy Reunion was held at the home of Jacob Sager, near North Bristol, Trumbull Co., O., Sept. 26 and 27, 1888.

The Ninth Reunion of the Kigy family at Dayton, Rockingham County, Va

The Seventh Kägy Reunion was held at Valley View Springs, in Shenandoah Co., Va., at the foot of the grand Massanutten mountains, Sept. 5 and 6, 1889.

The Eighth Kägy Reunion was held at Prairie Summit Baptist church, Marion Co., Ill., Sept. 29 and 30, 1891.

The Ninth Kägy Reunion was held at Dayton, Rockingham Co., Va., Aug. 21 and 22, 1894. The trustees and officers of the college tendered the use of the buildings on the occasion and deserve the grateful thanks of our people.

The Tenth Kägy Reunion was held at Dr. Isaac Kägy's beautiful home near Tiffin, O., Aug. 21 and 22, 1895. This was a double reunion of the Kägy and Martin families, and one of the most enjoyable occasions and happiest events imaginable. Mrs. Kägy welcomed the friends, the Kägys and Martins, in the most charming manner, and with the tenderest regard. We give the address in full. Mrs. Kägy said:

Friends, Relatives and Neighbors: Yielding to the importunities of the committee on program, I am charged with the duty to-day of making the address of welcome. It is with fear and trembling that I attempt to perform the task and I hope you will not view me with a critic's eye, but pass my imperfections by.

Most heartily do I welcome you, one and all, to this the tenth reunion of the Kägy family of America.

Reunions have become the fashion of the times. Reunions of all kinds of societies, of companies and regiments of soldiers are of constant occurrence, while almost every numerous family in the land now holds an annual reunion of fraternal greeting.

These meetings are fraught with very much good and they should be encouraged. They bring together the members of a family from far and near. They are elevating, civilizing, chastening in their tendencies and develop the higher manhood of our nature. Frequent communications with people, with kindred, with old and absent associates warms up our affections; while personal communion purifies our thoughts and garnishes the chambers of our hearts for the indwelling of higher and nobler aspirations.

The Kägys are a numerous family. Few families, indeed, are equally large. They are widely scattered throughout the United States and territories and the Dominion of Canada. Personally they are necessarily strangers. Large settlements of the family were unknown to each other before researches set on foot by these reunions brought them together.

The minutes of the last reunion, read yesterday, made such reference to myself in a resolution passed at that meeting, giving me the credit of being the mother of these reunions, which it would be discourteous to our friends to pass over without notice on my part. I heartily thank the friends who did me the undeserved honor, and I assure them that I am not insensible to the compliment. I little thought that the humble part I took in starting these reunions, which have now grown to such proportions and have become so intensely interesting, would attract the notice of our friends. The circumstances which develop these reunions I will state briefly as follows:

The first reunion was held here in this house on the 17th day of Jan., 1884, that being the eighty-seventh anniversary of John Kägy, our father, who was the patriarch of our branch of the family. In November of that year on the day after the presidential election, father and mother Kägy, accompanied by my niece, Eliza Martin, my husband and myself, started for Salem, Ill., where the second reunion was to be held at the house of Judge J. B. Kägy, on the 20th day of November. Here we were joined by the Areola Kägys and correspondence from other stranger Kägys was read. This was the beginning in earnest of the Kägy reunions.

In conclusion I will say to those who are not already informed, that this is a double reunion. Two large families meet here to-day. In this locality the Kägys and the Martins are very much inter-married. Many of our near connections are intimately related to both families. I welcome the Martins in their flight hitherward. I welcome the dear neighbors who are within our gates to-day; a few of them were the intimate friends and associates of our parents and our selves in youth, while some of them were our comrades and associates in the ephemeral joys of the morning of life. Some few of them I taught their a b c's more than half a century ago. We meet together to-day as kindred descended from a common ancestry, as brothers and sisters of one family! With joy I greet you. With Christian hope and fraternal love I bid you welcome, thrice welcome, to our home.

The response to the welcome of Mrs. Nancy Kägy was made by Dr. Martin Kägy.

The following committee on resolutions was appointed: Dr. Martin Kägy, Somerset; Joseph Kägy, Coshocton; John W. Kägy, Bristolville, O. The committee reported as follows:

Resolved, That we have enjoyed this, the Tenth Reunion of the Kägys, this year held four miles south of Tiffin at the beautiful and hospitable home of Hon. Isaac Kägy and his amiable wife, Nancy (Martin) Kägy.

Resolved, That we return to them our thanks for the courtesy and attention shown the guests, for providing transportation to and from the depot at Tiffin to their home, and that the same attention from Mrs. Martha Derr and others is also deserving of the kind recognition of public acknowledgment.

Resolved, That we thank every one who has lent a helping hand and who has contributed to the entertainment, not forgetting those dear friends who have lent us their presence from their far-off homes in Virginia, Pennsylvania, Indiana and Illinois, and from distant counties in Ohio.

The Eleventh Kägy Reunion was held on the beautiful lawn of Judge John B. Kägy, at Salem, Marion Co., Ill., Oct. 1 and 2, 1897. The event of the occasion was the eloquent address of welcome delivered by Judge John B. Kägy. His house is always open to his friends, but on this occasion his home, his heart, his all was theirs, and it was inspiring to hear his ringing words of welcome; and it justly entitled him as being the "silver-tongued" orator of Marion Co. No less inspiring was the response, either in eloquence, beauty of thought, or word-painting made by the Hon. Luke H. Hite, of St. Louis, Mo., a visiting relative. He was surrounded by many of the friends of his childhood, and his sympathetic, manly nature poured itself forth in most eloquent strains of lofty thought, heartfelt gratitude and fraternal greetings. The Kägy Reunion of 1897 will ever be one of the green spots in the memory of each and every one present.

The Twelfth Kägy Reunion was held Aug. 31 and Sept. 1, 1898, in Bristol, Trumbull Co., O. The first day's meeting was held on the old homestead of Jacob Sager (deceased), where the Sixth Kägy Reunion was held ten years previous. Jacob Sager married Leah Kägy, deceased. She was the eldest child of Jacob and Susannah (Johnson) Kägy, formerly of Shenandoah Co., Va. He was a son of Jacob, the 3d son of Henry from Pennsylvania. The second day's meeting was held on the beautiful park at Bristol. The officials of the Congregational church tendered the use of the church to the friends, which was gratefully accepted. A grand and joyous time was had by all.

Many of the Kägy relatives fear that the publication of a Kägy history will be the death knell of these delightful reunions. Why should this be? It must not be! True it is these reunions were instituted as a means of acquiring data for a "History of the Kägy Family," but that was not the only object sought. Dr. Isaac Kägy beautifully expressed the main and principal purpose of these gatherings in his address to the friends and kindred at the home of his brother, Judge John B. Kägy, on the 12th of Nov., 1884, at Salem, Ill. He said: "Family reunions are beneficial and deserve to be encouraged because they bring kindred into intimate and hallowed communion with one another. Here we cultivate the amenities of life, and fling abroad the genial sunshine of fraternal affection, and lay upon the altar of each impulsive heart the holy incense of love." I hope, I trust that as each one reads the records of their sires and grandsires it will inspire in the mind and heart a fonder and more fervent desire to meet one another. The Editor and Compiler of this history had been at work for eight years or more before he knew anything of the descendants of Rudolph Kägy, of 1764. At the Reunion of the Kägy relationship held at Prairie Summit Baptist church, near Salem, Marion Co., Ill., Sept. 29 and 30, 1886, the Kägy Biographical Society elected him president of the Association, and re-elected him at each annual election held since then until 1898. On the occasion of the Reunion held at Prairie Summit Baptist church, Marion Co., Ill., Sept. 29 and 30, 1891, he was unanimously elected editor of the Kägy History, with the authority to publish it in such manner, form and style as in his judgment seemed best.

CONCLUSION.

When to the common rest that crowns our days,
Called in the noon of life, the good man goes,
Or full of years, and ripe in wisdom, lays
His silver temples in their last repose ;
When o'er the buds of youth, the death wind blows,
And blights the fairest ; when our bitter tears
Stream, as the eyes of those that love us close,
We think on what they were, with many fears
Lest goodness die with them, and leave the coming years.

And therefore, to our hearts, the days gone by,
When lived the honored sage whose death we wept,
And the soft virtues beamed from many an eye,
And beat in many a heart that long has slept ;—
Like spots of earth where angel-feet have stepped,
Are holy ; and high dreaming bards have told
Of times when worth was crowned, and faith was kept,
Ere friendship grew a snare, or love waxed cold—
Those pure and happy times—the golden days of old.

Peace to the just man's memory ; let it grow
Greener with years, and blossom through the flight
Of ages ; let the mimic canvas show
His calm benevolent features : let the light
Stream on his deeds of love, that shunned the sight
Of all but heaven, and in the book of fame
The glorious record of his virtues write,
And hold it up to men, and bid them claim
A palm like his, and catch from him the hallowed flame.

—From “The Ages” by William Cullen Bryant.

To him who in the love of Nature holds
Communion with her visible forms, she speaks
A various language ; for his gayer hours
She has a voice of gladness, and a smile
And eloquence of beauty, and she glides
Into his darker musings with a mild
And healing sympathy that steals away
Their sharpness ere he is aware.

Yet a few days and thee
The all-beholding sun shall see no more
In all his course: nor yet in the cold ground,
Where thy pale form was laid, with many tears,
Nor in the embrace of ocean shall exist thy image.
Thou shalt go to mix forever with the elements,
To be a brother to the insensible rock
And to the sluggish clod, which the rude swain
Turns with his share, and treads upon. The oak Shall send his roots abroad, and pierce thy mould.
Yet not to thine eternal resting place
Shalt thou retire alone, nor couldst thou wish
Couch more magnificent. Thou shalt lie down
With patriarchs of the infant world—with kings,
The powerful of the earth—the wise, the good,
Fair forms and hoary seers of ages past,
All in one mighty sepulchre.
The golden sun, the planets, all the infinite host of heaven,
Are shining on the sad abodes of death.
All that tread the globe are but a handful to the tribes
That sleep in its bosom.
The youth in life's green spring, and he who goes
In the full strength of years, matron and maid,
The speechless babe, and the gray-headed man,
Shall one by one be gathered to thy side,
By those who in turn shall follow them.
So live, that when the summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan, which moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not like the quarry slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him and lies down to pleasant dreams.
